Abigail ventured to the next neighbor's and soon the male inhabitants of the valley assembled. Johnny was brought home by the sisters. The next day Ben was buried; the entire settlement followed the wagon that bore the coffin, as mourners. The white-haired itinerant who ministered on the occasion selected for his text: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." There was not a tearless eye in the assembly. Old and young sobbed aloud, while the three old maids were in a very passion of tears.

Dorcas held Johnny's hand, and led him to the wagon after the service. He became their delight and pride; and although dangerously petted and indulged, has grown up into an honorable manhood, his delight being to cherish his benefactresses in their old age.

The second robber was captured and met a well-merited punishment. It is known that, years ago, one of the tribunals of Justice Lynch was in a dense forest on the headwaters of the One-Hundred-and-Two.—Edward B. Heaton, in Prairie Farmer.

ROME'S FAMOUS CORSO.

No Historic Street in the World That Can Compare with It.

Of all the historic streets the great cities of the world possess, none can surpass, if indeed any can vie with the so-called Corso of Rome. Shorn as it is now of its ancient and medieval glories, it is haunted by trains of memories which consecrate it to every student. In our own times, even in Rome, upstart rivals of modern growth and one in particular, the Via Nazionale—assume to compare with it. It exceeds it in length and in breadth; it has many modern arts and graces and conveniences that the narrow and dear old Corso lacks. Larger and newer buildings are ranged along its sides. Broader paths for foot passengers have there been constructed. Gayer shops with larger windows flaunt their goods and invite the world of purchasers. Tramways have there been laid down, and the sound of the trumpet from the tramway omnibuses warns the carriages and foot passengers to clear the road. All is new, modern and the birth of to-day. But there are no memories there—no gleams and visions of old days and customs and persons such as cling about the narrow length of the old and world-famous street. There are no haunting spirits, no historic reminiscences, no legends of the old, no figures of the past. There is all the difference between these two streets that there is between the gay young girl just entering into life, full of thoughtless gayety and looking forward into the future, and the staid old matron, in her serene age, who lives more in the past than in the present, and who has delightful stories of times gone by, and the glories and splendors of her youth. Could the Corso be incarnated, with what delight should we hang upon her lips and listen to her old world tales, and live over with her the long-vanished past!—Chicago Herald.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

AN EXCELLENT BARN.

Especially Adapted for Localities Where the Ground Is Level.

For economy of space, ease of work, and comfort of animals, few barns are better than this one, which is for situations where the ground is nearly level and where three stories cannot be used. Fig. 1 shows the basement, which should not be over 3 feet below the surface. This affords plenty of sun and light. Large half windows should be plentifully used in the walls in front of the cattle. It will be seen that the hay, grain, roots, water and absorbents are all handy. Water is piped from the cistern and the faucets are just high enough for a pail. The alley at D is just wide enough to pass through with a pail of milk, but too narrow for the cow; the alley E is wide enough to pass with a bushel basket and has a gate. The root cellar, manure cellar and space in front of the cattle should be cemented. The walls between the sill and foundation can be of wood, but brick is better. Fig. 2 nearly explains itself. The grain room is sheathed up all around against the stairs and the walls, and made vermin proof. Chutes lead to the meal chest in the basement. The hay chutes extend from sill to plate with doors on both sides from top to bottom. They are put together so that all will be smooth and even inside. They should be put in two sides B and C so that either bay can be emptied. The horse stalls can be extended the whole length if desired. A pump takes water from the cistern below. There should be at least five large windows in the front end of the barn, one in the grain room, one in the harness room and one in the gable. This will give plenty of light. The barn should not have less than 18-foot posts and if one one wants a great deal of storage room for hay, and is to use a horse hay fork, 20-foot posts are none too high. Ventilators at the ridge should be provided. The hay chutes are ventilators for the basement, where the cattle are, but ventilator shafts should be run from the manure cellars to the ventilators in the roof. The partition between the cattle and manure should be strong and tight, with a door near the outside door. The muck bin is filled by dumping it through a large scuttle on the main floor. I have used a barn of this style for ten years and for my purpose I don't know of a better one. I used a horse hay fork and can land hay at any place I choose.—V. B. Grover, in Farm and Home.

RURAL BREVITIES.

SPECULATION is as dangerous to the farmer as it is to the city man. Getting into debt to buy more land or more implements is generally speculation.

THE horse that is given rest regularly on Sunday will soon learn to know when his holiday arrives, and will appreciate it. Habit is a matter of education. Animals learn the exact time for receiving meals and will appear at regular hours if they have been fed regularly.

THE damage done by moles may be great, but the damage done by the insects destroyed by moles may be greater. No creature should be condemned as injurious until it is known as a fact that it does not confer correspondingly as great benefit as the supposed injury inflicted.

THE Florida Dispatch says: Every farmer who is troubled by moles ought to try a few castor bean plants. We knew an old gardener who was noted for raising vegetables who always had a few dozen of these plants scattered about his garden for the purpose of keeping away moles.

AFTER the flowering season most of the bulbous plants are anything but attractive. These may be lifted as soon as leaves begin to wither, laying them in clumps in a shady place, with some soil over their lower parts, to insure ripening. Store in a dry place until another planting season.

COLD water will absorb, according to the American Dispensatory, about thirty-six per cent. of its own weight in salt, and boiling about forty per cent. This makes what is known as a saturated brine, which always means all the salt that the water will dissolve. In salting butter the brine seldom is made stronger than thirty to thirty-four per cent. of salt.

How to Grow Fruit.

A novice, anxious to learn fruit raising, would do well to select not less than four nor more than ten acres of his best corn land. It ought to be heavy rather than light, well drained, on reasonably high, airy land, but not exposed to sweeping winds. On this plant apple trees 50 feet apart. Peach, plum, pear and cherry trees can be planted in rows intersecting the above each way, leaving the completely planted orchard in rows 25 feet apart. Or small fruit may be planted instead between the apples in rows and from 4 to 6 feet apart. Plant but few varieties and only those doing well under similar conditions. Experiment with no new or wonderful things. Keep to the beaten paths. Devote this land to fruit exclusively. Keep all domestic animals, except poultry, off of it. Manure it every year. Plow it at least once and cultivate it several times each year. Allow no grass or grain to be raised in the orchard except corn while it is young. Prune carefully every year and keep up a vigorous fight against insects and vermin.—P. W. King, in Farm and Home.

RATIONAL FEEDING.

Comments on the Nutritive Power of Rations Given to Horses.

Prof. Leyer, of Paris, asks what constitutes the basis for the rational feeding of a horse? He compares the animal machinery to a locomotive. In a sense this is true, only the rations or fuel which serve to generate vitality or force in the horse and in the machine differ in one respect—that food repairs muscles, while the combustibles or rations for the engine do not repair the machinery. Of the five groups of principles which constitute nutrition, two, mineral and water, may be laid aside, the other three, albumens, fats and hydrates of carbon, sugar, starch, etc., are those that bring energy, that is force and heat or combustion to stimulate the organs to produce that blood whose ultimate output is the development of strength of force, says a writer in Field and Farm.

In the living motor, the organs that most imperiously require a nutritive reparation are the immediate agents of all mechanical effort—the muscles—and it is the tissue of the latter which is next to exclusively composed of nitrogenous substances. Hence, the food known to be rich in nitrogen has been ever selected to impart vigor and endurance to the horse. Now such food is not only costly, but if abused predisposes the animal to blood strokes. A relative nutritive ration is that where the azotized is to the non-azotized nutritive principles as one to six. One part of food or combustible serves to keep the energy of the animal machine under pressure, and the other to animate the heart-pulse by keeping up the circulation of the blood through the processes of respiration and digestion.

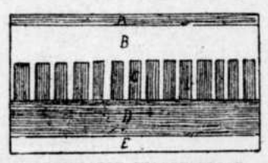
Thus the food ration produces external work or force and internal action or vitality. From experiments made by the 'bus and cab companies of Paris, five-tenths of the total ration is consumed in this external action. Wolff, the eminent German scientist, has been experimenting since 1879—and is still—on the nutritive power of rations. He finds that a horse weighing half a ton will require daily eighteen pounds of oats and sixteen pounds of hay straw in equal proportions to meet the demands of the system for nutritive principals. Bearing in mind that it is not what is eaten which nourishes, but what is digested, only eighty per cent. of the nutritive principals of the oats, sixty per cent. of the hay, and forty-five per cent. of the straw are assimilated. The more work exacted from a horse the more liberally it ought to be fed, and the more rapid its movements the greater period to be given for repose.

IMPROVED STABLE FLOOR.

How to Avoid Mud Holes in Stables Without Board Flooring.

A large number of farmers on the western prairies accept the free services of mother earth as flooring for their stables. They thus secure a floor made by the same hand that created the hoof and one that meets the latter on more friendly footing than hard plank. There are no cracks here for the cold air to work up through; no weak places for a heavy foot to break down, but a solid, seamless bed, and a warm one, too, when covered with straw.

These floors are quite faulty, however, in their crude condition. There are no gutters behind the animals, and the earth becomes soft where the hind feet stand and wears away, resulting in filthy mud-holes. A remedy for this fault is recommended by Charles L.



SERVICEABLE STABLE FLOOR.

Hill, of Freeborn county, Minnesota, who sends us the accompanying sketch. It represents an earth walk behind the gutter; B, the gutter; C, pieces of two-by-four inch scantling bedded into the earth, even with the earth floor, D; E, place for manger or feed trough. The rear ends of the scantling, C, rest on a two-by-four inch scantling set edgewise. The walk, A, is kept from caving into the gutter by a piece two-by-six inches set on edge and held in place by short stakes. The pieces, C, should be from two to three feet in length and slope a little backward. They should be set about an inch apart and the spaces kept cleaned out for drainage purpose. The hind feet have to rest on wood, but the fore feet, which sustain the greater weight, have their floor of earth. Instead of sawn timber, all the pieces may be cut from poles or sticks from the wood-pile. The plan with slight change is good for either cattle or horses. The expense is trifling, and thousands of western stables could be greatly improved by the introduction of this method.—American Agriculturist.

Reliable Smoker Fuel.

After trying many different kinds of fuel for a bee-smoker, I find corn-cobs, cut fine, the best to use, when taking away surplus, says a writer in National Stockman. For all other purposes I like buckwheat chaff the best. A tin strainer is needed when chaff is used, to keep the chaff from blowing out. The only objection to using chaff when taking off surplus, is in soiling the honey. Possibly a fine strainer would prevent this. The coarser part of the chaff is best. It is surprising to see how well chaff holds fire, and the length of time it will burn. I left my smoker in the apiary the other day partly filled. When I discovered it an hour and a half later it was burning full blast, ready for business.

Hints for Swine Breeders.

According to a bulletin sent out from the Wisconsin station, feeding bone meal and hardwood ashes to hogs confined to an exclusive diet of corn and water gives the following results: Where ashes and bone meal were fed the effect was to save about 130 pounds of corn or 28 per cent. of the total amount fed in producing 100 pounds of gain live weight. It about doubles the strength of the bones and 50 per cent. more ash was found in the bones of the hogs getting bone meal and ashes than those that did not receive it.

PROF. MUNCEY tells us that his experience and observation is that the churn overruns the test fully ten per cent. This is encouraging to those who sell by the test. "If all the butter fat gets into the butter, then butter containing eighty-five per cent. of fat will overrun nearly eighteen per cent."

AN AILING ROMANCE.

It Was Golden on Top But Its Feet Were Made of Clay.

The big man was half drunk, and when he leered at the young woman she tried to pass him on the extreme outer edge of the sidewalk. He stepped in front of her and she tried to pass to the other side of him. He was in front of her again and exclaimed:

"Don't hurry, my pretty."

She was about to turn and run when another man emerged from the shadow of a building.

"Hold on there," he said. "What's the matter?"

"None of your business," retorted the first man.

"Well, we'll see," said the second. "You've been annoying this lady."

"Mebbe she's your wife," sneered the first.

"Well, she isn't."

"Or your sister."

"No."

"Or your sweetheart."

"Never saw her before."

"O, you're trying to make a mash, too, are you?"

Pugilists would have called the blow a "beautiful" one, but the kick that followed it would certainly have been declared a "foul."

"O, sir!" cried the young woman, when the smoke of battle had cleared away, "I——"

"Go on home!" exclaimed her champion.

"But, sir, you have——"

"Go on home, I tell you, and don't be chasing around nights again," he interrupted.

"But your noble action," she began again.

"Noble nothing!" he interrupted again. "I've been watching for that man for six weeks, and it's the first time I've found him so drunk that I could smash him without getting the worst of it. Go on home! This was business, not romance. He beat me out of $1.50."

He lit a cigar and sauntered down the street with the air of a man who had settled an outstanding account.—Chicago Tribune.

DRESSING IN A HURRY.

A Man Can Get Ready Much Quicker Than a Woman.

A lady correspondent wonders how her husband and sons can dress so quickly when they are aroused on a steamboat at five o'clock in the morning and told that the boat will soon land and the cars start immediately. She says that she and her daughters find it impossible to imitate the celerity with which masculine toilets are then made. No wonder. In an emergency, a man can dress in less time than anything but a fish; but a woman is like a rose-bush in a thicket. She stands in a little wilderness of clothes. Not one too many, but each separate thing an object of attention, is the mystery of dress, and so, if one is precipitately dressed, with "Not a minute to spare," sounded in her ears and followed up with growing intensity: "Cars ready! You'll be left! Hurry, ma'am, hurry!"—is it strange that she should make a universal buckle of her hand, and, grasping scores of scarfs, collars, tippets, muffs, shawls, make a rush for the train like a smuggler from a customhouse officer? The main thing is to get aboard; the second, to sit down on the first seat in a very smother of laughter at the ludicrous plight! And then, with tact and skill which only a woman could command, to transfer all things to their proper places and uses, in so quiet a way that not another one on the train suspects that a toilet is being made.—N. Y. Ledger.

The Right Man.

After the lights had been turned down and the spirits had rapped several times the medium announced in a sepulchral voice:

"We have a new spirit in our midst to-night. It says it has a strange affinity for some member of the party."

"What's its name?" asked several in awe-struck tones.

There was some more rapping and then the medium solemnly announced:

"It says it was known as Joseph Jacobson when on earth."

"I know it! I know it!" cried a little man in the back of the room, jumping to his feet excitedly.

"Hush," said the medium.

Then there was more rapping and at its conclusion the medium said:

"It says he doesn't know you."

"That's the man!" cried the little fellow. "Put me down as a convert. I never did believe in spiritualism before, but that's the one sure. He never knew me when he owed me money and he borrowed a V just before he died.—Chicago Tribune.

A Sensible Woman

She's putting the washboard where it'll do some good. She has suffered with it long enough; broken her back over it, rubbed the clothes to pieces on it, wasted half her time with it. But now she knows better. Now she's using Pearline—and when a woman uses Pearline, the only way to use the washboard is in the kitchen fire. There's no more hard work, no more ruinous rubbing, but there's washing that's easy and economical and safe.

DELANO DIARY.

—Swedish singers at the City Hall to-night.

—Five o'clock tea this afternoon, at the Methodist Manse. All are invited.

—G. H. Frick, the Minneapolis Journal man was a caller on Saturday He says his paper is flourishing.

—H. Tanner and Fred Jordan of the Waverly Tribune visited Delano on Saturday in the interests of that paper.

—F. F. Chancellor says if the Chilians desire to fight let 'em he had as soon spend the winter in that country as not.

—H. E. Crandall, of Rockford, shipped about 500 lbs. of honey from this point to Pipestone on Saturday. Hank is bound to keep those western people sweet.

—The firm of King, Towle & Vogler, of Annandale claim to have transacted a $57,000.00 business, last year. Read their new card on the first page of this paper.

—H. H. Albachten, the blacksmith is going to move to Lester Prairie next week. Will Grant is negotiating for the shop with a view of carrying on the business here.

—Saturday, Nov. 7th Delano Fair Day. This, it is expected will be a large one as it is the time of year when farmers wish to dispose of what stock they do not wish to winter.

—Baron Von Kruger insists that he is one of the people and must be respected. He says he would like to get married. Gus, you should not bow so profoundly to the ladies as you did last evening.

—Fletcher Ingerson and his two daughters Misses Mattie and Maggie, of Maple Plain, visited Delano on Tuesday. Miss Mattie will begin a winter term of school at Young America on Monnay next.

—R. M. Bohn has taken the agency of the celebrated W. W. Kimball pianos and organs at this place. Those wishing musical instruments from a piano to a Jews harp will do well to call on Mr. Bohn.

—A. F. Corey has wound up his sorghum business for the season. He made 896 gallons. The cane did not quite mature this year consequently the run was not so large and the quality not up to grade.

—Willie Kubon, one of the GAZETTE apprentices who has been working in Minneapalis is up on a visit having been obliged to lay off for a couple of weeks on account of injuries to his hand received while engaged in press work in the city.

—The first quarterly meeting for this conference year will be held at the M. E. church in Delano on Saturday Oct. 31, and Sunday Nov. 1. Presiding Elder John Stafford will be present, and will preach on Sunday evening after which the Lord's Supper will be administered. Quarterly conference Saturday afternoon.

—The M. E. church sidewalk needs repairs but it is kind of funny to note that the Eagle Editors who wrote it up so strongly live in glass houses. The church of the chief, in Delano, has no sidewalk, while the church of "hold Hingland" of the associate editor is not even built yet. Don't be so hard on those Methodist brethern.

—Fanning mills, patent fences and many other things to help catch the farmers' pennies are on exhibition almost every day in our village by traveling men. Patronize home firms if you can get what you need and you generally can. Then if your purchases do not prove to be as represented you can find the seller and have matters adjusted.

—The Eagle of last week makes quite a spread in an article headed "Democratic Thunder Spoiled" and quotes one of our local dealers as having said "I can produce bills for goods lately received that will show that I am buying nails, bar iron, tinware and stoves just as cheap and in some instances cheaper than I ever bought them before".

William Henry Eustice, the silver tongued orator, at the late Republican opening of the campaign at Buffalo undertook to make some comparisons and after mentioning that pint tin cups were but 1 mill each in advance of old wholesale prices said "this makes no difference to us the retail price is what interests us". Evidently there is some discrepency between the Eagle's authority and the silver tongued orator who essays to inform the public on these matters. The Hon. Cushman K. Davis had figured that the advance in price on tinware would not cost the average man over 50cts a year to aid in the establishment of the home tin industry, admitting that there was a raise. But then what's the use in multiplying authorities against the Eagle's endeavors. And if tin really is as cheap and in some instances cheaper, did the McKinley bill make it so? And if so how? Has any body seen any tin made in this country yet?

--The Swedish Singers are said to give a fine entertainment. Hear them to-night at the City Hall.

Miss Adie Nelson, of Minneapolis, visited Delano on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Kerr and their daughter Inez visited Delano friends the past week.

Fred Brandes attended the meeting of the Catholic Benevolent Society as a delegate. They met at Stillwater, last week.

Another Old Settler Gone.

Calvin Steward, one of the oldest settlers in the big woods died on Saturday at home in Rockford where he resided for the last couple of years. He was born in Vermont and came to this town in 1856 where he made his pioneer cabin home, afterwards erecting a comfortable frame house both of which are still to be seen on the Buffalo road about a mile from Delano. He was a great fisherman and when other people could get no fish "Uncle Cal" was sure to catch plenty. He was known as an upright, honorable man. His funeral took place in the M. E. church at Delano on Monday, Rev. J. R. Davies conducting the ceremonies. He leaves a wife, one son, Calvin, and five daughters, Mrs. Robeck, Mrs. James Quinn, Mrs. Ic. Murphy, and Mrs. William Murphy of this vicinity and Mrs. Philip Matter of Springfield, who have the sympathy of the community.

County Cullings.

The Waverly TRIBUNE says of the Wright County TIMES, "The TIMES is an adept at making its exchanges say what they never thought of saying". This is not the TIMES first offense, and if the TRIBUNE is treated as we were after calling the attention of the TIMES to the offense before, she will be dropped from the list of the TIMES' exchanges. We were.

Hanover is the newest village in our part of the country, the voters determined at an election held there on the 9th inst. to incorporate. On Saturday last their first village election was held resulting in the choice of officers as follows:—For President, Jacob Vollbrecht: Trustees, Hubert Zaun, George Weiss, William Siefert: Recorder, W. H. Vollbrecht: Treasurer, L. W. Haefer: Justice, M. Weier, Jr.: Constable, George Strunk. The licence money to be derived from the two saloons it is understood, will be used for building a fine new school house, in the village.

Vollbrecht Bros., of Hanover, being bound to keep up with all competitors, have, recently, enlarged their already popular mill, and still rank among the best in their line.

The Waverly correspondent of the Eagle says Adrew Bertram "informs us that David Cochran is a candidate for Congress on the Republican ticket in Virginia, and that he is stumping his district making rousing Republican speeches." The Eagle then, being also a recent convert to that faith, so she says, might find a splendid opportunity to repay Dave for some of his earnest efforts in Wright county, on behalf of the young Democrrtic candidate for Register of Deeds a couple of decades since. One good turn deserves another, Old scores should be paid. Nothing is baser than ingratitude. What's the matter with taking the old bird down to Old Virginian's mountains to help Dave 'lectioneer for the G. O. P. Eagles are more at home among the snow capped heights than they are in leveler regions. Good Bye, if you are off.

The Eagle intimates that "the powers that be" in the Democratic party are striving to join the GAZETTE and Tribune into one publication with headquarters at Waverly. We don't know how the Eagle got its information but suspect it made it as it does much of its "knowledge". Mr. Tanner and Mr. Jordan called in Saturday while in town and promised us that before the bargain was completed they would let us know. The Eagle would no doubt be glad to have the GAZETTE out of her way so that she could soar unmolested over the heads of Wright county people and especially Delanoites, and pick upon and abuse the unprotected and oftentimes innocent individuals in our community. Oh no, old bird. You can't run Delano nor the Democratic papers of the county any more. You have lost your grip on both. We are of the belief that the Eagle is not in with the Democratic people of Wright county now-a-days. If you wish to know anything about the GAZETTE send on your dollar for a years subscription.

County Commissioners.

The County Commissioners held a meeting at the county seat Oct. 22.

Resolutions were introduced appropriating to the town of Franklin $250. South Side $125., Corrinna $37., Silver Creek $100. on roads and bridges.

A resolution was passed directing the treasurer to visit the towns of the county in January and February 1892 for collecting taxes.

Sealed bids for furnishing wood at the court house will be received at the January meeting. Body maple 50 cords 24 in. long and 30 cords 20 inches long to be delivered before April 1.

Printing bids will be received in January.

Petition for vacating Ziebarth's road rejected.

Bids for making new sectional tract and village indexes will be received Several petitions and bills were acted upon.

A Great Man.

That man is great, and he alone,
Who serves a greatness not his own.
For neither praise nor pelf:
Content to know and be unknown,
Whole in himself.

Strong is that man, he only strong,
To whose well-ordered will belong,
For service and delight,

Establish right.

And free is he, and only he,
Who from his tyrant passions free,
By fortune undismayed,
Has power upon himself to be
By himself obeyed.

If such a man there be where'er
Beneath the sun and moon he fare,
He cannot fare amiss;
Great nature hath him in her care,
Her cause is his.

November Elect

Seven out of Eleven States go Democratic.

On Tuesday the long looked for elections came off in eleven states, seven of them Iowa, Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Mississippi, Maryland and Virginia going Democratic, while South Dakota, Nebraska, Ohio and Pennsylvania elect Republicans.

Governor Russell, of Massachusetts, or Boise, of Iowa, may be placed on the Democratic ticket for Vice President, while Governor McKinley of Ohio, will loom up as a possible candidate against Grover Cleveland for President.

From the St. Paul Daily news we take the following concerning the voting States:

Virginia—Half of her Legislature.
Iowa—State officers and Legislature.
New Jersey—Part of its Legislature.
Massachusetts—State officers and Legislature.
Mississippi—Three Railway Commissioners and Legislature.
South Dakota will choose a Representative for the First Congressional District.
Maryland—State officers and Legislature, and votes on six constitutional amendments.
Nebraska—Associate Justices of the Supreme Court and two regents of the State University.
Ohio—State officers, Legislature and votes on amendment to constitution for uniform taxation.
New York—State officers, Legislature, Supreme Court Justices and Representatives in Congress.
Pennsylvania—State Treasurer and Attorney General, and votes on constitutional convention, and elects delegates to the same.

If silver is a "commodity" and not fit to base our money on who made it so? It used to be considered good enough until lately.

Ohio don't seem to have quite fought her fight to a finish yet. John Sherman and Foraker and Foster are to have a triangular bout.

Troubles do not come singly. South America is having hers, Chili is in, and now Brazil is said to be divided and a revolution pending.

Some of the politicians claim that something more than "protection theories" and "tin horns" were used to persuade the "buckeyes" to support "Bill" McKinley for Governor.

Englishmen are claiming that the Baltimore acted as a spy against the congressionalists is a reason for the misuse of her sailors at Valparaiso. No excuse for the mistreatment they have been reported to have recieved.

Considerable is being said about Mr. Allen, of Ohio, who is said to have spent the best of his days and fortune in securing the Homestead Law, being himself, now, in his old age, without home or friends and living in a poor-house. It seems as if each holder of a homestead might contribute to a fund to keep him in comfort his remaining days.

New York people gave the Democratic ticket a majority of their votes after all the howling of Republican papers and orators about the Tammany Hall Democracy. It looks as if the New York voters either did not consider the Democrats so bad as they were pictured or they considered the Republicans so much worse that they preferred to remain with the Democrats.

Ignatius Donnelly is out in a long interview in the St. Paul Globe, in which he makes some severe thrusts at those not on his side of the late great suit against the Pioneer Press. Mr. D. is a good arguer, and some of his reasons seem to be pretty clear in explaining certain points. He ends up by saying, "A man cannot serve God and Mammon. I could not defend the farmers without incurring the hate of the wolves that are preying upon them. I glory in such unpopularity."

SOCKS FOR MR. M'KINLEY.

His Tariff Leads an Irish Lad to Make Him a Present.

Samuel D. Frew came to this country from Belfast, North Ireland, six years ago. He liked American climate and the American people, but he could not endure American stockings. He longed for the comfortable, home-knit hosiery of old Ireland. And so finally he wrote to his mother in Ireland to send him some stockings. She was glad to please her boy, and so she knitted six pairs of Irish stockings and sent them to her son.

But she didn't write about them, for she wanted them to be a surprise and the first young Frew knew of the matter was when a bulky document arrived from the custom-house. It was as follows:

Samuel D. Frew to the Marris European and American Express Company, custom-house brokers and forwarding agents, Dr.:

To specific duty on one pound manufactured wool at 49½ cents	$ .60
To ad valorem duty on articles valued at $2, at 60 per cent	1.20
Reimbursements, charges and freight	.50
United States bonded storage and labor	.21
Cartage, shipping, or delivery	.25
Postage, etc	.05
Custom-house entries, etc	.70
Total	$3.21

When Frew looked at the bill he thought the custom house was at fault; so he went home and hunted up a tariff book and figured out just what the tariff ought to be. Here is the way he made it:

Ad valorem duty on articles valued at $2, at 40 per cent	$ .80
Specific duty on one pound manufactured wool at 35 cents	.35
Total	$1.15

Frew went back to the express office indignant at the thought of being so imposed upon, and handed the clerk the bill as he made it out. The clerk looked at it and laughed. "Oh, that was the old tariff bill," said he. "This other bill is made out according to Mr. McKinley's new tariff laws."

"You wont accept my bill, then?" said Frew.

"No," answered the official.

Frew thought for a moment. Then he called the clerk aside and whispered confidentially:

"You tell that d——d McKinley that he can have my stockings."

The stockings are still at the custom house, and after the expiration of the required time they will be sold at public auction as the Astor dresses were.—New York World in Swift Co. Monitor.

CORRESPONDENCE

ANNANDALE.

Rev. Higgins held morning and evening services in the M. E. church last Sabbath, also a service at Silver Creek in the afternoon. He announced that Presiding Elder Stafford would be here on Friday and Saturday of this week when the Sacrament of the Lords Supper would be administered.

Dr. Ridgway, assisted by Doctors O'Connor, of Maple Lake, and Mumford, of Kimball, last Monday amputated an arm for Mr. Kenneday, the town site owner of Kimball. The operation was in consequence of a disease of long duration and the cut was above the elbow. We learn the patient is doing well.

Geo. A. Magoon late of South Haven has rented the Pleasant Lake House of M. C. O'Loughlin and is already in possession. We bespeak good entertainment for the public and a lively business for the proprietor.

The barn and contents, of Martin Futrell of Southside was destroyed by fire last Tuesday morning. Loss $300 or $400.

Peter Greene has the job of putting in the foundation for Dr. Ridgway's new building on Oak Avenue and has it nearly done. Peter says he ought to be at home working on his farm but that the Doctor had a mortgage on the last kid, and that won't do you know.

John H. Burt has been appointed administrator for the estate of James M. Pratt.

Left over.

Mr. W. O. Sterling who presides at the carving block in the meat market of the Lewis brothers has been notified that a pension has been allowed him. We congratulate the old gentleman.

Elder Ringer has moved into his new house lately erected on Oak Avenue extension. May they live many years to enjoy it.

Mrs. J. H. Graft has opened millinery rooms in the building formerly occupied by D. C. McCrory for a general store. As she is a person of a good deal of culture we bespeak for her a prosperous business.

The masons have completed the job of veneering McGuire's store and we understand that the rooms on the second floor are already let, a part of them to banker Herrick and the rest to the Kotham sisters, dressmakers.

The Huntingtons have the contract for the lumber for Rennie's block.

L. R. Williams and Elder Higgins were out duck shooting again last Tuesday and brought home with them a large hamper full of—disappointment.

We were sorry to learn that our friend Paul Heberling lost a valuable horse last week, but then it is his loss and nobody else's, and he can replace it without mortgaging his farm.

Our Republican friends are very much engaged "nailing Democratic lies". One of the last is proving, by Blaine himself, that he did not mean what he said when he denounced the McKinley bill. Oh fudge! Why not deny that he wrote the letter, and be done with it, as he did the Morey letter and as he did to cover up a scandal deface his child's gravestones and then deny it. Verily, verily, I say unto you James you talk too much and too soon.

ST. MICHAELS.

Mr. J. C. Neiss and Miss Barbara Eull, old residents of Frankfort were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, at St. Michaels Church, on Wednesday, Nov. 4. Rev. Father Deusterman celebrated High Mass, conducted the marriage ceremony and preached a fine sermon. Miss Mary Zachmann and Miss Katie Eull were bridsmaids and Mr. Joseph Eull and Mr. Andrew Brixius were groomsmen. After the ceremony the guests assembled at the residence of Mr. Anthony Vetsch where they partook of a bountiful repast they then repaired to Haffner's Hall where dancing and other amusements were indulged in. Max Nelles as a "culled man" was a grand success, and did his share towards entertaining the guests. The newly married couple were the recipients of many valuable presents among them a nice table and chairs from the St. Joseph's Society of which the groom is an honored member. About 200 people were present and all join in wishing the new family a long and happy life.

"E Pluribus Unum."

Mr. Durr has his new store building enclosed.

J. C. Neiss will occupy the new residench of his brother Adam.

The slate roof is being put on the new church.

William Barthel's team ran away on Thursday and smashed the wagon.

WATERTOWN WAYS.

Next Monday is our monthly fair day. This will probably be one of the largest of the season if the weather is good.

Hon. H. J. Peck and wife of Shakopee were seen in Watertown last Thursday.

Mr. Braher, of Minneapolis, formerly of Watertown was up last Monday on business. He came as a witness in the Barth—Campbell lawsuit.

The St. John Bros. have purchased the well outfit of J. C. Edwards and will hereafter be on hand to put you in a first class well if you so desire.

Mr. George Cunningham went to Hutchinson last week and left his order for a new well auger and will soon be ready to proceed to business again.

A verdict was rendered in favor of the defendent in the law suit between Mr. Barth and Mr. Campbell.

Mr. Michael Ray and Mr. Burk, the new hotel firm took possession of the Jennings Hotel last Monday. We wish them success in their new enterprise.

Mr. Patrick Cawley, of St Paul, is visiting with his brother, the Rev. Father Cawley, this week.

Michael Dugan the traveling man from this neighborhood was seen on our streets on Wednesday last.

County Commissioner J. F. Boylan is doing official duty at Chaska this week.

A little baby of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Carlson died with meningitis last Thursday and was buried Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Carlson have the sympathy of the community in this their bereavement.

INDEPENDENCE.

The signs of the times indicate to a casual observer that the political arena of this country is in a boisterous attitude at the present time. Different party cliques and clans are aspiring to get control of the government from the President of the United States down to Road Supervisor. The greed of office and the spoils thereof is a temptation too strong for the average American to resist let his politics be what they may. To-day is being fought in Ohio the great battle between the Campbellites and the McKinleyites. The leaders are able men and no doubt the fight will be interesting. It is a fight for low or high tariff. One might say that this howl and cry is only a scarecrow hung up in the midst of the political camp to frighten the people into line in favor of high protection.

Some people have just found out that silver is no good for money any longer after having it for mors than a century. The silver dollar of 412½ grains with the alloy was a standard dollar in this country for 80 years, now the cry goes up from the moner lords of this country "Away with your silver it is only a spurious coin." Silver is at par with gold in France, and always has been and so it would have been in this country if it had not been demonetized in 1873. It makes a fellow tired to hear men talking against silver as a lawful standard for money when perhaps they haven't fifty cents in their pocket. Silver has always been the poor man's money and always will be and that's why the money lords want to crowd it out. They tell you it is a commodity. So it is, but give it a free coinage and then it will not be. Gold is decreasing while silver is increasing and that is one reason we want free coinage.

A certain hardware dealer in Wright County says the McKinley bill has not raised the price on stoves, bar iron, nails, etc. etc, and the man that says so just simply lies and if you will only send the man to him he will show by his bill that the man is mistaken. This man must have been making a large margin on his hardware before if the McKinley bill could not effect him any on hardware. But it seems too bad that poor McKinley wasted so much paper and brains just for nothing if his bill neither creates nor destroys. Such talk sounds like sounding brass or a tinkling cymble. They also say a tariff is not a tax but the supreme court of the United States in the case of Brown against the State of Maryland unanimously announced that a duty on imports is a tax that is paid by the consumer. Is this not good authority. Now we should like to hear these deciples of the McKinley bill give a better solution of their favorite hobby.

But time would fail us to tell "of Gideon and of Borak, of Sampson and of the prophets" so will leave the subject for the more prudent and wise.

Last Saturday should think the wind blew at the rate of about 40 miles an hour, must have been very cold in the northwest corner of the state.

John Cain had a house raising last Friday. He will move into Independence in about two weeks. Mr. Cain was once a resident of Independence years ago.

Died in Independence at her son-in-law's Dave Cox's on Thursday, Oct. 29, Mrs. Mary Fogleman, age 84 years and ten months. Mrs. Fogleman was one of the early pioneers of Independence coming here in 1855 and settled in the Eastern part of town. Her husband died a year or two ago. She leaves three daughters one son and many friends to mourn her loss.

Some of the Nimrods are still hunting ducks.

Last Saturday afternoon was covenant meeting at the Independence A. C. church and last Sunday was communion service.

A. Richards, of Buffalo attended church in Independence last Sunday. He and his mother Mrs. E. Richard started for Phoenix, Arizona, yesterday.

The Prohibition Club meets at the Town Hall Armstrong to-night. Local talent will be largely represented at the meeting, it is free for everybody. This is their first meeting. They will have them once every month hereafter.

Dr. O. R. Fassett, of Rockford, made a professional call in Independence last Sunday. Old Mr. Klaperich is very sick and not expected to live as he is getting along in years being upwards of 80 years old.

The Rockford meat man drives through part of Independence about twice a week.

A good many of the farmers have quite a lot of corn to husk yet. Corn is much better than was expected.

Would say for the benefit of the Editor of the GAZETTE that his paper comes to us regularly every week with good readable news and we have confidence in the Doctor's ability in keeping the paper up to 100 per cent, that being the average standard.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31, 1891.

"If Steve Elkins enters the Cabinet" said a republican who knows his man well, it will be to help Blaine and not to help Harrison as some people suppose. Elkins has more political irons in the fire than any man I know and you may be certain that he would not be willing to neglect them even temporarily if there were not some big political scheme to be worked up. Those who talk about his selling out Blaine for a cabinet appointment simply expose their ignorance of the real relations between the two men—Elkins belongs as completely to Blaine as it is possible for one man to belong to another in this country, and, remember what I say, I do not believe that Elkins will go into the Cabinet, but if he does, it will be to help Blaine lay out brother Ben."

There seems to be a hitch somewhere in the selection of Secretary Proctor's successor, as it is now announced that he may not leave the Cabinet until just before Congress meets. Some people are unkind enough to say that it is merely the natural thrift of the man, which causes him to wish to retain an $8,000 salary as long as possible before giving it up for one of only $5,000.

A scapegoat has been found for the loss of the U. S. S. Dispach, while on her way from New York to Washington, by the naval court of inquiry now sitting at Washington. It is the glass lens of the lantern of a light-house, which according to the testimony of Lieut. Noel, executive officer, made a light which should have shown white appear red, which caused him to change the sailing course which had been laid by the Commander before he went to bed. It has not yet been decided what, if any, punishment shall be meted out to the direlect lens.

Another Southern city will be honored if some of the narrow minded breed do not cause Secretary Tracy to change his mind about naming Cruiser No. 9, the sistership to No. 10 launched at Baltimore day before yesterday, which has been named Detroit. Mr. Tracy has almost promised that No. 9 shall be called Mobile.

A number of National banks in different parts of the country are doing business in violation of the law, by failing to substitute interest-bearing government bonds with the Treasurer of the United States as security for thier circulation, in place of the 4½ per cent bonds so held, which have ceased to bear interest. The Secretary of the Treasury has been easy with these offenders because he hoped to be able to persuade them to continue their expired 4½ per cents at 2 per cent, which would make them available as security for circulation. This is a little thing comparatively but it gives an idea of the scheming done by Secretary Foster to get money to meet the obligations of the Treasury as they mature. So far he has succeeded, but it is no secret here that he very much dreads the future when he shall have completely drained even all of the small sources of supply.

Having made public its demands upon the Chilian government on account of the mobbing of American sailors at Valparaiso and been answered by Chili's note of defiance, the administration is now trying to discover the proper way out. Senor Montt who represented the Chilian Junta here for some months past, has been notified by cable of his appointment as minister to this country. After two attempts he suceeeded in getting an interview with Secretary Blaine, who declined to recognize him as the representative of Chili until he presented his credentials.

Boss Clarkson is again in Washington and he struts around as though he had in his inside pocket a reciepted bill of sale of the entire administration. Russel Harrison who is also here, is quite chummy with Clarkson and it is difficult to say which of them is the greatest man in his own estimation.

Secretary Blaine has now been in Washington almost a week, but the sun rises and sets just the same as before his return. He may control the Republican party but that is about as far as he can go, and even that is going to be disputed with him unless all signs fail.

Mrs. Thompson, of South Carolina, wife of the Democratic member of the Civil Service Commission, has been elected president of a ladies organization formed for the purpose of raising money by entertainments and otherwise to aid needy and disabled ex-confederate soldiers.

Owing to this being the closing week of the State campaigns prominent democrats are mighty scarce in Washington.

It is not sin of the arm, or of the head, or of the foot that dams the soul, but the sin of the heart. Not the doing of sinful things, but the loving of sin itself.

A FIRM in New York is manufacturing self-winding clocks.

NOTWITHSTANDING the general impression that "money talks," did you ever notice how quiet it is in a bank?

BISHOP GAINES, of the African Methodist church in Georgia, was once a slave and owned by the brother of Bob Toombs.

IT is the country's misfortune that so many young men have stopped raising corn on the old farm and crowded into cities to raise umbrellas.

THE company that made an attempt to present "Abraham Lincoln" on the stage has been disbanded, the play proving an utter failure.

IT is only when a man runs out in his shirt sleeves to split kindling wood on an early morning and sees the empty coal bin that he realizes that the backbone of summer has become unglued.

THE census returns show that Utah has a population of 207,905, a gain in ten years of 63,942. Salt Lake City has 43,843 and Ogden 14,889, both having more than doubled their population in the last decade.

E. A. WHITE, of Boston, who died recently, left about $500,000 to his widow and an umbrella to his daughter's husband. Though thus provided with something to put up for a rainy day the daughter is to contest the will.

MONTANA is shown to be an excellent stock country notwithstanding an occasional hard winter. The ordinary loss is less than 6 per cent. The state had on its ranges at the date of the census 750,000 head of cattle, 33,000 horses and 493,000 sheep.

THE Boston Transcript says that "any boy born in this free republic may one day be president of the United States; but if he wants to get into the common council his chances of success are vastly better if he has taken the precaution to be born abroad."

THE war records board report that twenty-one books of war history have been printed during the past year and four more put in type. This brings the history of the military operations in putting down the rebellion to the close of the Wilderness campaign.

THE Chicago Tribune says: "We know Secretary of State Pearson to be a good and careful man, and the fact that he has issued a license to the Trierischer Unabhaengiger Brueder Bund, of Chicago, is a guaranty that there is nothing dangerous or explosive about it."

THE Chilians should have some of the conceit taken out of them. It would not be a bad idea to put their army on board some of the American vessels, bring it up here and let it see what kind of a country this is. Perhaps, after taking measurements and looking over a few statistics, the Chilian officers would go home and conclude that it is not necessary to be so warlike after all.

IN all this commotion over American pork abroad how fares the American bean, and pray what is the status of American hominy? When our French, German and Italian cousins have once tasted the composite richness of the hog and hominy of the south and sniffed the savor of the pork and beans of Yankee land statutes will be powerless to wean them. Let our commercial missionaries teach them the combinations at once.

AN interesting incident showing at how great a distance a conversation can be carried on in the arctics is related by Lieut. Foster, of the third Parry arctic expedition, in which he says that he conversed with a man across the harbor of Port Bowers, a mile and a quarter away; and it has also been asserted on good authority that at Gibraltar the human voice has been distinctly heard at a distance of ten miles.

THE average Atlantic steamer is manned by about one hundred and fifty men as follows: Thirty-two deckhands, four officers, nine petty officers, thirty-two firemen, etc., eight engineers, and sixty-five stewards. The master and chief officials—that is mates, engineers—are chosen by the owners or managers, while the remainder of the crew are chosen by the captain. First-class ships muster from twelve to fifteen men in each watch, and all of these are shipped as seamen.

IN San Francisco a few days ago a curious and important seizure of contraband opium wss made on the coast steamer Lakme from Seattle. The custom house officers received a "tip" that she had the drug on board, but a careful search failed to reveal any. In the steward's room one of the inspector's became impressed with the picture of a variety actress on the wall. He said it looked so much like a friend of his he was determined to take it. In cutting it from the frame he was astonished to find a large cavity in the wall, from which he extracted 172 of the choicest Chinese opium.

THE swindling endowment orders now have completely collapsed in Massachusetts, and the insurance agent of that state has made an estimate of the harvest reaped by their officials. They had high-sounding names, offered glittering allurements, and one after the other have gone the usual way of these swindling concerns. The average life of these institutions has been about six months, and in that time all that has been put in by the subscribers has been taken out by the officers in salaries. The insurance commissioner estimates that 50,000 persons have lost an aggregate of $3,000,000 in this short time.

PENNIES seem like dewdrops—you can't keep track of them. Last year the Philadelphia mint coined 94,000,000, and the stamps are still working. One may get a notion of the number of pennies lost from the history of the old half cents. Of these 800,000 were issued a few years ago. Where are they now? A few are in the cabinets of coin-collectors. None have been returned to the mint for recoinage, and nobody sees them in circulation. Of the old copper pennies 119,000,000 are unaccounted for, save occasionally a specimen. There are more than 3,000,000 bronze two-cent pieces somewhere.

FOREST fires were doing great damage in the vicinity of Vernon, Ala.

IT was reported that the Chilian minister of foreign affairs had sent a dispatch to Minister Egan relative to the Baltimore affair couched in conciliatory terms and evincing in every way a desire to see that justice was done as soon as the inquiry in Valparaiso was concluded.

THE ELECTIONS.

McKinley Elected in Ohio, and Flower Carries New York.

SOUTH DAKOTA GOES REPUBLICAN.

The Democrats Capture Massachusetts, New Jersey, Maryland and Virginia. Iowa Claimed by Both Sides.

The State of Ohio

COLUMBUS, Nov. 3.—At midnight Gov. Campbell concedes the election of McKinley by 15,000 plurality.

Chairman Hahn has been present at Republican headquarters during the entire evening, and has had his clerks hard at work figuring upon every return that came in. He said at 11 o'clock:

I have not the slightest reason to change my estimate of Ohio going Republican by at least 20,000. Every return strengthens my belief. I lay claim to the legislature and three close Democratic counties, Hardin, Hancock and Paulding, which have heretofore been Democratic and which I held in doubt, have been won by the Republican candidates for legislature. The entire Republican ticket will be elected.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 3.—One correspondent of the Enquirer telegraphs from Columbus that Chairman Neal, of the Democratic state central committee, concedes McKinley's election by 10,000 plurality, and the election of a Republican legislature. Another Enquirer correspondent from the same city telegraphs that Gov. Campbell concedes McKinley's election by from 15,000 to 20,000 plurality, and the legislature Republican in both branches.

New York.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Roswell P. Flower was elected to-day as governor of New York to succeed David B. Hill. His plurality is estimated at between 18,000 and 24,000. Fassett did not carry Elmira, his own city, Flower beating him there by 504 votes. This city gave Flower 58,000 plurality and Brooklyn gave him 14,000.

The vote in this city to-day was very light. It had been expected that out of the registration of 261,532 at least 240,000 ballots would be polled. But only about 220,000 persons voted. In the Hill-Miller campaign more than 261,000 votes were cast. Comparatively, Flower ran as well as Gov. Hill, whose plurality was 69,000, and who was elected by 19,000.

Flower will take to the Harlem river 75,000 plurality. It is doubtful if Fasset will bring down 50,000 to meet it.

Iowa.

DES MOINES, Nov. 3,—Reports of the election have been slow in coming in, due largely to the heavy vote polled and the late hour of closing the polls. An increase in the vote is shown in almost every precinct. Up to 11 o'clock the 100 precincts which had reported, gave Wheeler (Rep.) 13,485; Boies (Dem.) 12,081. The same precincts two years ago gave Hutchinson (Rep.) 11,535; Boies, (Dem.) 10,631, a Republican gain of 1,459, making a net gain of 200 for the Republican ticket. Boies' plurality two years ago was 5,438. At the present rate of gain Wheeler would not be able to overcome this plurality. The total number of precincts being 1,941, but the first precincts reporting are mainly from the cities.

Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 3.—At midnight returns from twenty-one counties, including Allegheny but exclusive of Philadelphia, show a net Republican gain of 1,648 for Gregg (Rep.) for auditor general, and about the same for Morrison (Rep.) for state treasurer.

Philadelphia county returns are coming quite slowly, but one-fourth of the wards being in. These indicate, however, that the Republicans will carry the city by about 20,000, and that the Repuclican majority in the entire state will be not less than 40,000.

South Dakota.

HURON, S. D., Nov. 4, 1 a. m.—Returns from over one-half the county seats in this state and other large towns gives Jolley (Rep.) almost an even half of the total of the 15,842 votes reported from 160 towns. Jolley has 7,734, Woods 3,329, Smith 4,779, considering the small vote and the general neglect of the Republicans, this showing is much better than was expected; it is so good, in fact, that the Republicans have no doubt of Jolley's election by from 3,000 to 5,000.

Massachusetts.

BOSTON, Nov. 3.—On account of the new law passed by the last legislature, requiring votes to be counted by two different officials in order to secure correctness, the returns are coming in more slowly from all sections of the State than ever before, although the electorial machinery has neve rbeen in more perfect condition than in the present elections. The Journal and Advertiser, both Republican, concede Mr. Russell's election, but place his plurality at not more than 3,000 at the outside. The Republicans elect balance of ticket.

New Jersey.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 3.—The Democrats will have a majority in both branches of the legislature.

At political headquarters of the Democrats in this city the claim is made that Democratic senators have been elected in Hudson, Hunterdon, Middlesex and Sussex counties. The Democrats also claim to have elected forty assemblymen in the state.

Maryland.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 3.—Election day being a legal holiday, banks, exchanges, markets and municipal and state government offices were closed. The election of Frank Brown for governor by a very complimentary majority, and also the rest of the Democratic ticket is conceded.

Kansas.

TOPEKA, Nov. 4.—Only minor officers were voted for yesterday in Kansas. Despatches from various counties show that the Alliance did not hold its own throughout the state. Returns come in slowly.

A LITTLE VARIETY.

THERE are 5,000 Japanese in San Francisco.

A GOOD camel will travel one hundred miles a day for ten days.

THE gauge of the Roman chariots two thousand years ago was four feet eight and a half inches—same as standard railroad gauge of to-day.

A CHARLOTTEVILLE (Va.) man was a few days ago sent to jail for stealing ten cents' worth of corn fodder. It required two men to arrest him and cost the state ten dollars for the proceedings.

BAD MEN AT LARGE.

Tennessee Miners Liberate More Convicts —The Oliver Springs Prison Stockade Raided and Burned and Its Inmates Freed.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 3.—The state of Tennessee is confronted by the most serious situation of any in many years. East Tennessee miners, aided by miners from Kentucky, not only have released the 305 convicts at the Briceville and Coal Creek branch prisons and burned the stockade at the former place, but increased the gravity of the offense Monday by setting free the 155 convicts at the Oliver Springs branch prison and laying the stockades, hospital and other buildings in ashes. Not content with this defiance of the law, they talk of attacking the branch prisons at Tracy City and Inman and setting free the 422 convicts at the former and the 260 at the latter place. So far 461 criminals have suddenly been freed, given citizens clothing and aided to make their escape, most of them into Kentucky. Concerning the rumors of a contemplated attack upon the Tracy City and Inman prison the information received by Mr. E. B. Wade, superintendent of prisons, who is now at Knoxville, was such as to cause him to telegraph the state board of prison inspectors and ask for authority to employ extra guards at these places. The board met and promptly granted the desired authority, and the forces at Tracy City and Inman will at once be increased.

The mines at Oliver Springs have been operated by the Cumberland Coal Company, which, fearing trouble, placed extra guards on duty, but as was the case at Briceville and Coal Creek but little or no resistance appears to have been made when 200 armed and mounted men rode up to the stockade at 1 o'clock Monday morning and demanded that the prisoners be turned over to them. The night was dark, and for a time there was great confusion at the stockade, men hurrying hither and thither. Upon getting possession of the stockade the mob quickly released all of the convicts, and after providing nearly all of the prisoners with citizens clothing ordered them to leave at once. The order was obeyed without hesitation, the convicts fleeing in every direction. The mob then set fire to the buildings and in a few moments dense volumes of smoke curled up and made the heavens blacker. Then came the flames and speedily the country for miles around was lighted up by the burning pile. The mob, gloating over their night's work, yelled and fired their guns and pistols and after a while rode away, and before day dawned had separated, each going his own way. In the meantime the convicts were far away, many having crossed the Kentucky line, while the remainder had scattered like sheep.

The Columbia Coal Company estimate their loss by the destruction of property at $15,000, without a dollar of insurance. The company, like those at Briceville and Coal Creek, had been expecting trouble until the recent meeting of the miners at Briceville, at which time the miners had apparently concluded to give up the contest and make strong appeal to the next legislature to abolish the lease system. After the attack on the Briceville and Coal Creek prisons the guards were strengthened, but the miners had determined to finish the work in that portion of east Tennessee, and accordingly moved on Oliver Springs with the result stated. The lessees of the convicts have refused to pay the usual reward of $25 for the capture of escaped convicts on the ground that they did not escape but were forcibly released. Mr. Baxter, president of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company, the lessees of the convicts, said in regard to the best mode of settling the trouble, that he did not see what the governor could do but use his utmost endeavors to recapture the convicts and bring to justice the participants in the riots. The state board of prison inspectors has received a dispatch stating that a large majority of the convicts had escaped into Kentucky, but that eight had been arrested and started to Nashville.

Gov. Buchanan has offered a reward of $25 for the capture of each of the convicts that have escaped and $5,000 for the arrest and conviction of the leaders in the releasing of the convicts and the destruction of property. It is supposed that in addition to the Tennessee detectives who will endeavor to effect the capture of the leaders in the insurrection the large offer will induce some of the most skillful officers in other states to engage in the dangerous work. That it will be attended with danger there can be no doubt, as the leaders are backed by thousands of miners and sympathizers. Besides the reward offered for the leaders there is also one of $250 each for the apprehension and conviction of men participating in the recent riots.

The fact that the work of arresting these men will be exceedingly hazardous is shown by news received from Campbell county Monday. It is said that a deputy sheriff in that county who took two escaped convicts into custody were overtaken by a number of men, supposed to be miners from Newcomb, who released the convicts and took away the deputy sheriff, since which time nothing has been seen or heard of him, and the supposition is that he met with foul play.

CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH.

Three Little Ones in Illinois Meet an Awful Fate.

WARSAW, Ill., Nov. 3.—In the absence of Mrs. Eliza Riley, colored, her house was destroyed Monday by fire. Her two grandchildren, aged 3 and 4 years, who had been locked in the house by Mrs. Riley while she went on an errand, were burned beyond recognition.

QUINCY, Ill., Nov. 3.—Two children of John Oswald were playing near an open fire Monday when the clothing of one, a girl 18 months old, caught fire and she was burned to death.

Can't Bury Their Dead.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 3.—A harrowing story comes from the province of Samara. The peasants are so reduced by starvation and want that many of them are unable to go even to the government distributing points for supplying food. In one village no less than forty-two have perished, and the number of dead in the whole province will amount to not less than 1,000. The survivors in most instances are too weak to attend the burial of the departed and officials are compelled, much against their will, to inter the remains.

CHILIAN BRUTALITY.

Further Reports Showing Their Atrocious Fury Toward the Baltimore's Sailors.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2. — The only Chilian news received Sunday was in the form of a cipher dispatch dated Valparaiso Saturday. The dispatch reads as follows:

"VALPARAISO, Oct. 31.—SECRETARY OF THE NAVY:—Petty Officer Johnson, in whose arms Riggen was killed, declares that the act was done by the police guard. Apprentice Williams reports that he was arrested by a mounted policeman, who placed cat-gut nippers around his wrists and started his horse into a gallop, throwing him down. After that the policeman walked his horse. Coalheaver McWilliams was arrested and taken to prison with a lasso around his neck. He was bitten in the arm after arrest. Coalheaver Quigley, while trying to effect his escape from the mob, was struck with a sword by a police officer. Apprentice Talbot was arrested, and on the way to prison he was struck repeatedly by the police. Petty Officer Hamilton, dangerously wounded and unconscious, was dragged to prison. One of my people, trying to make him comfortable, was threatened with the butt of a musket and made to desist. My men in prison were examined secretly, although I sent an officer to the court to request authority to allow his presence. The request was denied on account of the proceedings being secret. Before discharge my men were required to sign a paper, and before doing so Rinehart asked a court official the meaning of the paper. He was informed that it was a mere form, stating that the signer was not engaged in the trouble. Two men are dead, three are dangerously wounded and about fifteen are slightly injured. Surgeons believe the wounded out of danger. "SCHLEY."

Secretary Tracy will call the attention of naval officers to the fact that they should maintain a discreet silence as to the ability of the United States navy to wipe out Chili. Ever since the Chilian trouble began naval officers have been expressing their views freely as to our ability to bombard Valparaiso, land a marine force and take Santiago, and various other moves. But Secretary Tracy is of the opinion that such expressions are in very bad taste. They are cabled to England and to Chili and have the effect of placing this country in a bombastic attitude which the secretary does not wish us to occupy.

SANTIAGO, Nov. 2.—The political atmosphere remains about the same. There is no change in the strained diplomatic relations existing between the United States and Chili. The junta still contends that the police of Valparaiso were in no way to blame for taking the sailors of the Baltimore into custody nor for their subsequent treatment.

The members of the American colony are on the qui vive for some sort of an ultimatum from the United States to the junta. Even in official circles it is evident that some such step is expected, and there is consequently great excitement in that and other circles.

The United States legation has again been placed under police espionage. The reason for it is not known, but the police are keeping as strict a watch over it as they did when the question of the legation's right to afford asylum to political refuges was under discussion. The only reason that can be given for this action is that the Chilian officials are desirous of keeping fully posted with regard to persons leaving or visiting the legation. The members of the legation are very much annoyed by this last move.

Such members of the junta as are here continue to express the strongest feeling against the United States. A prominent member of the new government who holds a position in the cabinet, in an interview in regard to the dispute between the two countries, spoke in a most unfriendly manner concerning America and Americans. He was particularly severe on United States Minister Egan, whom he bluntly accused of trying to provoke a war between the United States and Chili in order to secure glory for himself. On the other hand, it is asserted by persons conversant with the particulars of the difficulty between the two countries, that Minister Egan has done nothing whatever in the matter on his own responsibility, all his actions being guided by orders which had been sent to him from the state department at Washington.

VALPARAISO, Nov. 2.—Senor Arlegui, the intendente of this city, has given Capt. Schley, of the Baltimore, his positive assurances that the officers and sailors of that United States warship will be afforded all possible protection in case they should come ashore. At the same time, in view of the present state of affairs, he will not offer advice in regard to the advisability of permitting any of the Baltimore's crew to land. While Arlegui will not commit himself by an expression of opinion on the subject, it seems clear that he deems it best that no such attempt should be made for the present.

The intendente has asked American Consul McCreery to request Capt. Schley to furnish Judge Foster, who is conducting a secret inquiry into the outrage, with a copy of any testimony obtained by him, so that it may be used by the court. Many Americans believe that the authorities desire to proceed in good faith.

So far the United States government has been acting only on ex parte cable versions. It is only just and right to await the evidence taken by the Chilian court of inquiry before proceeding to extreme measures. There is a strong belief that the better men in the Chilian congress will vote in favor of reparation as soon as that body meets this month.

FOUR CANADIANS DROWNED.

A Party of Boys from Midland, Ont., Upset in a Squall on the Lake.

MIDLAND, Ont., Nov. 2.—A sad drowning accident occurred Saturday night whereby four boys between the ages of 12 and 15 lost their lives. They are: John Clarkson, son of A. E. Clarkson; Peter Hewis, son of Davis Hewis; Leo Johnston, son of J. P. Johnston, and William Alliston, son of William Alliston, all of Midland. The boys left home yesterday afternoon in a sail boat to cross over to Present island, and when returning about 4 p. m. were caught in a squall, which upset their boat.

Death of H. A. P. Carter.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—H. A. P. Carter, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary from Hawaii to the United States, who had been for two weeks seriously ill at the Everett house, died there Sunday. He was suffering from a complication of diseases affecting the vital organs, but the immediate cause of death was heart disease.

HINTS FOR THE HOSTESS.

Something Entertaining and Novel in the Way of a Phantom Party.

The successful hostess has in readiness a mental programme for the entertainment of her guests. That is, she will have the evening's amusement planned before the arrival of her company. If it be a "german" or "card" party no planning of the nature will be necessary. But there are many who approve neither of dancing nor of cards and when pastimes of this character are not to be something else must be provided.

One who frequently entertains is ever eager for something new and original. A "phantom" party may be old, but renovate it with a "web of fate" and it is both original and unique. A detailed description of the phantom costume would be superfluous. All it calls for is a large sheet, pillow-case and mask. By arranging the pillow-case over the face the mask may be dispensed with for the sake of comfort.

Costumed in this spectral drapery the hostess receives her guests. No words are exchanged. She makes them welcome by gesticulation, and motions them to their respective toilet-rooms, whence they soon emerge donned in a similar attire.

Upon being ushered into the parlor or reception room, each phantom is given the end of a string, which, as he winds, it leads him to his fate, unraveling to him his mission in life. This "fate" is a mystic roll of paper on which is written his destiny, or the mission he is to fulfil. The amusement of this feature is greatly heightened if the hostess be familiar with the various "hobbies" of her guests. She is thus enabled, with the aid of an accomplice, to give to each guest the string which will reveal to him his own especial fad. These "fates" or "missions" should be written in a highly humorous style. This will prove a vast field for ingenuity. Should the pen of the hostess lack in fluency in this respect, she may have recourse to quotations with almost equal effect. The productions of Pope and Shakespeare are most prolific in lines of this nature.

The strings all differ in color and should start from a web of all the strings, suspended beneath the folding door or from some other conspicuous point. Each string takes a varied and roundabout course, over pictures, bookcases and doors, down the wall and along the floor, through numerous rooms, up and down the stairs, through the windows, out under the trees in the garden, etc. The strings have a common starting point, but each leads to an entirely different quarter. They are fastened along their course by means of small pins. Each string must be of a decided and different color, that it may easily be traced in its windings. Wrapping twine, which comes in such beautiful shades, is preferable for the purpose. The strings must all be of equal length, as a prize is awarded to the one first finding his mission. A booby prize may also be given. Twenty yards will be found quite long enough for each string. A convenient mode of measuring, to obtain fairly equal lengths, is to give a certain number of wraps around a board of a foot or so in width. It must be admitted that it is quite an undertaking to perfect all arrangements connected with a "web of fate," but the pleasurable result will amply repay the hostess for her labor. Of course this is all done "a la pantomime," not a word to be uttered.—Chicago Herald.

A Neat Compliment.

A gentleman in Fargo, who recently returned from a trip in the East, speaks of his trip as follows: "We took in the magnificent day boat ride from New York to Albany, and enjoyed the luxury of the New York Central Limited and other famous trains, but I want to say for 'The Northwestern Line'—C. St. P. M. & O. Ry., that the most elegant, convenient and absolutely comfortable cars we rode in was on their Vestibuled Gas Lighted trains from St. Paul to Chicago. I had not been on 'The Northwestern Line' for a long time. This time I started without being influenced by the Agent and was so pleased with my good judgment in selecting 'The Northwestern Line' that I want to give it and the line a free puff."

The famous Vestibuled Limited carrying magnificent new style Pullman and Wagner Sleepers leaves St Paul at 7:30 p. m. daily, and makes the trip to Chicago in 13 and ½ hours. The fast daylight express leaves St. Paul at 7:50 a. m daily, and makes the trip in 13 hours and 40 minutes and makes connection with all trains East and South.

You can't believe some dealers always. They want to sell the medicine that pays them the largest profit. What you want to buy is the one that does you the most good.

Which one is it?

Sometimes, it may be a matter of doubt. But, in the case of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, there's no room for doubt. It's a matter that can be proved.

With the facts before you, it's an insult to your intelligence to have something else offered as "just as good."

And here's the proof: Among all the medicines that claim to cure woman's peculiar weaknesses, irregularities, and diseases, the "Favorite Prescription" is the only one that's guaranteed.

If it doesn't do all that's claimed for it, if it doesn't give satisfaction in every case, you'll have your money back.

There's strength and vigor for every tired and feeble woman, health and a new life for every delicate and ailing woman—and if there's no help, there's no pay.

THE MAIDEN'S CHOICE.

Two youths once lived in a country town,
And one was a giant fair
With a Saxon viking's golden crown
And a blacksmith's muscles smooth and brown
When he made his right arm bare.

The other youth was of dapper size,
So slender and short was he
That he found small favor in maidens' eyes
And the giant boasted in merry wise:
"I could lay him across my knee."

These twain both courted the village belle,
But short was the race they run;
At the giant's feet the maiden fell,
And the little man, though he pleaded well,
Naught more than her pity won.

They marched away to the wars one day,
In haste for the battle's van,
And the people cheered when the giant gay
Strode stoutly past for the distant fray
And they smiled at the little man.

But the earliest ball by a foeman sped—
One drop from the war-black skies—
Passed safely over the pigmy's head
And the giant, who stood behind, fell dead
With a bullet between his eyes.

Then the little man swore, though his sight was dim,
And he bounded ahead of them all,
And the whole great army followed him
Till he leapt like a devil lithe and slim
First man o'er the battery wall.

And he planted the flag of his country there
While the routed enemy ran,
And the legions roared, as it floated fair
On the dusky waves of sulphurous air;
"Three cheers for the little man!"

Oh, I do not know, and I cannot say,
What the giant might have done,
But I'm sure the maiden will weep alway
For her lover shot in the first of the fray,
And dead ere his fame was won.

For war is a field of chance, you know,
Let him dodge the bullets who can;
But love is a garden where fancies blow
And the form of a giant makes larger show
Than the soul of a little man!

THE SMALL BOY.

Something About a Very Needful Institution.

The small boy is an institution in himself and we like him.

The most beautiful sight in the world (to parents) is the dear little fellow when he has just donned his first pair of trousers and stands with head erect and both chubby fists thrust deep in his pockets, looking proud and happy and too sweet for anything.

And his charms grow apace until his trousers lengthen and suspenders take the place of the pretty shirt waists when, according to some grumpy old folks, he becomes considerable of a nuisance and oftentimes a terror.

The small boy is the nearest approach to "perpetual motion" than we are likely ever to see.

He is never still or at rest. Even when asleep he is kicking the bed covering off continually.

He wants to know everything and the questions he asks puzzle the wisest scholars to answer.

He is a curious mixture of contrariness.

If there is anything he hates it is water—when he is being washed—as all mothers know who wrestle with him on such occasions.

Yet if he can find a pond or a canal inside of ten miles he will revel in the water and take his chances of drowning for the pleasure a bath gives him.

He is at times the laziest of living things—at other times the most industrious.

If asked by his parents to weed the garden, do an errand or any little household chore, he immediately is so "tired" and looks so mournful that in pity for the delicate and overworked litile humbug he is allowed to slide out of it.

Ten minutes afterwards he may be found helping a neighbor's boy work thrice as hard or racing around the bases in a game of baseball, shouting with joy and livelier than a cricket.

The small boy is always eating. The only time he doesn't is when at the table, for his appetite is then spoiled for proper and nourishing food by his frequent visits to the jam pantry or to the fruit trees in his or somebody else's garden. The greener the fruit the better he likes it and stomach aches in consequence have no terror for him.

No one loves to tease more than he—as his sister knows to her sorrow, and it seems to give him the intensest delight; yet, if he is teased he thinks he is dreadfully treated and makes an awful time about it.

The collections of bric-a-brac that a small boy's pockets contain has ever excited our wonder.

When the little chap is asleep and his fond mother takes his tiny trousers to put one or more patches on the knees and seat she is always surprised that such a small garment should have such a great weight.

And she can't understand it until she happens to strike the pockets. Then out come the curiosities one after another and carefully they are laid out on the table before her. At last the pockets are emptied, but not before the explorer thinks they are, like a magic box, inexhaustible and endless.

She forgets about the needful patches for awhile to gaze at the queer array of treasures and wonder what on earth they are good for and how the dear child ever got them.

There's a top and a piece of string fastened to a big wooden button, jackstones, marbles, knife without blades, nails, beans, wad of chewing gum, more string, bits of lead and tin, a whistle, cake crumbs, nuts, fishhooks she nearly got in her fingers, cigarette pictures, bent pins which have been on the railway track and run over, broken bits of toys and tools, stones, a bean shooter, a leather sucker, a ball, pieces of looking glass and colored glasses, some putty, a tip cat, rubber rings, postage stamps, a circus programme, peach pits, a cork float and lots of other things which only a boy knows the names of.

When the patches are finished each and every article is carefully replaced in the pockets for the mother is well aware that if one was left out it would quickly be missed and no peace in the house until it was found.

Next to seeing the small boy trudging to school with books and slate under his arm we love to watch him at play.

What energy and enthusiasm and skill he shows. How his eyes sparkle. How rosy are his plump cheeks. What a snap to his voice. You can hear his merry shouts far away. Little he cares if the weather is cold or hot or rainy. He's having fun and—suddenly his mother calls, "Johnnie!" He don't answer and keeps right on playing, though less spirited and shouting no more. "Johnnie!" The other boys look at him to see what he'll do. He does nothing. "Johnnie! John! John Anthony! You hear me?"

Then goes back a slow and feeble: "Yes'm!" "Come here instantly." Another faint "Yes'm," but he don't go though his playmates stop the game, to await results. "JOHN!" His father called that time and the tone meant business. "Yes, sir!" and like a streak he darts toward his home.

The small boy of to-day is highly blessed.

It seems as if all the inventors in the world were getting up new playthings and games and tools and books for his especial benefit, and that his parents can't spend enough money for his pleasure and entertainment.

Compare what our grandfathers or what we ourselves had in childhood with the playthings that the modern small boy is hardly satisfied with.

He not only sports a seven dollar tennis racket and a forty dollar bicycle, but he must have a suitable dress to go with them.

We used to have a good game of ball in patched trousers and bare feet and an old straw hat. Now the children can't enjoy themselves at all without a uniform and glove and face covering and real bag bases.

A fish pole cut in the woods was good enough for us, but a split bamboo our boys must have.

We used to get pretty hot doses of birch when we deserved it, but nowadays it has gone out of fashion in the homes as well as the schools—and we think it ought to, for all the whippings we got never made us any better—but the contrary. "Spare the child and spoil the rod" is the improved version.

A curious transformation takes place in the small boy after he has been awhile to school.

He suddenly becomes sensitive to wearing old clothes. Instead of fighting against being washed he washes himself often and nearly destroys the hairbrush in his efforts before the glass. He must have a clean collar every day and have on his best necktie. He becomes quiet and oh, so good about the house. He never is late to school and always knows his lessons.

And he becomes furious whenever a mention is made of the little sweetheart who has won his boyhood's first affections.

The little girl is very nice in her way, but she can't hold a candle to the small boy.

May he never grow old.—H. C. Dodge, in Goodall's Sun.

SEX IN DIAMONDS.

A Jeweler Who Believes There Is Sex in Everything, Even in Diamonds.

In the big show window of a New York jewelry store rested a small tray that gathered a crowd of curious spectators to the window. Every time the sunlight played upon the plate glass the tray corruscated with prismatic hues of dazzling brilliancy. The tray is well known to the trade. It is designed to display the remarkable variations of the color of large African mine diamonds, and contains examples of all the colors known. It possesses great interest for novices in gems, and the jeweler is called upon half a dozen times a day to explain the beauties of the specimens.

"It took a long time to get this collection together," the jeweler said, "and it is the only one in the town of the kind thus arranged. You see here the brown diamond, the absinthe, the canary or yellow, the gem, the pink, the rote, and the coffee and the green diamond. The effect of these combinations in the sunlight is entrancing. Each predominant hue seems to impart a distinct luster to the prismatic scintillations. When the tray is swung to and fro in the sunbeams it gives forth as you see a perfect blaze of rainbow colors. These gems also illustrate different cuttings of the diamonds. Were they all set in a bracelet or a brooch or a necklace they would make a rarely beautiful trinket, but it would cost a heap of money."

The jeweler picked out one sparkle with a pair of diamond tweezers and held it forward in the show window.

"This is a Brazilian gem," he said, "like which there is only one other in the world, in Paris, and the French one is not as pure or as large as this. This is what is called a black diamond and is valued at twenty-five hundred dollars. It weighs a trifle less than four karats. Its beauty lies in the fact that it changes its color in different lights. In this strong sunlight you see it is almost black, but it gives forth a prismatic radiance greater than that emitted by the best of the black gems. In gaslight, you observe, the black hue becomes a rich golden brown, and the play of colors is changed, too. Diamonds of this sort are regarded by the superstitious miners as 'gold stones,' that is, gems possessing a power of imparting good luck to the owner in the search for hidden gold. This stone was secured in Paris, whither it was brought in rough for cutting by a Rio Janeiro merchant.

"Here," continued the jeweler, "is another curiosity." He picked up a three-karat white stone with the tweezers. "It is a specimen that will prove to you that there is a difference of sex in the gems. This is what is called the female, a multiplying diamond."

He held the gem under a strong magnifying glass and pointed to four or five smaller diamonds, clustered about one of the facets at the edge of the table of the stone. "The male gem," the jeweler said, "is sharp-pointed and never gathers these embryo gems. There is a fine specimen alongside that pink stone. It surprises most people who see those specimens to be told that they are of different sex as well as colors, but such is the fact."—Jewelers' Review.

A Queer Hallucination.

"I have a patient who is nearly ninety years old," says a prominent doctor of Evanston. "He has no ailment except that of increasing age. In most respects he is perfectly sound. But he has one story to which he has been addicted for several years, and every time he tells it he augments it. His hobby is the Newhall house fire in Milwaukee. He will tell you if you will listen a picturesque story of that horror from the time the alarm was turned in until the last victim perished. He is particularly vivid in his account of the manner of the fate of the servant girls. The truth of the matter is he never saw the fire. He was in a peculiar frame of mind when he read the first accounts of the horror, and they made such an impression upon him that he actually believes he was in the house when the fire broke out, and that he had a thrilling escape. On everything else the old gentleman is perfectly sound, and is the soul of truth."—Chicago Tribune.

—If men were half as wise in their actions as they are in their minds, the word "fool" would be out of use.—Atchison Globe.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

Value of a Prize Essay.

Miss Lillian P. Perry, of Covington, Tenn., won a prize for an essay in a Memphis paper on "The Model Husband." Fremont Reed, a Minnesota business man, read it in a Minneapolis paper, and afterward on his travels read it in a New York and a Chicago paper. He wrote asking Miss Perry to correspond, which, after much urging, the lady consented to do. Mr. Reed visited her twice and married her the other day. The girl is of good southern family and accomplished.

Stolen Notes Found in the Grass.

A startling discovery was made at Kandiyohi by Swan Anderson, section foreman at that place, while burning grass a mile west of town. June 28 Sjoberg & Dundquist's store was burglarized by some unknown parties, who got away with over $200 in cash and notes, mortgages and deeds, amounting to $4,000, belonging to Mr. Sjoberg. The notes and valuable papers were found in the grass and saved.

Heavy Failure in St. Paul.

The Standard Investment Company of St. Paul, Bushnell & Bushnell managers, has made an assignment for the benefit of creditors to Acting Mayor Cullen. The approximated assets were between $550,000 and $600,000. The approximated liabilities were about $500,000. The largest creditors reside in the eastern states. The firm members stated that they would pay all debts and commence business anew at once.

Hospitably Received.

Frank Murray, of Fergus Falls, went into police headquarters at Minneapolis and reported that he had been held up for about $300. He had met two accommodating strangers at the Union depot who offered to show him the sights of the city. The trio proceeded down First avenue south, and when between High and First streets Murray's companions knocked him down and secured all his money.

A Traveler's Freak.

J. A. Johnson, a Minneapolis commercial traveler, broke into the house of a man named Cohen in St. Paul. The family were at church. Mr. Johnson was tired, and he very deliberately undressed himself and got into Mr. Cohen's bed. Neighbors informed the police that there was a burglar in Cohen's house and Johnson was arrested. He paid a fine for disorderly conduct.

Death of Rev. O. H. Tiffany.

Rev. Dr. O. H. Tiffany, pastor of the Hennepin Avenue Methodist Episcopal church in Minneapolis, died the other afternoon. He had been ailing for several weeks and his death was expected. Dr. Tiffany had a national reputation and was one of the most eloquent divines in the land. He was 60 years old and leaves a wife, two sons and two daughters.

The News Briefly Chronicled.

The establishment of a post office is asked for at Lawndale, Wilkin county, with R. S. Morton postmaster.

A barn on the Cowell place at Castle Rock was burned with eighty tons of hay, a mare and colt, eight head of cattle, carriages, etc.

William Kelly, unmarried, aged 22 years, was drowned at Trout lake, near Duluth, while duck hunting. He lived at Jackson, Mich.

Miss Carrie Felker, of Cottage Grove, died suddenly of heart disease, aged 20 years. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Felker, and was to have been married in a week.

Charles J. Lundgren, of Mankato, a brakeman on the Northwestern road, fell off his train in the Tracy yards and was run over and killed.

Louis T. Wilde, a teller in the employ of the St. Paul Trust Company at St. Paul, has embezzled about $5,000 and disappeared.

Henry Busse, a farmer living near East Grand Rapids, drank horse medicine by mistake for whisky and died.

Peter Lucier, a brick mason, was drowned in the St. Louis river at New Duluth by the capsizing of a boat. He was 45 years old and leaves a wife and child in St. Paul.

George Bleifuss, living near Stewartville, was killed by his team running away and throwing him under the wheels of the wagon.

The Kewanee, Green Bay & Western railway will give Winona connection with Lake Michigan. Track laying is now in progress on that route.

Thomas Rogers, a fireman, was killed and Frederick Mase, an engineer, was injured in a collision at Chaska hill on the Minneapolis & St. Louis railway. Both men lived in Minneapolis.

O. R. Mather, the asylum contractor, died at Fergus Falls.

Ray Abrahamson, a coachman in Minneapolis, dropped dead on Park avenue.

At Litchfield a boy named De Forest, aged 6 years, fell under a wagon and one wheel passed over his head, killing him instantly.

W. M. West, superintendent of the Faribault schools for eight years, has resigned and has accepted a professorship in the North Dakota university.

Minneapolis is interested in a surfeit of bogus two dollar bills. United States officers are investigating.

A. C. Carey, one of a threshing crew going north on the Great Northern, fell from the top of a box car at Moorhead and was killed.

James Murphy, unmarried, aged 23 years, was run over by a switch engine in the St. Paul & Duluth yards at Duluth, and had both legs cut off below the knees.

The team of F. Rausch ran away in Young America and horses and wagon ran over Laura Tuck, the daughter of Gustave Tuck, broke her jawbone and bruised up her head badly.

D. S. White, of Northfield, who has lately obtained a patent on an excavator which is now being manufactured in Minneapolis, has interested a number of gentlemen in the enterprise, and it is expected that a factory will soon be started.

Antoine Dunsheik, a laboring man arrested in Minneapolis while drunk recently, made two desperate efforts to end his life while locked in a cell at the police station.

Near Glenwood, O. E. Holmes, Fred Renn, Conrad Prince, Brazil Lyle and John Coffin were killed in a collision on the "Soo" road and seven other persons were injured.

John B. Stutphin, C. B. King, M. R. Baldwin, J. J. Costello and F. B. Daugherty have organized a local company at Duluth for the manufacture of dynamite, blasting powder and other high explosives.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—Pretty bed-spreads of white or cream linen show a delicate powdering in cross-stitch, worked in blue cottons. Another style is decorated with a band in red cross-stitch and shows a huge monogram in the center.—N. Y. World.

—A new holder for photographs is in crescent form and is made of pale green plush strapped with gold, so as to hold the pictures in place in irregular rows one above the other. The crescent is hung as the moon is when it indicates rainy weather according to the Indian legend—horns up and down so that it will not hold water.—N. Y. Tribune.

—If practicable, have the breakfast-room face the morning sun, and in the window set some blooming plants, to be replaced by others when they cease to blossom. Let in the sunlight upon them and the table, and try to greet the dawning day with happy converse and gentle laughter. Nothing so well fits man or woman for the duties of the day as to begin it with cheerfulness.

—Custard Cake: Three eggs, one cup sugar, two tablespoonfuls water, one and one-half cups flour and a teaspoonful baking powder. Flavor with lemon or vanilla. Bake in two layers and put together with custard made of one cup sweet milk, two tablespoonfuls sugar, one tablespoonful corn-starch, and one egg. Flavor the custard same as the cake, adding it after the custard is boiled.—Orange Judd Farmer.

—It is said that one of the best ways, better even than the use of ice, to obtain a cold cloth for application in fevers, is to wet a linen cloth and wave it to and fro in the air before folding it and placing it on the patient. And, in like manner, a room may be cooled by wringing large cotton cloths out of water and hanging them in front of the open windows, wetting them again as often as necessary.—N. Y. World.

—Fish and Macaroni Scallop: Put into a buttered baking dish, in layers, equal parts of cold cooked fish and cold boiled macaroni, cut fine. For one pint of the mixture make one cup of tomato sauce. Fry one teaspoon of minced onion in tablespoon butter; add one even tablespoon flour and one cup of stewed tomato. Salt and pepper to taste. Strain it over the fish. Cover with three-fourths of a cup of cracker crumbs moistened in melted butter. Bake until the crumbs are brown.—Boston Budget.

TO RENOVATE BLACK GOODS.

Recipe for an Excellent Cleansing Fluid Which May Be Made Cheaply.

An excellent cleansing fluid, especially useful when men's garment's require renovation, is prepared as follows: Dissolve four ounces of white Castile soap shavings in a quart of boiling water. When cold add four ounces of ammonia, two ounces each of ether, alcohol and glycerine, and a gallon of clear, cold water. Mix thoroughly, and as it will keep for a long time, bottle and cork tightly for future use. This mixture will cost about 80 cents and will make eight quarts.

For men's clothing, heavy cloth, etc., dilute a small quantity in an equal amount of water, and, following the nap of the goods, sponge the stains with a piece of similar cloth. The grease that gathers upon the collars of coats will immediately disappear and the undiluted fluid will vanquish the more obstinate spots. When clean dry with another cloth and press the underside with a warm iron. This fluid is also useful when painted walls and woodwork require scouring, a cupful to a pail of warm water being the proper proportion.

When washing black dress goods soap must never under any circumstances be applied directly to the material. In order to obtain the necessary suds it must be shaved and entirely dissolved in a basinful of boiling water and then thrown into the wash-tub.

Black lawn—Wash very quickly in hot suds, for this material must not lie wet; rinse in deeply-blued water, and hang in the shade; iron upon the wrong side while still damp. If stiffening is desired dry thoroughly, and before ironing dip the goods into very thin and very blue starch; hang once more in the open air, and iron when nearly dry.

Black crape requires careful treatment. Remove the dust by gently slapping it between the hands. Steam small pieces by holding them over the spout of the boiling tea-kettle, and larger ones over a dish-pan of boiling water. Lay the moist pieces of crape between two layers of sheet wadding and press beneath a heavy weight—the slab of a marble-topped table, or the pastry-board weighted with books or flat-irons. It is well to place a width of soft cheese-cloth both above and below the crape, in order to prevent the cotton fluff from adhering to it.

Black velvet—Brush carefully, and steam to raise the sunken pile. Two persons, their hands protected from the steam, are required to do the work. While one holds the heated iron with its smooth surface upturned, the other, throwing a very wet towel over it, presses the wrong side of the velvet down upon the iron, so that the rising steam forces the pile into place, and continue this as long as possible. Lastly, the wrong side of the velvet is drawn quickly across the surface of the iron itself.

Black silk—Purchase a few ounces of soap bark at the drug store, according to the amount of silk to be cleaned. Steep two ounces of the bark in a quart of warm water for a few hours. Rip and brush the silk and remove all threads left by the former stitches. Spread the pieces upon the lap-board or a clean table, and after straining the infusion sponge on both sides with a scrap of silk. A lather will form, and this is then to be wiped away with another piece of the silk. Do not wring the moisture from the silk; spread the different pieces upon a sheet laid over the carpet and pin them at the corners. When dry the silk will look like new.

Black cashmere—Wash in hot suds and rinse twice in lukewarm water, well blued. If a clear day hang in the open air, and iron upon the wrong side when nearly dry. Long, steady strokes of the iron and even pressure throughout will restore the original silky sheen of the material.

Black alpaca—Proceed as with cashmere, and add a little gumarabic to the last rinsing water.

Black lace—Spread out the lace upon a towel stretched over the lap-board and, using an old black kid glove or a soft piece of silk for the purpose, sponge thoroughly with solution of borax—a teaspoonful to a pint of warm water. To retain the shape direct the strokes from the selvage outward. Cover with a piece of old silk and iron dry.—Chicago Herald.

IN THE ELECTRICAL WORLD.

—A French electrician has gotten up a device by which he can send 150 typewritten words per minute over a single wire.

—The city of Bremen is probably the first German city in which horses will have been wholly supplanted by electric power for street car service.

—A most serious obstacle to the proposed American-Asiatic cables by the Aleutian Islands and Alaska route has arisen in the discovery of such an extent of extreme depth of water northeast of Japan as to preclude the sinking of the cable.

—Franklin is credited with the statement that the flesh of a goose killed by an electric current is particularly fine eating. This brings up interesting possibilities in the culinary art, and shows the far-reaching nature of the electrician's science. An electric current will replace the boardinghouse ax and tough steaks will become a thing of the past.

—An elevated railroad that has been under consideration for forty years, and is now being built along the water front of Liverpool, Eng., presents some features of interest, it is claimed, to American engineers. The line is about six and a half miles in length, with two tracks of standard gauge, and it is proposed to use electricity for motive power. The road skirts the principal docks, and is intended to provide for the enormous passenger traffic along that route.

—A wicked Connecticut thunderbolt got hold of a Tartar at the Cheney farm at North Haven, a few days ago, when it tackled a barbed wire fence that encircles a big lot belonging to Mr. Cheney. The bolt hit the fence near the house, split itself in two, and the dividen bolt went entirely around the field in opposite directions at the same time. The wires jingled like a cotton spindle, but held their own pretty well, though the bolt yanked out of the ground eleven posts that carried the wires.

—When the teacher in the Holloway country district, Ct., opened the school house there the other day he discovered that a caller was ahead of him. At some time in the summer vacation a thunderbolt went into the house, tore up the floors, knocked the desks into kindling wood, went through the whole curriculum of studies in geography, second-class reader, Daboll's arithmetic, grammar and spelling, and graduated through one of the windows, taking part of the sash along.

—A correspondent of the Electrical Review, writing from Paris under a recent date, says: "I want to tell you about a machine they use here very much, but that I have not seen any thing of in our country. They call it the theatrophone. It is virtually a phonograph that is placed in any hotel and connected with all the theaters. By dropping the familiar coin into the equally familiar slot, the thing is set in working order, and the conversation, music, etc., of whatever theater it happens to be connected with at the time is plainly heard by placing two receivers to the ears.

—M. Scherer, a Frenchman, has invented a clever, but simple method of electrically doing to death gnats, flies and similar pests. The only drawback is that he requires an electric battery giving a constant current. But as many hotels, public buildings and private buildings in warm climates are now lighted by electricity, there can be little difficulty in setting up economical, effective and perfectly safe death traps for ærial pests. His device is very simple. He takes a candle, lamp or torch and places it within a cage of metallic wire gauze. This metallic gauze is connected with the poles of an electric machine, and duly charged with the electric current. The gnats, mosquitos, fleas and wasps fly to the light, touch the electrified metal, and are instantly killed. There is no possibility of their flying about half dead, and, as in the case with certain traps, conveying poison about the place.

DELANO DIARY.

Business men that are wise
Never fail to advertise.

—Delano Fair Saturday, Nov. 7.

—Read Conzet & Stewart,s "Rally, Rally." notice.

—See John Coolen about one of those wind-mills he advertises.

—Read Warren Merriman's Feed Mill notice, in another column.

—Sheriff Nugent advertises in the GAZETTE a Sheriff's Sale Dec. 11th.

—W. F. Kohler, of Watertown, is offering bargains in his line. Read his "add".

—Swan Ericson has built a new barn on his lots near his fourth street residence.

—Consult Geo. P. Schaffer's add in the GAZETTE and give him a call. He is giving satisfaction to his customers.

—Monday was a big day in Delano. The town was filled with teams and people and put on truly metropolitan airs.

—On Wednesday, Jadwin Bros. shipped their thresher engine to Hamel Station near Minneapolis to the foundry for repairs.

—Thomas Worthy who was so badly injured a few weeks ago by falling from a bee tree has recovered so that he was in town with his team this week.

—Pensions have been granted to William McKinley, and to Mrs. Sarah E. Freman. An increase of pension to E. Brandon.

—John Lohmiller has superceded "Joker Joe," Haumont, in the business of the Minneapolis Brewing and Malting Company at this place, their notice appears in annother column.

—Justice Billings will listen to-morrow to M. A. O'Hair and F. H. Lindsley discuss whether C. R. Carlton shall have pay from John Kaeppe for damage by fire in his woods.

—Mrs. Hellen Bain met with an accident on Tuesday. A piece of board she was breaking with the ax flew up and struck her in the face making quite a wound near the eye.

—F. L. Scherer was met near Hanover on Monday morning bright and early, with a load of cigars, the production of his manufactory at this place. Frank is a rustler and is picking up a nice little trade in his line —Examinations and grading of scholars in the public schools has been going on for some time past. Several branches seem to us to have been much neglected in the past or gone over in an indifferent manner. Be thorough.

—On Wednesday afternoon as Mrs. C. J. Buckley was passing the M. E. parsonage a portion of the sidewalk that had recently been removed to allow teams to pass through in moving the pastors and that had not been safely replaced, gave way and Mrs. B. was injured. Such things ought not to happen.

—Farmers are very busy this week putting in time getting ready for winter. Plows are constantly in motion. Several are hauling the summers accumulation of manure from the village alleys. Corn husking absorbs the attention of women children and others. Cornfodder is being saved more closely than before in anticipation of a long hard winter.

—While coming home from St. Michaels John Marks who lives about two miles from that place, was thrown from his buggy by the young team he was daiving and received a severe scalp wound and had several ribs broken. Surgical assistance was summoned from Delano and the old gentleman made as comfortable as possible. His recovery is expected.

—Quarterly meeting at the M. E. church was conducted by Presiding Elder Stafford who preached on Saturday afternoon and evening. The Elder is one of the most entertaining sermonizers in the state and draws an audience usually. But if only a few are present they are not neglected by him. Quite a number of visitors were present from neighboring places.

—Charles W. Ingerson of this place on Wednesday after hearing of the success met with by the Democratic nominees in New York addressed to Roswell Pettibone Flower, Governor elect of New York a letter of congratulation and wished him success as a presidential candidate. They were boys together and although differing in politics Mr. I's. respect for the young clerk at $5. per month of years ago prompts him to this act.

—The Eagle, still pursuing her tactics, by distorting our items seeks to bring down upon our head the ill-will of individuals and now of churches. A few weeks since she tried the dodge on the Presbyterians and this week the Catholics and the Episcopals are appealed to, after her fashion, and capital against us sought to be made. Keep on and you soon will have made the rounds. TARIFF IS A TAX, all the same. Why not devote a little of your time and talent to showing your readers that Hon. C. K. Davis was doing Minnesota farmers a great wrong when he worked so hard for free binding twine, if you actually think he was.

—Halloween was duly observed by several af the young Delanoites

—Charles Eppel Jr and Miss Mary Schaust will wed on the 10th inst.

—Baron Von Kruger, we are informed, in speaking of his being desirous of getting married says "No Irish need apply."

—John Sturman has purchased a lot of A. L. Mealey, near the Catholic church and has the foundation built for a new residence.

—J. C. Hitz droye over to St. Michaels Wednesday to attend the wedding of Mr. J. C. Neiss at that place. Charley is getting to be quite at home in that town.

—Evidence in the divorce case of Mrs. Nelson against her husband James E. formerly of this place was heard before Squire St. Johns, of Watertown a few days ago.

—J. E. Brothers, of Minneapolis, was calling on frends, and transacting business in Delano this week. He traded his little driving horse to Danforth Bros. for a larger one.

—John Coolen has his new city residence and its surroundings in first class shape, and don't feel so big but that the latch string is always out to the humblest of his many friends.

—George M. Ball has been promoted to Station Agent at Tintah, for which place he leaves here Sunday evening. His place as night operator here will be occupied by M. Mattson. Mr. Ball's family will remain here for the present.

—On Wednesday Olaf Nolan took his wife, who has been suffering with erysipelas and hes son Ira whose hand was so badly injured by a sorghum mill home. Neither has entirely recovered but Mr. N. thought best to have them at home.

—Several fine porkers are to be seen bttchered and ready for market on many of the Wright County farms since the cooler weather commenced. A first class market for pork in Delano ought to be established, to buy all that is offered for cash. This would, just now, give quite a stimulus to trade.

—Dr. C. B. Ames, of Rockford, expects to spend the next few weeks at the Dwight establishment for the cure of inebriates near Chicago. He will thoroughly test the ability of the doctors to cure cases of this kind and will, on his return, doubtless be fully qualified to endorse or condemn their claims. Success to you Doctor.

—Diphtheria, one of the most serious and fatal diseases of this country is reported in several parts of the State. Deaths have occured at Springfield, Kasota and Northfield. Children with sore throats should not be allowed in the schoolroom as it is very contagious, and isolation is the best preventative. If hospitals with competent nurses were provided in cases of epidemics and as fast as cases appeared they were removed from the family and treated, as they, in most cases, could be to much better advantage than at home, we believe the fatality record would be much deminished. This is one disease where if remedies are to do good they must be intelligently and persistantly made use of and the patient not neglected and valuable time wasted in waiting for the patient to get better without them. The disease does not need exactly the same stereotyped treatment in all cases. But the symptoms must bo dealt with in each particular case.

"A Tariff on Coffee is a Tax, Unquestionably."—Senator C. K. Davis at Buffalo.

If tariff on coffee is a tax, tariff on sugar is a tax, tariff on tin is a tax, tariff on knives and pearl buttons and tariff on anything that has to be paid is tax. If you smuggle goods the tariff may be escaped, but that does not destroy the truth that TARIFF IS A TAX.

County Gullings.

In a letter containing a dollar for subscription to the GAZETTE the writer says "I am still alive, I suppose the Stacy family had me dead. I am STILL a "Democrat," Yours Resp.,
T. DESMOND.

The Waverly Tribune says that Waverly has been selected as the place at which the Democratic opening meeting for the campaign of '92 is to be held. The Republicans held theirs at Buffalo, a few weeks since and it would be but fair for the Democrats to open up in the same county. Wright must at least be considered as doubtful by both parties and each is equally desirous of sweeping it into line. Let every one turn out and make the opening meeting of the campaign a rouser and listen to able and eloquent speakers as they expound the true Democratic principles.

Quite on excitement was occasioned a few days ago at Rockford by the announcement of a change of postmasters at that place. Mr. Rolf Ames the incumbent for the past few years, a man respected by all as a good man for the place was to be supplanted by D. R. Farnham, Esq., of Rockford. The people consider this a political move of a very bad nature. And as D. R. was one of the leaders of the so-called People's party and one of the loudest yellers for A. Y. Eaton they charge the Senator of paying some of his electioneering debts by assisting D. R. to an office which it is considered he would not have obtained by the vote of the people of that township. Just how the Senator accomplished this piece of wire pulling if he did it has not yet been shown. It is intimated that Senator Washburn assisted.

In a letter containing a dollar for subscription to the GAZETTE the writer says "I am still alive. I suppose the Stacy family had me dead. I am STILL a "Democrat," Yours Resp.,
T. DESMOND.

The Waverly Tribune says that Waverly has been selected as the place at which the Democratic opening meeting for the campaign of '92 is to be held. The Republicans held theirs at Buffalo, a few weeks since and it would be but fair for the Democrats to open up in the same county. Wright must at least be considered as doubtful by both parties and each is equally desirous of sweeping it into line. Let every one turn out and make the opening meeting of the campaign a rouser and listen to able and eloquent speakers as they expound the true Democratic principles.

Quite on excitement was occasioned a few days ago at Rockford by the announcement of a change of postmasters at that place. Mr. Rolf Ames the incumbent for the past few years, a man respected by all as a good man for the place was to be supplanted by D. R. Farnham, Esq., of Rockford. The people consider this a political move of a very bad nature. And as D. R. was one of the leaders of the so-called People's party and one of the loudest yellers for A. Y. Eaton they charge the Senator of paying some of his electioneering debts by assisting D. R. to an office which it is considered he would not have obtained by the vote of the people of that township. Just how the Senator accomplished this piece of wire pulling if he did it has not yet been shown. It is intimated that Senator Washburn assisted.

"A Tariff on Coffee is a Tax, Unquestionably."—Senator C. K. Davis at Buffalo.

If tariff on coffee is a tax, tariff on sugar is a tax, tariff on tin is a tax, tariff on knives and pearl buttons and tariff on anything that has to be paid is tax. If you smuggle goods the tariff may be escaped, but that does not destroy the truth that TARIFF IS A TAX.

THE night train from Chicago to Milwaukee was robbed, yesterday, at about 1 a. m. by armed men when about 60 miles from Chicago, on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road.

About Half Right.

The Buffalo Gazette comes out in a new form. Instead of a six-column quarto, it is a seven-column folio. It also has a bit of news(?) on the binding twine industry for its readers, about which it went after the TIMES so ardently not long since. Just hear what it says a moment:

"C. K. Davis is about half way right on tariff as he gave his views at Buffalo a short time ago, when he took the credit of having saved Minnesota farmers $25,000 on binding twine this harvest by getting a reduction in the tariff, which, in this instance, he claimed was a tax, as binding twine is a foreign production."

An article appearing a short time since in the same paper said in effect that there was no saving, and now it admits half the claim. It is a good thing to be half way right sometimes, and we hope the Gazette wont stop there, but admit the whole truth.—Sherburne County Times.

Unfortunately for the arguments of the "Times" its first assertion is wrong and the editor has only to consult his files of the GAZETTE to prove to him, what all our readers know that the GAZETTE has never changed form. It is a seven column folio. The "Times" is a six-column quarto. The GAZETTE is not and never was.

Next the Times says, "It (the GAZETTE) also had a bit of news(?) on the binding twine industry for its readers about which it went after the Times so ardently not long since." It is no news to our readers that a tariff on binding twine is a tax, and that a reduction of the tariff is in favor of the farmer, and when the Hon. C. K. said that he had saved money to the farmers by the reduction we think he was right. The point we were making in our former discussion with the Times was that there was lots of poor twine in the market and that the farmers had rather pay a little more for good twine than to be obliged to bind their grain over on account of the twine breaking. Our readers know that "tariff is a tax" even on binding twine and the Times was more considerate when the parenthesis was placed around that interrogation point than when they accused us of having changed form.

The Times says, "It is a good thing to be half way right sometimes, and we hope the GAZETTE wont stop there but admit the whole truth." We agree with the sentiment and hope to be able to be as near right as it is possible to get, and sincerely hope the Times may be more fortunate in keeping the good old path of truth a little closer than in this instance. We are at a loss to account for the Times' blunder on this occasion unless she has got mixed up with that other six-column quarto at Monticello. We still think Hon. C. K. Davis about half right in his tariff talk but just how he makes out tariff on coffee, binding twine etc., etc. a tax and tariff on calico and other things not a tax some folks would like to know. We don't think that more than half right.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6, 1891.

The jollification of jubilant Democrats is giving this town almost as rosy a hue as it had a year ago, when the returns came in from the Congressional elections, and "Well, yes, three out of four will do very well" has become a sort of a Democratic countersign. It refers, of course, to the election of three Democratic governors out of the four states in which governors were elected. Every train brings prominent Democrats, and one and all they are of the same opinion,—that by this time next year a Democratic President will have been elected. Representative Mills said: "In Massachusetts it was a square fight, a contest over a principle, and the doctrine of the democracy was endorsed by the people, who believe that our party is the exponent of sound ideas and the correct theories of government. There is nothing in Ohio to cause us discouragement, though I confess that I believed that Campbell would be re-elected. Still, Ohio is a Republican state. A Democratic victory in a state like Iowa is something to be proud of. Flower's triumph in New York is a grand one, but it is best not to be too sanguine over carrying that state next year. It is always uncomfortably close, and doubtful in Presidential years. Yet on a square test I am confident that Democracy is stronger in the State than Republicanism. Yet we must overlook no precaution to insure victory in 1892. We must in the scriptural phrase, be as wise as serpents and as harmless as doves. If we obey this injunction we ought to win not only in New York next year, but throughout the nation." Mr. Mills has opened up headquarters in one of the uptown hotels for the speakership campaign, and the other candidates will follow suit in a few days as there is but little more than three weeks left for them to work.

It has leaked out through the gossip of those high in official society, that Mr. and Mrs. Blaine are making no social engagements of any kind, more than four or five weeks ahead. The reason for this is that they will, in case the Secretary's health shows the slightest sign of breaking down, immediately leave for a warmer climate, where they will spend the winter. Should Mr. Blaine's health or his inclination lead him to leave Washington again for an indefinite period, it is not believed that he would retain the State portfolio. Indeed this plea of bad health may be made his excuse for leaving the cabinet in order that he may become through his friends, an open candidate for the Presidential nomination of his party, as many believe that he is certain to do inside of six months. The election of McKinley as Governor of Ohio has brought a disturbing element into the calculations of both Blaine and Harrison. They know that if McKinley is disposed to be a candidate, and there are good reasons for believing he is, that he will go into the convention with a very strong following. Of course pressure will be brought to bear on McKinley to have him agree to wait, but he may think that he has waited long enough.

Secretary Proctor continues to draw the salary of Secretary of war, although he has gone to Vermont, and they say around the department that he is not expected to return until he comes to officially transfer the department to his successor, who has not yet been announced, although he has been selected.

Representative Bynum, of Indiana, is enthusiastic over the election returns. Said he: "Three out of four isn't bad. It's just about what I thought it would be. I never thought the Democrats could carry Ohio, which is a Republican state, so there is no reason for being downcast over the news from there. All in all the result of the elections is a great democratic victory which means success next year. It means that we shall have New York, New Jersey, Connecticutt and Massachusetts in the east, and I should not be surprised if we carry Rhode Island and New Hampshire. Tariff reform is continually making Democratic votes in the Eastern Republican strongholds. We could not have hoped for a brighter sky. It would have been almost a miracle had we carried Ohio, and the days of miracles are past."

The decision of the U. S. District Court of California that the shipment of arms on the Itatia was a perfectly proper commercial transaction, and that this Government had no right to interfere was very unpalatable to the administration, and the Attorney General has directed that an appeal be taken.

Mr. Harrison is quite modest. He says that if the Republicans in New York had stuck to the national issues Fassett might have been elected. Secretary Tracy says he was defeated by the Republicans who stayed at home, but it looks very much to most people as if he was defeated by the Democrats who voted against him.

Woman's Column.

ROCKFORD, Nov, 5, 1891.

EDITOR:—On reading the report of our missionary, (who so recently graduated from the Northwestern Deaconess' Home) is full of the same true spirit and determined will to see the just and true course triumph, that called forth our sisters years ago to start the Temperance ball rolling and to day it is rolling still and it will roll on to victory. It reminds me of the story I so often read of Ruth starting out so young and leaving home and friends to go with Naomi to worship the true God and be with his people what courage and spirit she manifested, and what sweet words of comfort she spoke to the sorrowing Naomi.

God bless our sisters in their work is the prayers of thousands daily and we know truth and right will prevail.

MRS. TALLMAN.
Supt. of press work.

Our Missionary in the Field.

On the evening of the 8th of September I reached Grand Rapids, a stranger to every one.

Had I known before I arrived that I would have to walk a full half mile over a dark lonely road with a dense pine forest on one side and the railroad track on the other, surrounded by a croud of rough men. I might have grown just a little nervous at the prospect.

But with my precious Bible under my arm and my white ribbon fastened in a conspicuous place, I walked calmly on to the only hotel in the place.

The bit of white seemed to excite no little suspicion among the inhabitants, whose faces were covered with interrogation points as they gazed at the stranger. First looking into her face, then at her white ribbon and her Bible.

The hotel has a barroom on one side and a barber shop on the other. I had hoped to get room and board in some private family, but found that every house was full, so was obliged to put up at the hotel and was disappointed on learning that a comfortable room could not be obtained for less than ten dollars a week. I concluded to stop a week however, and see what I could do, hoping that something better would open for me.

The good people seemed delighted that a missionary had come in among them, and tried to make it as pleasant for me as they could. In the place there are ten saloons and two larger houses whose "steps take hold on hell," (Prov. 5: 5). One little church unpaid for, with a membership of six and no preacher. The only religious service a Sunday-school of about thirty members. I gave several Bible readings, held a gospel meeting in the church and succeeded in starting a prayer meeting, which many seemed to feel the need of, but no one felt strong enough to lead it. At last, after much personal work, one dear woman consecrated herself to God and promised to take charge of the meeting every week if I would promise to pray for her just at that time.

Before going I knew but little about the place. I went to do the pioneer woman's work—spy out the land and see how much of an opening there was for the W. C. T. U. I was loth to leave such a needy field but did not think it wise to remain more than a week on account of expense, so after talking to the Lord about it I concluded to go to La Prairie, a town two miles away, hoping to get reasonable board, but only succeeded in finding a place for a week in a lumbermen's hospital. I was the only woman in the building, save a faithful servant who prepared the meals.

In La Prairie there are six saloons, and no church or school house at present. They have Sunday-school of about fifteen members which meets in a dirty little room over the jail. This school was the only religious service I found there. It was too early in the season to visit any of the lumber camps, but I gained a great deal of valuable information concerning their camp life by talking with the patients in the hospital. I visited all of them twice a day. And every morning invited all that were able to be up, to go into one invalid's room where I read the Bible and had prayer service with them. One man who seemed to appreciate it most said to me one day with tears in his eyes, "I was brought up as well as any man in a Christian home, and know God has done a great deal for me, but since I have gotten out here, away from every thing that is good, I have not been living as I ought, but am going to do better, and try to do something for the Lord in the camp this winter." After that the prayer service always closed with a hearty amen from him.

My dear white ribboners, when we think of two or three thousand men within fifty miles of these towns, who almost never come within reach of the gospel, ought we not to occupy every foot of ground that it is possible for us to take? I am delighted to say that in La Prairie there is not only great need, but a grand opening for a W. C. T. U. reading room. I brought this matter before the business men of the town, and they were delighted with the suggestion. They say they want it there by all means, and hope within a short time to be able to procure a building and furnish it for that purpose. If we make the best of our opportunities, and do this work as it ought to be done, we should put in a reading room as soon as possible and endeavor to keep three missionaries there all the time. One to take charge of the reading room and two to go out and do the gospel work.

Let us pray that the dear Lord will not only send us all the means necessary for starting a reading room, but that He will send us the consecrated women for the work—women who are so endued with the power of Christ that they will have the courage and the wisdom to work in just such a place and hold the Lord Jesus and His cause.

Respectfully,
GRACE FUNK.

CORRESPONDENCE

ANNANDALE.

We had a lecture Monday evening on the subject of Prohibition and other issues by Rev. Pinkham late prohibition candidate for Governor. The gentleman is a fluent entertaining speaker but very few public speakers can entertain an audience three long hours without fatigueing them. Much that he said was only too true but it was like sipping a quart of broth to get two or three oysters. He said too much for good effect. He began by excoriating the trustees of the M. E. Church for denying their house to him. He accused church members of voting for saloons and declared that the hall was full of just such Christians. He indicted the Republican party of hypocracy in claiming to be the only true Prohibition party when in truth they were the only party that foisted the saloon upon the country. He paid his respects to the protectionists by accusing them of deceit in pretending it was in the interests of labor when in fact it was in the interests of capital only; that when labor asked for a corresponding increase in wages it was told to get out, that they could send to Ireland and elsewhere and get all the help they wanted at their own price. He accused the party of official corruption in high places; refered to giving away, to favorites, of the peoples' land and refered to one noble senator who, out of a five thousand dollar salary laid up, in four years, one and a half million dollars (good financiering) and on acenunt of his great abilities was able to return himself. He said he had a right to speak of the Republican party for the reason that he had always been a Republican till he became a Prohibitionist; that he was at the birth of the party, was one of the midwives in attendance and identified himself with it and voted with it; that he hated Democrats, had never voted that ticket and that they were not fit to live and ought not be trusted with office. Mark it. He did not accuse the party of wrong doing but hated Democrats and would not trust the party in office. How consistant? but this is a fair specimen of clerical politicians.

WEDDING IN HIGH LIFE—Married in the Catholic church in French Lake by Rev. Father Savey, Mr. Joseph L. Rousseau of the mercantile firm of Rousseau Bros. of Annandale and Miss Esther Cheralier only daughter of Charles Che valier of the latter place. The church was handsomely decorated for the occasion and was thronged with the many friends of the parties. The bride's wardrobe was rich and elaborate and she was attended by two bridesmaids and four maids of honor. The groom was the picture of happiness, as well he might be. They gave a reception in the evening at the residence of the bride's father, which was numerously attended by friends who came to tender their congratulations and many brought nice presents as keepsakes and others articles of utility. The band complimented them with some of their choicest selections. A bountiful repast was served and the entertainment was concluded with a social hop when the assembly dispersed invoking the choicest of blessing upon the heads of the newly wedded pair.

THE consumption of horseflesh has increased wonderfully during the last year in most of the large cities of Continental Europe, especially in Berlin, Paris and Vienna. A late economic report says that from eighty to 150 horses are daily slaughtered for market in Paris, the average daily number killed in Berlin being even greater.

A. MAJOR, the now wealthy proprietor of a well-known cement-making industry, obtained the receipe for it in a trade a few years ago, when both he and the other man were almost penniless. RUSSIA has begun to build the railroad through Southern Siberia, several thousand miles long, with a working force of 600 deported convicts, 200 of whom are murderers and sixty incendiaries. THE degree of delicacy which has been attained in the application of the radiamicrometer for the measurement of radiant heat—viz., from a candle, a fire, the sun, the moon, the stars, or anything else which radiates heat in space—is pronounced marvelous by scientists, a single illustration of this power being afforded by the fact that a really appreciable effect is produced on that instrument by a candle placed two miles away.

THE head of a monster bull moose was exhibited at Caribou, Me., recently. There were nine prongs on one horn and eight on the other, the spread at the antlers measuring five feet. The moose, which must have weighed 1,500 pounds at least, was shot by a Frenchman on the American side of the St. John river. The hunter, with a companion, was asleep by a camp fire in the woods, when he was awakened in the middle of the night by the moose smelling him over.

THE fifth wheel for a coach has found its place. On a tramway at Brussels they have cars which are fitted with a fifth wheel, so that they can easily be made to leave the rails and be replaced upon them, and their use is said to be increasing. The fifth wheel is placed in the fore part of the car, and can be raised by means of levers so that the other wheels are free to leave the rails whenever there is an obstacle on the line of route. In order to replace the car on the rails the conductor unclamps the guide wheel, and the other wheels are thus made to regain the rails.

EXPLORER BUTTIKOFFER says that a clock is rarely seen in the farm houses of Liberia, and many of the town residents have no timepiece of any sort. There are few civilized countries where a timepiece can be dispensed with so conveniently. The sun rises at 6 a. m. and sets at 6 p. m. almost to the minute the year round, and at noon it is vertically overhead. Many people become so expert in telling time by the sun that they are rarely more than a quarter of an hour out of the way. In place of alarm clocks they depend upon the crowing chanticleer to arouse them in the morning.

Agreed to Arbitration.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The public was taken into the confidence of the diplomatic branch of the government this afternoon in the continuation of the hearing begun yesterday before the United States supreme court in the case of the Canadian sealer W. P. Sayward, seized for illegal sealing in Behring sea, and the first announcement made that the prolonged diplomatic correspondence between Secretary Blaine and Lord Salisbury had resulted in an agreement by which, with the consent of the senate, the long-pending dispute over the seal fisheries in Behring sea will be definitely settled. Solicitor General Taft, who was addressing the court, made the first intimation that the correspondence between the two countries had reached a point where they had agreed to arbitrate.

He stopped at this point, and when Justice Gray desired some more explicit statement as to whether an agreement upon arbitration had been actually reached, the solicitor general hesitated to reply, and intimated that perhaps he had revealed more than he (not being a cabinet officer, and being authorized to speak only on legal questions) should have done.

Thereupon Attorney General Miller himself interposed, and not only substantiated all that the solicitor general had said, but went further and announced that the government had effected an arrangement. This was really the first announcement made of the status of the Behring sea negotiations since the last correspondence was made public showing a difference of opinion between the two governments on the points of arbitration. It was surprising that the news should first come out in an argument in court, and the attorney-general was asked after adjournment if he would throw some light on the subject.

A Fatal Fall.

Mrs. Lucy Todd Gilbert, mother of Bishop Gilbert, was found the other morning lying dead on the sidewalk fronting the bishop's residence in St. Paul. It was believed that Mrs. Gilbert, who was 78 years old and feeble, got up in the night and fell from her window to the ground. Bishop Gilbert arrived with his mother from Sherburg, N. Y., only a few days before the accident. The body was taken to Oswego, N. Y., for burial.

A Successful Mill.

The Red River Lumber Company's mill in Crookston, owned by T. B. Walker, has closed down after a most successful season's work. The mill started up on April 25 and has run steadily ever since, and has sawed over 21,000,000 feet of lumber, besides thousands of lath and shingles. The company employs nearly 200 men in and about the mill; the pay roll amounts to nearly $9,000 per month.

Teachers May Use the Whip.

In the city court at Winona, in the case of The State vs. Susan Jones, a teacher charged with maltreating Willie Fort, a pupil, the court decided in favor of the defendant. Action was brought by the boy's parents against Miss Jones, the claim being that the latter had no authority to administer corporal punishment. The case is the first of the kind ever decided in the state.

Close of the Game Season.

Under the state game law the time in which it is legal to offer for sale prairie chicken, partridge, grouse, pheasant and quail killed in Minnesota has ended. Dealers handling game now are open to prosecution if it can be proven the game was bagged in Minnesota. Sportsmen say the season has been an unusually good one and game has been plenty.

A Narrow Escape.

As Miss Sarah L. Ellis, stenographer for the Duluth Dry Goods Company, and John H. Cartmel, salesman, were returning home from work, they were either brushed off or became frightened and jumped off the trestle because of an approaching train and were rescued with difficulty. Miss Ellis received a severe scalp wound.

Millions Involved.

Attachments aggregating nearly $700,000 have been filed at St. Paul against the Duluth Iron & Land Company of Minnesota, limited, of Duluth, by Albert Scheffer, president of the Commercial bank; James W. Wright, Percival Fluver, John M. Paver and others. More than $1,000,000 is involved altogether.

A Soldiers' Home Surgeon.

The board of directors of the soldiers' home at Minneapolis held an adjourned meeting at which Dr. E. R. Greenleaf, of Fergus Falls, was elected to the office of resident surgeon, which has been vacant since the resignation of Dr. Ames several months ago. Dr. Ames was chosen advisory surgeon.

Open for Settlement.

By a decision of the secretary of the interior 60,000 acres of land in Minnesota claimed by two railroads have been thrown open to settlement, neither road having a valid claim. One hundred and twenty sections of land claimed by another road were also added to the public domain.

A New College.

The Christian Educational association and the Brighton Land Company have about completed arrangements for the location of a college at Duluth similar to the one under the auspices of the same company at Des Moines, Ia. New buildings will be erected to cost $200,000.

The News Briefly Chronicled.

A. Shol, of Friberg, lost a leg in threshing machine.

A. C. Zimmerman, aged 30, son of Abraham Zimmerman, was killed near Rothsay by being run over by a wagon load of wheat.

A large sash, door and blind factory of Schroth & Ahrens at Winona, destroyed by fire on May 6 last, has been rebuilt on an enlarged scale.

A jury in Duluth gave plaintiff a verdict of $12,000 in the case of P. F. Conger vs. the Northern Pacific railroad. He sued for $25,000.

The L. C. Porter Milling Company at Winona is erecting a large elevator with a capacity of 60,000 bushels.

Abram Pary was found dead in his field, 8 miles south of New York Mills. He was supposed to have been kicked to death by a horse while plowing.

The threshing outfit of P. H. Parsons, at Spicer, was totally destroyed by fire.

Capt. John Black, a farmer 60 years old living near Wadena, committed suicide by shooting himself with a revolver.

Charles O. Beardsley, an electric car driver in Minneapolis, fell in front of the car, which ran over him, killing him instantly.

A 2-year-old child of George Weidl, of Elizabeth, was fatally burned by its clothes catching fire from a prairie fire.

The McCormick machinery warehouse of Ross & McElhaney at St. Charles was destroyed by fire. Loss, $5,000; partially insured.

It was the belief that the body found in the woods near Lake City was that of an English druggist who had been given a position by W. E. White but never went to work.

The large maple tree grove, belonging to J. Nutting, near Northfield, was ruined by fire. This grove was one of the best in the state and was largely used for picnics.

The tax valuation of the real and personal property of the cities and towns of Winona county for 1891 shows a total of $11,743,594, an increase of $48,930 over the total valuation of last year.

The first examination under the new law by the state board of law examiners, of which Hon. J. W. Shaw, of Minneapolis, is president, will occur in St. Paul late in November or early in December.

P. O. Widmark has been appointed postmaster at Stanford, Isanta county, vice W. F. Robinson, resigned, and W. A. Coffin at Camden Place, Hennepin county, vice F. Olson, removed.

Fred B. Salisbury, H. A. Barnard, William McWright and twelve others incorporated the Mutual Home and Savings association of Minneapolis, with a capital of $1,000,000.

J. R. Lowe, of Huron, S. D., is establishing cooperative stores at all principal points on the Southern Minnesota and Winona & St. Peter railroads, which will be conducted by the Farmers' Alliance.

DOCTOR AND THIEF.

Charles N. Palmer, Well Known in Wisconsin Medical and Political Circles, Pleads Guilty to a Charge of Burglary—Opium Led to His Disgrace.

RACINE, Wis., Nov. 10.—"I am guilty, your honor," said Dr. Charles N. Palmer, when arraigned before Judge Fish on Monday on the charge of robbing the store of Postmaster Christianson, of Raymond. The wretched prisoner then burst into tears and sat down, covering his face with his hands.

The afternoon of Sunday, August 9, this city was electrified by the announcement that Dr. Palmer, one of the best known and influential men in southern Wisconsin, had been arrested on a charge of burglary. The friends of the doctor could not believe that there could be any foundation for the serious charge, or that a man of his standing could be guilty of such a crime. The doctor lived in the village of Raymond, and the man who brought this charge against him was Postmaster Christianson of the same place. For several months the postmaster had been missing goods from his store, which he conducts in connection with the post office. He tried every means to catch the thief without avail. Finally he decided to watch in the store, and in company with a man named Frederickson kept nightly vigil. Two weeks went by and no one came near the place.

They had about decided to give up when on the night of August 8, a little after midnight, as they were sitting behind a desk in the store, they heard a key grate in the lock of the door and a moment later were astonished to see Dr. Palmer enter and flash a dark lantern about the place. In their excitement at this discovery they attempted to leave and call other witnesses, but in the effort made a noise and the doctor took flight. The postmaster at once came to this city and swore out a warrant charging the doctor with entering his store with burglarious intent.

The doctor protested his innocence, and his friends were indignant at what they considered a scheme to ruin the doctor's reputation. However, the dark lantern was found near the doctor's yard, as well as the false key with which he had gained entrance to the store. Both the men who were in the store swore positively that they saw the doctor plainly and had not made a mistake. In spite of the fact that the evidence was overwhelmingly against the doctor his friends were slow to believe that he was guilty, but as the conviction gradually forced itself upon them that there was no escape they had the court appoint physicians to inquire into his mental condition, and, while they pronounced him sane, testified that the man was continually under the influence of opiates and apparently a physical and mental wreck. The penalty for the crime is from one to five years in the penitentiary.

The life of Dr. Palmer up to the time he committed the crime was an honorable one. He was a prominent politician; he was an elector on the republican presidential ticket in 1888, member of the medical board of pension examiners and a central figure at all conventions. He is a graduate of Rush medical college, and enjoyed a lucrative practice at the west end of the county.

THE GOVERNMENT WINS.

Illinois, Indiana and Ohio Lose a Suit to Recover Over $1,150,000.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Several state treasuries are not likely to be swelled by the half million dollars of which for years they have had hopes. The attempt to get the general government to keep its promise and compensate for the 2 per cent. fund lost by the states in the national road project, begun a good many years ago, has failed. A petition was filed in the court of claims by Indiana, Ohio and Illinois to recover this money. The amount they asked made a total of nearly $1,150,000. Arguments were heard last spring and Attorney General Hunt came on and presented the case of the Prairie state. Nobody seemed to think that there was much prospect of a successful suit against the United States, but the money claimed was worth trying for by a legal process. During the summer Judge Nutt, who was writing the decision, sent to the department of justice for some authorities which sustained the government. There was not much surprise, consequently, when on Monday he handed down a decision dismissing the petition of the state of Indiana on the ground that the 2 per cent. fund is not a trust fund, and also that the claim to recover is barred by the statute of limitations. The petitions of Illinois and Ohio will likewise be dismissed. An appeal will be taken to the supreme court, which may give the final judgment in two or three years.

HORRORS OF THE FAMINE.

Russian Peasants Driven to Robbery by the Pangs of Hunger.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 10.—Acts of brigandage by men rendered desperate by hunger are increasing in Russia. Hundreds of men employed on the railways in Kansam, Koursk and Voroness have plundered freight trains and marauded the country in gangs, sacking farms and mansions. The starving peasants devour any refuse they can find. A woman at Chelahinsk killed her three children and then hanged herself on the refusal of a rich neighbor to lend them money to prevent their starving.

LOSSES IN LATE GALES.

Underwriters Estimate the Damage to Shipping at Over $20,000,000.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10.—The loss to shipping by the September and October hurricanes is estimated by marine underwriters here to have been over $20,000,000, and ninety people are known to have perished. The loss of vessels at Martinique, where the storm first struck on the way north, was $5,000,000. Nearly every day brings news of some overdue or missing craft. Five transatlantic steamers, six barks, two brigs and at least twenty schooners are known to have foundered and become total losses.

A HEAVY LOSS.

An Army Paymaster Robbed of $3,360 at Fort Clark, Tex.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—A robbery of government funds from an army paymaster was reported to the war department Monday. Maj. Culver C. Sniffin arrived Saturday last at Fort Clark, Tex., from San Antonio with $3,360 in his possession. It being too late in the day to pay off the men he followed the custom of locking up the funds in one of the cells of the guardhouse, keeping the keys in his possession. Monday morning he found his chest rifled.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—Annie Besant makes her name rhyme with "peasant," but Walter Besant pronounces his name, according to late information, as Bes*sant*.

—The German empress has formed a league for the preservation of good habits among the Prussian ladies. The members bind themselves to discourage luxury, to wear simple dresses and to practice economy in the household.

—Albion W. Tourgee, the novelist, once spent six months in reading some tremendous works on birds in order to be accurate in one sentence which he was writing about the note or warble of some particular bird on the Hudson.

—While in her retreat in Venice Carmen Sylva, the poet-queen of Roumania, exhibited a great fondness for gliding about the narrow canals in her gondola. She is a tall, handsome and very distinguished-looking woman, with a pale face and rather cold eyes.

—Andrew Lang, who tried his own hand at versifying, utters the truth about poetry: "To rhyme is one thing, to be a poet quite another. A good deal of mortification would be avoided if young men and maidens only kept this obvious fact well posted in front of their vanity and their ambition."

—Patti has very elaborate precautions against burglars in her Welsh castle. Unless a certain level is raised it is impossible to open a window at night without causing the ringing of innumerable bells in the cottages of the gardeners and in the stable, while the same current of electricity releases a large dog from his kennel.

—Canon Scott Holland tells this story about Mr. Ruskin and one of his pupils. Said this eager disciple to his master: "Ah, Mr. Ruskin, the first moment that I entered the gallery at Florence I saw at once what you meant when asserting the supremacy of Botticelli." "Did you, in a moment!" remarked the great teacher; "it took me twenty years to find out that."

—Tolstoi recently received a letter from an American girl declaring that her fortune of $200,000 was twice as large as she needed, and asking what he would advise her to do with the surplus. At first he suggested that she burn the money, but later, having recognized the fact that this would benefit only the government, he sent another letter counseling his fair correspondent to devote her surplus wealth to charitable purposes.

—Dr. C. C. Abbott, the well known archæologist, began the study in which he made his reputation when he was a farmer near Trenton, N. J. His farm occupied a knoll overlooking the wide lowlands along the Delaware, where the Delaware Indians and their predecessors undoubtedly resorted in large numbers. From the river banks and from the plowed fields he gathered some 30,000 relics in clay, bone and stone, the product of the aborigines who once hunted, fished, camped, and manufactured their utensils there.

—As Mr. Kipling has so often been described as a young man of aggressive manner afflicted with "big head," the following extract from a Boston woman's report of a meeting with him is agreeable: "Mr. Kipling's manner in conversation reminds one strongly of his style in writing—there is a certain indescribable terseness and humor in all that he says. Best of all, however, is the entire freedom from conceit and egotism. It is of Rudyard Kipling the man, not of Rudyard Kipling the author, of whom you think as you talk with him.

HUMOROUS.

—Tommy—"Pa, may I ask you a question?" Pa—"Certainly, my child." Tommy—"Where is the wind when it doesn't blow?"

—Occasional Only.—Tenant—"Does this chimney always smoke like that?" Landlord—"Oh, no; only when there's a fire in the grate."—N. Y. Sun.

—"Talking about literary style, there goes a man noted for his finished sentences." "Indeed? Is he a novelist?" "No; he is an ex-convict."—Baltimore American.

—More Than Likely.—Patient—"Doctor, I fancy, somehow, I've got a touch of the gout." Doctor—"Fancy, my dear sir! If you had, you wouldn't fancy you'd know."—Fun.

—Poor Madge.—Madge—"I'm so sorry the fall is here." Jennie—"Why?" Madge—"Because I'll have to wear gloves in church and no one will see my new engagement ring."—Brooklyn Eagle.

—Chappie—"I am sorry to find that my ancestors were not always in the swim." Cholly—"You surprise me." Chappie—"Yaas. At the time of Noah they were in the ark."—Harper's Bazar.

—Dashaway—"That was a beautiful dress your friend, Mrs. Wickstick, had on the other night." Bingo—"Yes. It cost me $100." Dashaway—"How so?" Bingo—"My wife saw it."—Cloak Review.

—Limitation of a Theory.—Ethel—"After marriage we two shall be one, shan't we, George?" George—"Theoretically; though I doubt if they will make out our board bill that way."—N. Y. Sun.

—She—"Why, Charley, where have you been? I've been waiting an age for you." He—"Oh, but then your age is such a brief time, you know." She is more than ever of the opinion that Charley is such a dear fellow.—Boston Transcript.

—Maria—"You've got to take the baby now, I'm tired. You've only had him an hour, George." "I know that; but I've fastened my pedometer to him, and I've trotted him fifty-three miles. That's enough!"

—"And you rejected him?" "I did." "He has the reputation of being a large-hearted man." "That's the trouble with him; he is too large-hearted. He can love half a dozen women at the same time."—Cape Cod Item.

—"Any success in your agricultural enterprises this season, Jellaby?" "Doing finely, thank you. Got the hay-fever and sealed proposals from all the widows in the neighborhood to remove their weeds."—Baltimore American.

—Papa—"Why do you wish to marry him, Ethel?" Ethel—"Why, because he loves me." Papa—"Do you love him?" Ethel—"Why, no. I never thought of that. I've been too much interested in getting him to propose to have time to think of it."

—The Secret Was Safe.—"Why did you talk in French to Ethel last night?" "Because I had something to impart to her that I wished no one else to know." "But there was a French lady sitting close behind you." "Yes, but I have since discovered that she didn't understand a word we said."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

The Farmer and the Government.

That great magazine The Century, published by The Century Co., of New York City, is going to outdo its own unrivaled record in its programme for the coming year. Among its features is a series of articles on what the Government is doing and ought to do for the farmer, including "The Farmer's Discontent," "Cooperation," the Workings of the Department of Agriculture, etc. A novel of America and India by Rudyard Kipling, written with a young American author, is one of four novels which it will print, and the greatest American writers will furnish its short stories. The famous Spaniard, Emilio Castelar, will contribute a new Life of Columbus, to be magnificently illustrated; there will be articles on the World's Fair, by special arrangement with the managers; the humorist "Bill Nye" is to contribute a unique series, and different phases of New York life will be treated in splendid illustrated articles. The first of these New York articles is "The Bowery" in the November Century.

What It Must Come To.

Magistrate (a few years hence)—I anderstand that you were attacked by three footpads on your way home last night, and shot one of them. I fine you $10.

Citizen—What for?

Magistrate—For letting the other two get away. Next case.—Good News.

"A Yard of Roses."

One of the popular paintings at the New York Academy of Design was a yard-long panel of Roses. A crowd was always before it. One art critic exclaimed "Such a bit of nature should belong to all the people. It is too beautiful for one man to hide away."

The Youth's Companion, of Boston, seized the idea and spent twenty thousand dollars to reproduce the painting. The result has been a triumph of artistic delicacy and color.

The Companion makes this copy of the painting an autumn gift to each of its five hundred thousand subscribers. Any who may subscribe now for the first time and requests it, will receive "The Yard of Roses" without extra charge while the edition lasts.

Besides the gift of this beautiful picture all new subscribers will receive the Companion free from the time the subscription is received till January first, including the Thanksgiving and Christmas Double Numbers, and for a full year from that date. The price of the Companion is $1.75 a year.

Every family should take this brightest and best of illustrated literary papers in addition to its local paper.

"THANKS," said the guest to the colored man who brought his soap at last. "You have taken a great wait off my mind."—Washington Star.

IT is singular how a surgeon retains his popularity when he so often cuts his friends.

Big, but bad

—the old-fashioned pill. Bad to take, and bad to have taken. Inefficient, too. It's only temporary relief you can get from it.

Try something better. With Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets the benefit is lasting. They cleanse and regulate the liver, stomach and bowels. Taken in time, they prevent trouble. In any case, they cure it.

And they cure it easily; they're mild and gentle, but thorough and effective. There's no disturbance to the system, diet or occupation. One tiny, sugar-coated Pellet for a laxative—three for a cathartic. Sick and Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels are promptly relieved and permanently cured.

They're purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, the smallest, and the easiest to take—but besides that, they're the cheapest pill you can buy, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. You pay only for the good you get. This is true only of Dr. Pierce's medicines.

THE STATION DESPAIR.

We must trust the conductor, most surely;
Why millions of millions before
Have made this same journey securely
And come to that ultimate shore.
And we, we will reach it in season;
And ah, what a welcome is there!
Reflect then, how out of all reason
To stop at the station Despair.

Ay, midnights and many a potion
Of little black water have we
As we journey from ocean to ocean—
From sea until ultimate sea—
To that deep sea of seas, and all silence
Of passion, concern and of care—
That vast sea of Elen-set islands.
Don't stop at the station Despair!

Go forward, whatever may follow,
Go forward, friend-led, or alone;
Ah me, to leap off in some hollow
Or fen, in the night and unknown—
Leap off like a thief; try to hide you
From angels, all waiting you there!
Go forward! whatever betide you
Don't stop at the station Despair!

A NIGHT OF HORROR.

Thrilling Experience on the Roof of a Cathedral.

Have you never read of a person's hair turning gray in a single night? Of course you have. The old story books are full of such tales. I can remember dozens of them, stories reeking with gore and dank with dungeons and grewsome with ghosts or other uncanny things. The heroine and sometimes the hero goes to bed at night with hair as black as the raven's wing and along in the night come the horrors, whatever they are, and in the morning the raven hair has turned a snowy white.

I can remember, too, that I never used to take any stock in such stories. I used to hear them read and get up quite a respectable thrill at the most horrible portions, especially when the candle flickered awhile with a ghostly light and then went out, leaving everybody in total darkness just as a deep groan was heard or a long shuddering sigh like the wind through the weeping willows in a graveyard. Oh, yes! I was quite susceptible to touching passages like those; and I used to hurry up to bed and tuck my head under the clothes and shiver with the most timid of them. But somehow or other I could not accept the hair-turning part of the story. I knew that hair, black or white, could stand on end, but that a good head of black hair would bleach itself out between dark and daylight was a little too much to swallow.

I know better now. I have had a little experience of my own which—but perhaps it is best to tell the story just as it occurred.

It was on the roof of the cathedral at Milan. We had climbed the stairs in the late afternoon of a beautiful spring day after paying the custodian the insignificant price he asked for all the glories visible from the elevated position. We looked through the telescope—for another fee—and had each assured the others that we saw Mount Blanc perfectly well, without for a moment believing what the others said or convincing them that we told the truth. And we had ended our climbs by ascending to the highest point under the lantern—if it is a lantern—by the cork-screw staircase, which will scarcely permit any but the thinnest persons to pass when one is going up and the other coming down.

We were a party of four, and when the roof was reached the youngest proposed a ramble over that portion of the structure. To this all but myself assented. I was tired and proposed to rest awhile at the foot of the tower stairs, where the others were to pick me up on their return, so that we might all descend together. This was satisfactory and off they started.

For a time I was quite comfortable and paid no attention to the passage of time, but I suddenly noticed that it was getting dark and that my companions had not returned. I called to them first in a moderate tone of voice, then more loudly, but received no answer. Fearing that they would be belated on the roof I started in search of them. I walked the entire length of the ridge of the main roof and peered down all the side passages in the gathering dusk, but caught no glimpse of my companions. Then I descended to the roof of the aisle and made a search there, which was also fruitless. I became alarmed as the light failed and ran from one point to another, calling out as I ran, until I found to my great distress that I had lost my way. I could see far below me the lights of the great city and hear the distant rumbling of the carriages as they drove past on the stony streets. But I was as effectually lost for the moment as if I had been in the heart of an African jungle without a compass and no Stanley on the alert to hunt me up. In the excitement and despair which the consciousness of this fact produced I rushed about so wildly that I slipped and fell on a long flight of stone steps wet with the dew which had begun to fall. I was not conscious of any serious injury from the fall, but when I brought up at the foot of the stairs and tried to regain my footing I found to my despair and horror that I was utterly unable to move my limbs. I was paralyzed.

The mental agony I suffered is inconceivable. Yet curiously enough I spent the first moments in speculating as to the exact nature of the injury I had sustained. Had I broken my back or simply injured my spinal cord? I tried to recall what I had heard my doctor friends say about injuries of similar character, but could not seem to remember anything definite. The words "the fifth pair" flashed into my mind and appeared to connect themselves in some way with my condition; but whether it was the fifth pair of nerves or ribs or of something else I could not make out. I could not understand either how I could have been so seriously injured without any sensible shock; but that my power of locomotion was gone there was no doubt. I could move my hand, and I began to speculate on the number of things one could do with one's hands alone. This occupied me for what seemed to be an hour; but as the train of thought was interrupted by a clock striking the hour of midnight I concluded it must have been much longer and wondered I had not heard the preceding hours.

Suddenly the full horror of my condition flashed upon me. I was not only doomed to remain where I was, helpless and alone, during the long, chilly hours of the night, but there was no certainty that I would ever get away alive. My friends would never dream that I was there. They had undoubtedly concluded that I had gone down, and if they missed me would search everywhere but in the right place. It might be days before the particular spot in which I lay would be visited, and in that case it would be too late. Starvation would do for me, even if the injury I had received did not. In my anguish I shrieked aloud, but was dully conscious all the time that nobody could hear me. Visitors and custodians alike must have departed hours before; and even if my cries were heard from the streets below nobody would attribute them to their real source.

To the feeling of acute anguish succeeded one of blank despair. I no longer speculated on the possibility of being discovered dead or alive. There was a dull leaden feeling at my chest and I found myself repeating mechanically old rhymes and jingles and saying the alphabet backward, as I once learned to do in seeking relief from insomnia. Yet at the same time I was conscious that my whole life was passing in review before me as they say it does when one is drowning or being hanged. I remembered that saying, too, and without any cessation of the review I wondered in my double consciousness if I were undergoing the sensations of a drowning man or of one being hanged, and I wished I could put them down on paper for the benefit of the rest of mankind. What struck me as singular was that the clocks kept on striking twelve. The second time they did this I thought I must have lost consciousness for an entire day and that this was the second midnight. But when the third stroke of twelve came from half a dozen clocks I knew it could not be two days since I had fallen. I thought first that I had become demented; and then it occurred to me that if I were I could not reason about it in that fashion so the clocks themselves must be crazy. This theory satisfied me until the striking began again, when I went off in another fantastic speculation. My friends had discovered that I was missing and were having the bells rung to keep my spirits up.

Oh! the long, long, weary hours I spent in waiting for a glimpse of daylight. I had no hope that daylight would bring me any relief, but the prospect of staying where it was endlessly midnight seemed unendurable. I groaned and wept and dug my nails into the palms of my hands until it seemed as if the blood would come; but I did not even feel any sense of pain.

It must have been after the clocks had struck midnight a dozen times or more—I kept no exact account—that I saw in the distance at what seemed to be the farther end of the cathedral roof two faint glimmers of light. Presently there were two more, and then two more, until there was a regular procession of them. I tried to shout, but had become so weak with cold and suffering that I could not raise my voice above a whisper. The lights nevertheless approached, growing gradually stronger until I could see that they were borne by several black-robed figures who were marching beside a coffin. As the procession moved slowly towards me I began to wonder what it meant and whether funerals took place at midnight on the roof of Milan cathedral. Then I speculated a moment on the propriety of disturbing the obsequies even in my extreme need. Suddenly it dawned on me that this was my own funeral, and I knew that I was either dead or had gone mad. In the supreme anguish of this discovery all memory of past suffering was blotted out and I entered on a new period of the most exquisite torture. Fortunately it was of brief duration. As the foremost of the moving figures reached me I felt a grasp on my arm and a voice called in my ear:

"Wake up, father; it's time to be going down. I guess you must have had your yoke turned."

It was my daughter, and beside her were the rest of the party, flushed with their ramble on the roof. I straightened out my cramped limbs, which must have gone to sleep about the time I did, and pulled out my watch. I had been there just fifteen minutes.

I don't mean to be understood that my hair really did turn gray in that night of horror on Milan cathedral. In the first place there is not much of it and what there is has been tolerably gray for some years. But I do mean to say that I am no longer incredulous as to the possibility of such a capillary change as the story books tell about. I am quite sure that if any man or woman really had just such an experience as I thought I had his or her hair would turn gray provided, of course, he or she had any hair that was not gray already.—Detroit Free Press.

A Logical Deduction.

Having stated that plants were fertilized by means of insects carrying pollen from one plant to another, the professor proceeded to humorously explain how old maids helped nature's processes. The humble bees carry the pollen; the field mice eat the humble bees; therefore, the more field mice the fewer humble bees and less pollen and variation of plants. But cats devour field mice, and old maids protect cats; therefore, the more old maids the more cats; the fewer field mice the more bees. Hence old maids are the cause of variety in plants. Thereupon a sophomore with a single eyeglass, an English umbrella, a box coat, and with his trousers rolled up at the bottom, rose and asked:

"I sa-a-y, professah, what is the cause—ah—of old maids, don't you know?"

"Perhaps Miss Jones can tell you," suggested the professor.

"Dudes," said Miss Jones, sharply, and without a moment's hesitation.—Albany Journal.

The Fox and Grapes.

A fox in search of food and adventure espied a large bunch of juicy, unhookable grapes, hanging from a lofty vine. He watched them for some time with hungry eyes. In the meantime a big, soft hen slunk out almost from under his feet and disappeared in the gloaming.

Moral: Often, while a person is building castles in the air, his golden opportunity on earth skips by.—Albany Argus.

The Largest State.

You may always depend upon a boy knowing a great deal more than anybody else and saying it right out. A Detroit school-teacher the other day tackled a ten-year-old pupil.

"What is the largest state in the union?" she asked.

"Matrimony," answered the boy promptly, and the teacher has been wondering ever since where he got the information.—Detroit Free Press.

—Was "In It."—Simpson (to rival)—"I hear Cora gave you the mitten?" Jimpson (joyfully)—"She did, and her blessed little hand accompanied it!"—N. Y. Herald.

DOMESTIC CONCERNS.

—It is said that a strong solution of epsom salts in water will cure burns if applied immediately.

—To remove warts, wet them thoroughly with oil of cinnamon three times a day until they disappear.

—The best way of ridding a house of rats is to fill all the holes that can be found with pounded glass, and seal them up with plaster of paris and tin, if you wish. Then thoroughly clean the premises, and see that there are no garbage pails left about to attract rats, and secure the services of a good cat.

—Desiccated Rice: This is a delicious dish for warm weather, requiring no cooking. Take two teacupfuls of rice, add a teaspoonful of salt, a little grated nutmeg and one quart of milk; stir well, and put in the refrigerator the last thing at night. Serve for breakfast with sugar and cream.—Good Housekeeping.

—Fish Balls: Prepare codfish and potato as above, making the mixture more dry by using a piece of butter instead of milk or cream. Form into balls, not very large, and perfectly round; dip in beaten egg, and fry in a deep kettle of very hot lard. They should be of a nice brown, and if rightly made and if the lard is hot enough, will retain their shape.—Boston Budget.

—Banana Custard: Scald a quart of milk, add a pinch of salt, one large tablespoonful corn starch mixed smooth with cold water, and four heaping tablespoonfuls sugar. When the corn starch is cooked in the milk stir in two well-beaten eggs, and at once remove from the fire and stir until partly cool, to keep it thin and smooth. Slice four or five bananas very thin into a glass dish, sift powdered sugar over, and when the custard is cold pour it over the bananas. It is then ready to serve.—Orange Judd Farmer.

—Currie Soup: One ox cheek, four onions, one bunch of pot herbs, half a pound of rice, one teaspoonful of currie powder, a little pepper and salt, three quarts of water. Cut the meat from the ox-cheek and soak it for two hours; then put it in a stewpan with four onions, cut in slices, and the savory herbs; add three quarts of water, stew slowly, and remove the scum frequently. Then strain it, add to it half a pound of soaked rice, the teaspoonful of currie powder, pepper and salt to your taste, and stew it again for four hours.—Boston Herald.

—Frizzled Beef: If you prepare your own dried beef, have a very sharp knife so you can cut it thin; the quantity of course depends on the size of your family. If you get it at the meat-market ask them to send you chipped beef as they have a machine for shaving it. Have ready some hot water in a spider, throw the beef in and mix together a few spoonfuls of cold butter and a little flour until smooth; then stir in with the beef when boiling. Half as much flour as butter generally thickens it enough. Serve beef and gravy together. Some people prefer milk to cook it in.—Housekeeper.

—Hard Soap—Six pounds of salsoda, six pounds of grease, three and one-fourth pounds of unslacked lime, four gallons of rainwater. Boil the soda, lime and water together twenty minutes, then remove from the stove and let settle. When clear, dip off the liquid and add to the grease; put on the stove and boil until stringy, take it off to cool, add two ounces of oil of sassafras, stir and pour into earthen dishes. When it is hard, cut into cakes and put away to dry. If this soap is partly of mutton-tallow, and has two ounces of glycerine stirred in it, it is excellent for the toilet: Care must be taken not to allow any of the sediment to drain off when pouring the liquid from the lime and salsoda.—Good Housekeeping.

RICH AND UNIQUE.

Various Articles Recently Introduced by the Jewelers.

A gold ship on waves of olivines is a new brooch.

A geranium leaf of green enamel is a new design for a brooch.

A back comb with rays crowned by moon-stones is a lovely ornament.

The circular pins with fine designs in black enamel are adapted for mourning.

A diamond heart enwrapped with a glittering green serpent is a characteristic ornament.

Cloak clasps of perforated silver, ornamented with colored enamels, are among the new and pretty things of the season.

Some of the new sleeve-buttons are interesting. Turbine wheels made of small jewels of different tints attached to bars are a new design.

Large round convex gold single buttons with a dead finish are decorated with a wreath in relief in a silver finish, accentuated here and there with a diamond.

Little square cups of repousse silver, in form resembling the paper cups for biscuits and ices, are intended for the same purpose. They come in cases accompanied by suitable spoons.

Nothing is probably more useless, or perhaps it should be said, less used than a bon-bon spoon; at the same time they are so pretty that there is no abatement in their favor at present.

Chatelaines for watches are rivaling queen chains in popularity. Wrought gold resembling old-fashioned twisted brooches and terminating in two short chains to hold the watch are produced in numbers. They are very pretty and also have a business-like look, which the more fanciful chatelaines they superseded have not.

Back combs and hair pins are more popular and more enriched than ever. Amber shell sticks never more than three in number are surmounted by the richest tops in gold and jewels. Some of the designs are worth a word; one has a hoop twined with a green ribbon and diamond flowers. Within hangs a branch of jeweled flowers.—Jewelers' Circular.

Her Inspiration.

A smart young fellow who was newly-wed asked his wife what she would do if he came home intoxicated. She said she had never given the matter a thought, but should probably be inspired by the occasion. When, a week later, her hubby came whooping and staggering home she met him at the door with a pail of ice-water and soused him from head to foot before he could explain that he was only shamming. There is prohibition in that household for keeps.—Detroit Free Press.

—Customer—"Er—how about the lasting qualities of this hat?" New Clerk—"Oh, that's all right. We've had it in the store for more than five years, and you can see for yourself it is as good as new."—Indianapolis Journal.

All Shrunk Up

—the flannels that are washed without Pearline; besides, they're worn out by hard rubbing. Wash flannels with Pearline, and they will be softer, brigher and better. They will last twice as long; they will look like new while they last. Every package tells how it's done; do as it says, and it will be done well.

Danger

As one wash is sufficient to ruin flannels, great care should be exercised as to the use of the many imitations which are being offered by unscrupulous grocers or peddlers. 291 JAMES PYLE, New York.

DELANO DIARY.

—Joseph Haumont's family moved to Minneapolis on Monday.

—Apples are cheap and apple dumplings and pies are in fashion.

—Maxfield's lumber yard is receiving new lumber almost daily.

—Mrs. M. A. Chance offers her South Third street house for rent.

—Some one can find a job as Salesman for L. L. May, St. Paul. See their add.

—Consult Sturman & Murphy if you are in need of anything in their line. See their new advertisement.

—Neighbor Mowatt has been still further enlarging and improving his already commodious residence this week.

—M. A. O'Hair has a new harness for his double team and turns out quite a stylish rig. He proposes to let none pass unless he desires.

—Rockford station is to have a new agent. W. L. Haggerty goes to Annandale where he is sure to give satisfaction. He did at Rockford,

—Mr. Calvin Wasson, of Independence was taken to Minneapolis on Tuesday where he was adjudged insane and sent to St. Peter on Wednesday.

—Doctor Ames, of Rockford, called on us yesterday, and informed us that he had not gone to Dwight, yet. He says he will not go before January.

—H. H. Albachten gets his GAZETTE now at Lester Prairie where he has located in his blacksmithing business. He was over on Saturday on business. He says he leaves here owing no man a dollar.

—Mr. Welch, of the firm of Welch, Botkin & Welch, Attorneys at Law, Minneapolis, made us a pleasant call on Saturday, and set up a couple of lines for the boys just to see that he hadn't forgotten how.

—Mr. Erwig, Delano's fashionable tailor is hard at work now-a-days. People must have new suits for winter and Ole knows how to make them, and keeps on hand a fine assortment of cloths from which to make the best.

—On Monday, Peter Church received from Minneapolis a fine marble and granite monument to be placed in the Watertown cemetery to mark the last resting place of Frank their only son who died a few months ago. It cost $400.00.

—Thomas Worthy is having a fine 40 feet steel tower and windmill erected on his farm this week by Murphy & Sturman. William Murphy the famous tubular well man is bossing the job. Tom is bound to have water enough.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. Fletcher Powers spent the 57th anniversary of their wedding on Wednesday, Nov. 11, with their daughter at Young's Hotel. The old people are well and favorably known as having been among the earliest settlers in this part of the country.

—Fair day last Saturday was all that could be asked for a Minnesota November day. A big crowd of people was in from every direction. Two droves of horses from the far west were on sale. Cows are bringing better prices than for the past several months.

—In the law suit on Saturday before Justice Billings, between C. R. Carlton and John Kaeppe brought on account of a fire set by Mr. K. which ran through 25 acres of Mr. C's. woods and did damage to his property verdict was rendered in favor of the plaintiff for the amount claimed, $31.40.

—Mr. Joseph Van Eman, who has been spending a couple of months in Pennsylvania where he was called by the sickness of his elder brother who died a couple of weeks after Joseph's arrival, returned home Saturday a week ago. He thinks that country don't agree with him very well.

—On Sunday evening Rev. J. R. Davies preached from the text found in Daniel Chap. v ver. 27, "Thou art weighed in the balance and found wanting." The new preacher is a young man full of enthusiasm and works zealously in the cause to which he has dedicated himself. As an eloquent and earnest advocate he would bring down the balances in his favor. He does not mince matters much but talks plain truths.

—On Monday, Dr. J. S. Shrader went to St. Cloud where he, in future, expects to practice the healing art. The Doctor has been in Delano for several years but for the past year has felt that a larger field would be more congenial to his nature and consequently, seeing an opening in the Saintly city he expects soon to move his family there. Success to you doctor.

—On Wednesday, notwithstanding the McKinley bill, Mr. C. W. Ingerson received notice that he had a barrel of choice apples at the express office. We do not know if they are in return for the compliments to that Democratic Governor recently elected in old York State or not. Mr. I. informed us though that he suspected a nephew of his in Michigan who has a fruit farm of having sent them to him.

—Read J. W. Grant's new add.

—Eph Ball, Will Eppel and others of the thrashing crew from here to the west have returned.

—Among our exchanges this week we were pleased to find the Wright County Times once more. Mr. French says we should have had it all the time.

—Vol. 1 No. 2 of the Clearwater Review reached us this week this makes the double quartette of Wright full again. It is a bright 6 column quarto.

—On Tuesday, Nov. 10, Mr. Charles Eppel and Miss Mary Schaust were married by Rev. Zawodzki, at the Catholic church in Delano. A large number of friends were present from far and near and an enjoyable occasion had. The usual presents were received. The new family will reside on the farm adjoining that of the father of the groom. Charley is as good a farmer as our country affords and has by industry and perseverance succeeded in making his piece of land look as well as the best. Both were children of this neighborhood and are highly respected by a large circle of friends all of whom wish them long and happy lives.

Personals.

Mac Belt is in town to-day, visiting friends.

J. R. Gardner of Minneapolis is in town to-day.

Michael Jacobs and John Wagner, of Loretto, visited Delano yesterday.

Mrs. Peter Church, of Minneapolis, after a visit here returned home on Tuesday.

F. Wegan, of Buffalo, was calling on the Delanoites, on Wednesday, in the interest of the Singer Sewing Machine.

Jerry Brothers was calling on friends in Delano on Monday. He is working on a farm near the county seat.

N. K. Coffin was home from Willmar where he has been at work on the new depot, over Sunday with his family.

Isaac Podas and daughter, of Buffalo, on their way home from Cokato, their old home, passed through Delano on Wednesday.

Mr. Logan VanEman, of Vanceville, Pa. was visiting his brother "Uncle Joe" this week. He expects to spend the winter with his daughter Mrs. Pidgeon, of Buffalo.

WATERTOWN WAYS.

Charley Johnson returned last Thursday after a two months sojourn in Grand Forks and vicinity.

Mr. V. Heck spent a few days in the cities last week laying in his winter stock of hardware.

Mrs. C. G. Halgren has been visiting friends in Minneapolis two or three days this week.

Mrs. G. U. Miller has been visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dressler, of Minneapolis, for the past two weeks.

The literary society opened up for the Winter last Saturday evening with a fair programme with promises of better ones in the future.

We understand that Mr. J. Fesch a son of one of the most prosperous farmers of Watertown is to be married to Miss Keiser, living near Swede Lake, in the near future.

Mrs. Frank Kurtz has about completed her new residence on Lewis street which is a credit to her and to Watertown also.

Mr. Jacob Yager and J. F. Campbell took in the cities during the past week.

Mrs. E. F. Burns, of Norwood, was doing business in Watertown on Fair day.

Messrs. Bernick and Walters, of Delano, exhibited as fine a stallion as ever graced the streets, of Watertown, last Fair day.

Dr. Sheppard, of Waconia, assisted by Drs. Shannon, of Watertown, and Small, of Excelsior, amputated the arm of Mr. Fred Bear, a young man of St. Bonefacius who had the misfortune to get accidently shot last Tuesday evening while out hunting.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Leiter of the town of Franklin were made happy upon the arrival of an eleven pound son in their family last Sunday morning.

Remember the Sunday school concert at the M. E. church on Sunday evening next.

Mr. G. U. Miller did business in Minneapolis on Tuesday of this week.

Mr. J. C. Edwards has received an increase of two dollars per month on his pension.

Rev. and Mrs. B. E. Sherwin have been spending most of this week in Minneapolis visiting with friends.

We ought to have a sidewalk on all the principle streets of Watertown. Why not spend the rest of the money that is in the village treasury for this purpose? We think this would accommodate the people of our village about as much as any improvement that could be placed in Watertown as well as the public in general. Lets have some sidewalk. What say you, city fathers?

INDEPENDENCE.

As the Democrat chanticleer crowed his lusty crow from his barnyard perch a week ago last Tuesday morning, we thought of the bloody field of battle where the McKinleyites and Campbellites would meet in deadly conflict over the chief executive office of the State of Ohio but the McKinleyites prevailed over the Campbellites and we submit to the voice of the ballot box and McKinley reform.

Did not expect such fine weather after the Ohio election but it still continues. The roads are fine and who would not rejoice over the fine weather we have in Minnesota.

Ben Pagenkoff was married on Monday, 2d present month and the boys serenaded him on Saturday evening 7th. Took the boys a long time to get ready.

J. Howe, of Minneapolis, has been rusticating in Independence for a few days playing he was Nimrod killing grey squirrels, rabbits, etc.

The last job of threshing was finished in this nieghberhood last Thursday.

Rev. J. N. Potter, of Rockford, has begun a protracted effort at Armstrong.

Qurterly meeting will be held at the Independence A. C. Church next Saturday and Sunday. Everybody is invited to come.

The Prohibition club of Independence will hold their next meeting Tuesday evening Dec. 1.

B. H. Hall has got a new windmill.

Independence was well represented at the monthly stock fair held in Delano last Saturday. It was a good place to buy and sell stock

Mrs. Henry Kent, of St. Paul, was calling on friends in Independence last week. Mrs. Kent was a resident of Independence years ago.

Dr. O. R. Fassett, of Rockford attended church at Armstrong last Sunday.

Some people pretend to say farmers are getting more for their produce now than at any other time since the war. These fellows must be a second edition of Rip VanWinkle. Twenty years is a long time to sleep but sometimes they do it in their mind. But people will follow in the old way as long as time lasts and they will not leave their old notions. "Entreat me not to leave thee or to return from following after thee for whether thou goest I will go," etc. Our crops were very good the present season but have seen them just as good many times before and prices paid equally as good.

A POPULAR FAMILY.

JENNIE: "How is it, Kate, that you always seem to 'catch on' to the last new thing? Do what I may, you always seem to get ahead of me."

KATE: "I don't know: I certainly do not make any exertion in that direction."

JENNIE: "Well, during the last few months, for example, you have taken up painting, without any teacher; you came to the rescue when Miss Lafargo deserted her Delsarte class so suddenly, and certainly we are all improving in grace under your instruction: I heard you telling Tommy Eames last evening how his club made mistakes in playing baseball; you seem to be up on all the latest 'fads,' and know just what to do under all circumstances; you entertain beautifully; and in the last month you have improved so in health, owing, you tell me, to your physical culture exercises. Where do you get all of your information from in this little out-of-the way place?—for you never go to the city."

KATE: "Why, Jennie, you will make me vain. I have only one source of information, but it is surprising how it meets all wants. I very seldom hear of anything new but what the next few days bring me full information on the subject. Magic? No! Magazine! And a great treasure it is to us all, for it really furnishes the reading for the whole household: father has given up his magazine that he has taken for years, as he says this one gives more and better information on the subjects of the day; and mother says that it is that that makes her such a famous housekeeper. In fact, we all agree that it is the only really FAMILY magazine published, as we have sent for samples of all of them, and find that one is all for men, another all for women, and another for children only, while this one suits every one of us; so we only need to take one instead of several, and that is where the economy comes in, for it is only $2.00 a year. Perhaps you think I am too lavish in my praise; but I will let you see ours, or, better still, send 10 cents to the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th street, New York, for a sample copy, and I shall always consider that I have done you a great favor; and may be you will be cutting us out, as you say we have the reputation of being the best informed family in town. If that be so, it is Demorest's Family Magazine that does it."

IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN.

The sun went down in a blood-red cloud,
The wind breathed a low, harsh sigh,
And a strange, weird veil like a sombre shroud,
Hung down from the murky sky;
The house dogs bayed at the angry moon
That shed a dim, sad light,
And the crickets chirped a doleful tune
To the ghosts above the night.

It was such a night as brave men hate,
When the darkness seems to hide
But dimly shapes that congregate,
Or through the shadows glide:
No star to point the traveler home,
Nor light on land or sea—
A night when ghost and witch and gnome
Hold fiendish revelry.

Through Dead Man's Gulch, by the haunted mill
That stands like a spectre white,
With its broken arm so gaunt and still,
A footman passed that night,
He trudged along till from without
The shadows stood a man;
But the footman did not faint nor shout,
He neither turned nor ran.

He stood his ground, brave to defend
His every act and deed,
Till the shadow spoke and said, "My friend,
Can you give me a chew of t'weed?"
The chew was given—each went his way—
There was neither death nor din,
But I've often thought, blackaday:
How sad it might have been.

DELANO DIARY.

—Joseph Haumont's family moved to Minneapolis on Monday.

—Apples are cheap and apple dumplings and pies are in fashion.

—Maxfield's lumber yard is receiving new lumber almost daily.

—Mrs. M. A. Chance offers her South Third street house for rent.

—Some one can find a job as Salesman for L. L. May, St. Paul. See their add.

—Consult Sturman & Murphy if you are in need of anything in their line. See their new advertisement.

—Neighbor Mowatt has been still further enlarging and improving his already commodious residence this week.

—M. A. O'Hair has a new harness for his double team and turns out quite a stylish rig. He proposes to let none pass unless he desires.

—Rockford station is to have a new agent. W. L. Haggerty goes to Annandale where he is sure to give satisfaction. He did at Rockford,

—Mr. Calvin Wasson, of Independence was taken to Minneapolis on Tuesday where he was adjudged insane and sent to St. Peter on Wednesday.

—Doctor Ames, of Rockford, called on us yesterday, and informed us that he had not gone to Dwight, yet. He says he will not go before January.

—H. H. Albachten gets his GAZETTE now at Lester Prairie where he has located in his blacksmithing business. He was over on Saturday on business. He says he leaves here owing no man a dollar.

—Mr. Welch, of the firm of Welch, Botkin & Welch, Attorneys at Law, Minneapolis, made us a pleasant call on Saturday, and set up a couple of lines for the boys just to see that he hadn't forgotten how.

—Mr. Erwig, Delano's fashionable tailor is hard at work now-a-days. People must have new suits for winter and Ole knows how to make them, and keeps on hand a fine assortment of cloths from which to make the best.

—On Monday, Peter Church received from Minneapolis a fine marble and granite monument to be placed in the Watertown cemetery to mark the last resting place of Frank their only son who died a few months ago. It cost $400.00.

—Thomas Worthy is having a fine 40 feet steel tower and windmill erected on his farm this week by Murphy & Sturman. William Murphy the famous tubular well man is bossing the job. Tom is bound to have water enough.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. Fletcher Powers spent the 57th anniversary of their wedding on Wednesday, Nov. 11, with their daughter at Young's Hotel. The old people are well and favorably known as having been among the earliest settlers in this part of the country.

—Fair day last Saturday was all that could be asked for a Minnesota November day. A big crowd of people was in from every direction. Two droves of horses from the far west were on sale. Cows are bringing better prices than for the past several months.

—In the law suit on Saturday before Justice Billings, between C. R. Carlton and John Kaeppe brought on account of a fire set by Mr. K. which ran through 25 acres of Mr. C's. woods and did damage to his property verdict was rendered in favor of the plaintiff for the amount claimed, $31.40.

—Mr. Joseph Van Eman, who has been spending a couple of months in Pennsylvania where he was called by the sickness of his elder brother who died a couple of weeks after Joseph's arrival, returned home Saturday a week ago. He thinks that country don't agree with him very well.

—On Sunday evening Rev. J. R. Davies preached from the text found in Daniel Chap. v ver. 27, "Thou art weighed in the balance and found wanting." The new preacher is a young man full of enthusiasm and works zealously in the cause to which he has dedicated himself. As an eloquent and earnest advocate he would bring down the balances in his favor. He does not mince matters much but talks plain truths.

—On Monday, Dr. J. S. Shrader went to St. Cloud where he, in future, expects to practice the healing art. The Doctor has been in Delano for several years but for the past year has felt that a larger field would be more congenial to his nature and consequently, seeing an opening in the Saintly city he expects soon to move his family there. Success to you doctor.

—On Wednesday, notwithstanding the McKinley bill, Mr. C. W. Ingerson received notice that he had a barrel of choice apples at the express office. We do not know if they are in return for the compliments to that Democratic Governor recently elected in old York State or not. Mr. I. informed us though that he suspected a nephew of his in Michigan who has a fruit farm of having sent them to him.

—Read J. W. Grant's new add.

—Eph Ball, Will Eppel and others of the thrashing crew from here to the west have returned.

—Among our exchanges this week we were pleased to find the Wright County Times once more. Mr. French says we should have had it all the time.

—Vol. 1 No. 2 of the Clearwater Review reached us this week this makes the double quartette of Wright full again. It is a bright 6 column quarto.

—On Tuesday, Nov. 10, Mr. Charles Eppel and Miss Mary Schaust were married by Rev. Zawodzki, at the Catholic church in Delano. A large number of friends were present from far and near and an enjoyable occasion had. The usual presents were received. The new family will reside on the farm adjoining that of the father of the groom. Charley is as good a farmer as our country affords and has by industry and perseverance succeeded in making his piece of land look as well as the best. Both were children of this neighborhood and are highly respected by a large circle of friends all of whom wish them long and happy lives.

Personals.

Mac Belt is in town to-day, visiting friends.

J. R. Gardner of Minneapolis is in town to-day.

Michael Jacobs and John Wagner, of Loretto, visited Delano yesterday.

Mrs. Peter Church, of Minneapolis, after a visit here returned home on Tuesday.

F. Wegan, of Buffalo, was calling on the Delanoites, on Wednesday, in the interest of the Singer Sewing Machine.

Jerry Brothers was calling on friends in Delano on Monday. He is working on a farm near the county seat.

N. K. Coffin was home from Willmar where he has been at work on the new depot, over Sunday with his family.

Isaac Podas and daughter, of Buffalo, on their way home from Cokato, their old home, passed through Delano on Wednesday.

Mr. Logan VanEman, of Vanceville, Pa. was visiting his brother "Uncle Joe" this week. He expects to spend the winter with his daughter Mrs. Pidgeon, of Buffalo.

WATERTOWN WAYS.

Charley Johnson returned last Thursday after a two months sojourn in Grand Forks and vicinity.

Mr. V. Heck spent a few days in the cities last week laying in his winter stock of hardware.

Mrs. C. G. Halgren has been visiting friends in Minneapolis two or three days this week.

Mrs. G. U. Miller has been visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dressler, of Minneapolis, for the past two weeks.

The literary society opened up for the Winter last Saturday evening with a fair programme with promises of better ones in the future.

We understand that Mr. J. Fesch a son of one of the most prosperous farmers of Watertown is to be married to Miss Keiser, living near Swede Lake, in the near future.

Mrs. Frank Kurtz has about completed her new residence on Lewis street which is a credit to her and to Watertown also.

Mr. Jacob Yager and J. F. Campbell took in the cities during the past week.

Mrs. E. F. Burns, of Norwood, was doing business in Watertown on Fair day.

Messrs. Bernick and Walters, of Delano, exhibited as fine a stallion as ever graced the streets, of Watertown, last Fair day.

Dr. Sheppard, of Waconia, assisted by Drs. Shannon, of Watertown, and Small, of Excelsior, amputated the arm of Mr. Fred Bear, a young man of St. Bonefacius who had the misfortune to get accidently shot last Tuesday evening while out hunting.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Leiter of the town of Franklin were made happy upon the arrival of an eleven pound son in their family last Sunday morning.

Remember the Sunday school concert at the M. E. church on Sunday evening next.

Mr. G. U. Miller did business in Minneapolis on Tuesday of this week.

Mr. J. C. Edwards has received an increase of two dollars per month on his pension.

Rev. and Mrs. B. E. Sherwin have been spending most of this week in Minneapolis visiting with friends.

We ought to have a sidewalk on all the principle streets of Watertown. Why not spend the rest of the money that is in the village treasury for this purpose? We think this would accommodate the people of our village about as much as any improvement that could be placed in Watertown as well as the public in general. Lets have some sidewalk. What say you, city fathers?

INDEPENDENCE.

As the Democrat chanticleer crowed his lusty crow from his barnyard perch a week ago last Tuesday morning, we thought of the bloody field of battle where the McKinleyites and Campbellites would meet in deadly conflict over the chief executive office of the State of Ohio but the McKinleyites prevailed over the Campbellites and we submit to the voice of the ballot box and McKinley reform.

Did not expect such fine weather after the Ohio election but it still continues. The roads are fine and who would not rejoice over the fine weather we have in Minnesota.

Ben Pagenkoff was married on Monday, 2d present month and the boys serenaded him on Saturday evening 7th. Took the boys a long time to get ready.

J. Howe, of Minneapolis, has been rusticating in Independence for a few days playing he was Nimrod killing grey squirrels, rabbits, etc.

The last job of threshing was finished in this nieghberhood last Thursday.

Rev. J. N. Potter, of Rockford, has begun a protracted effort at Armstrong.

Qurterly meeting will be held at the Independence A. C. Church next Saturday and Sunday. Everybody is invited to come.

The Prohibition club of Independence will hold their next meeting Tuesday evening Dec. 1.

B. H. Hall has got a new windmill.

Independence was well represented at the monthly stock fair held in Delano last Saturday. It was a good place to buy and sell stock

Mrs. Henry Kent, of St. Paul, was calling on friends in Independence last week. Mrs. Kent was a resident of Independence years ago.

Dr. O. R. Fassett, of Rockford attended church at Armstrong last Sunday.

Some people pretend to say farmers are getting more for their produce now than at any other time since the war. These fellows must be a second edition of Rip Van Winkle. Twenty years is a long time to sleep but sometimes they do it in their mind. But people will follow in the old way as long as time lasts and they will not leave their old notions. "Entreat me not to leave thee or to return from following after thee for whether thou goest I will go," etc. Our crops were very good the present season but have seen them just as good many times before and prices paid equally as good.

"A Tariff on Coffee is a Tax, Unquestionably."—Senator C. K. Davis at Buffalo.

If tariff on coffee is a tax, tariff on sugar is a tax, tariff on tin is a tax, tariff on knives and pearl buttons and tariff on anything that has to be paid is tax. If you smuggle goods the tariff may be escaped, but that does not destroy the truth that TARIFF IS A TAX.

Thanksgiving Day.

Thanksgiving day was established as an annual religeous festival in the early days of this country. It was suggested by the Hebrew feast of tabarnacles or "feast of the ingathering at the end of the year." There is record of the official appointment of days of thanksgiving as early as 1832 in Massachusetts Bay and in 1631 in Plymouth. The Dutch governors of New Netherlands had thanksgiving days in 1644 to 1664 occasionally. New York kept the day in 1775 and 1760. During the Revolution Congress annually recommended the observance of a thanksgiving day as a National institution. After peace was declared in 1784 there seems to have been no National observance of a thanksgiving day until 1789, the year of the inauguration of George Washington as the first President of the U. S. During the civil war President Lincoln in 1863 and 1864 issued national proclamations, since which time his successors in office have kept up the practice until the last Thursday of November has become the thanksgiving day for the 60,000,000 people of this glorious country and on this day religeous services are held in the different churches throughout the land and thanks rendered to the Giver of all good. Not only are religeous services held, but young and old vie with each other in making of it a day of general visiting. Families come together on this day from distant States in many instances and enjoy a visit with the folks at home, and partake once more of the thanksgiving feast prepared by loving hands. In our country this year, we have unusual cause to be thankful for the general peace, plenty, and prosperity that has prevailed among us. In our State we have reason to be thankful for the abundant harvest given us by Him who has promised "a seed time and a harvest." In our county, and villages and homes we have abundant proof of a kind Heavenly Father's goodness to us in the universal good health and general well feeling of everybody. For all these and many more reasons we should as far as possible give due observance to this National holiday in a way befitting the occasion by, where possible, desisting from the usual toil and trouble of worldly matters, for a time, while we attend church and unite with others in giving thanks for the manifold blessings bestowed with a bounteous hand upon us. And by uniting in family groups, and neighborly groups and there enjoying the society of friends for a season and pledging ourselves to become more deserving of these rich blessings.

This is a day fully appreciated by the little folks, who put it along with Christmas and 4th of July as one of the happy days of the year, and while they visit at grandma's or aunt's or at some good neighbor's and enjoy the thanksgiving dinner, they are happy and with the older people are truly thankful for Thanksgiving Day.

WILLIAM J. FLORENCE, the comedian died at the Centennial Hotel, Philadelphia, Thursday, Nov. 19.

Two Tailor Swindlers.

A couple of swindlers, who have been working the smaller towns of the state were in St. Paul yesterday, but promptly left on becoming aware that the police had descriptions of them. They are believed to have come to Minneapolis. The fellows carry sample cases containing patterns of cloth, which they state has never paid duty, having been smuggled over by the captain of a Cunard liner. They sell suits by sample for a low figure and take a deposit to bind the sale. A tailor is supposed to be coming along in a day or two to take the customers measure and have the clothes made and delivered. The tailor never shows up and the victim is out the amount of his deposit. The plan has been worked quite extensively in Mankato and other towns in the state.—Minneapolis Times.

The Dollar.

From the Annandale Post we take the following article on our unit of commerce "the dollar":

"The opposition to the remonetizing silver, by those whose property is chiefly in bonds and mortgages, I can comprehend, as the more the purchasing power of money can be increased in the same proportion their property is increased in value without any corresponding increase in commodities or real property.

But why the debtor class and the holders of real property should oppose the remonetizing of silver, is incomprehensible to me.

The cry is raised by the former class:—"we want the merchandise value of the dollar in the dollar," just as though it makes any difference whether the merchandise value of the dollar is one mill or one hundred cents, so long as it pays a dollar of debt or buys a dollars worth of flour or sugar! A one hundred dollar greenback pays that amount of debt and buys as much of any commodity as that amount of gold, and how much is the merchandise value of that greenback?

The fact is, money, be it either gold, silver, or paper, is only used as a measure of values, and it is immaterial what is used so long as it is recognised as such measure. Gold is used because of its comparative scarcity and therefore less liable to be counterfeited; silver comes next. The merchandise value of gold for any necessary practical purpose, aside from its use for money, is less than silver or iron, and iron for such purposes, is far more valuble than either, and gold were its use as money abolished would not be worth more by the pound than silver.

One superior objection to using gold exclusively as the measure of values is that its production does not keep pace with the increasing requirements of commerce; hence its relative value is enhanced thereby, giving it a greater purchasing power—hence the tendency is to the advantage of the creditor class and to the disadvantage of not only the debtor class but also the holders of every species of real property.

It is immaterial what our currency, or the basis of such currency is so long as it approximates to and keeps pace with the constantly expanding requirements of trade; so that the dollar borrowed shall be of equal value to the dollar required in payment at a future date, thereby placing the debtor and creditor on equal terms in that respect.

That currency that cannot be suddenly contracted or expanded is best for all. But a currency based on the merchandise value of any metal and that metal one of the rarest known, the tendency is to gradually enhance the value of the dollar, or in other words increase its purchasing power.

Put silver at an equality with gold, for a basis for a circulating medium, and while not diminishing the merchandise value of gold the currency is held at an even beam and nobody wronged.

The prices of commodities is controlled by supply and demand, but the currency, the medium of exchange of commdities, practically without value, should be subject to no such contingencies, but should, at all times, be at ample yet even supply for all business purposes. 'REX.'"

CLEVELAND AND BOIES.

Views of a Maryland Paper on the Leadership.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 16.—The Baltimore Sun, in an editorial article on Democracy in the Northwest, refers as follows to the point that has been made that the Democratic candidate for president should be a man who, if elected, can succeed himself: "Should Cleveland and Boies be nominated and elected in 1892, Boies with some southern man, perhaps a Maryland man, in the second place, would naturally lead in 1896. Thus would be secured the continuance of leadership some of our New York contemporaries profess to be solicitous for. Mr. Cleveland would not, perhaps, be available for a third term, but his election next year would help the election of his successor. The principle of continuity of leadership is a fine thing, but when you have a leader like Mr. Cleveland, who leads and wins votes for his party, this very principle requires that you shall retain him in command till the battle he has planned shall have been fought and won.—St. Paul Globe.

HONORED A BISHOP

An Ovation Tendered Father McGolrick at Duluth.

Special to the Globe.

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 16.—The reception of Bishop McGolrick, of the Duluth Catholic diocese, upon his return this evening from an extended European tour, was grand and imposing. All the Catholic societies of Duluth and West Superior met the popular prelate at the depot and escorted him to the Temple opera house, where a splendid concert in his honor was given. The opera house was crowded from pit to dome. T. M. Helinski, president of the Polish National Benevolent society, delivered an eloquent address of welcome, which was responded to by the bishop. when the latter arose he was greeted with a hearty applause. He stated that his object in going to Europe was to secure teachers for the new parochial school to be established here. He also stated that, through the liberality of a certain non-catholic, whose name he did not mention, they would be able to build a school costing $500,000. The bishop also took occasion to denounce the reports of brutal fights between Parnellites and anti-Parnellites during the recent elections. He pronounced them malicious exaggerations. In the matter of public instruction of the youth of this country the bishop showed the broad liberality favoring unsectarian teaching in school, saying that inculcation of piety in the minds of boys and girls should be left to parents and priests and all religious teaching should be done outside of secular schools. He answered certain slurs, cast upon him for going to Europe to secure foreign teachers, by saying that they were not foreigners, but native-born Americans, who had gone to the old country to continue their studies.

Woman's Column.

For God and Home and Humanity

EDITED BY MRS. E. A. STACY.

The Motive Force.

The strain at this moment is the remorseless pressure of a huge commerce in liquors. There is mony in it, and that is the motive force. Money nerves every man; money palliates every conscience. Say that the commerce is wrong, prove that it is harmful, yet you are at a loss to put your finger on the line that divides the guiltless from the guilty man. Would you condemn the peasant who tills the vines under the suns of Italy? Yet that is the starting point of wine. Is the farmer blamable who raises hops, or his neignbor who sows barley? Yet beer comes therefrom. Is the culture of corn culpable. Yet we remember the humor of the canny Scot upon his native heath who dryly remarked: "We do not raise corn in our country, but we destroy a mighty lot of it after it has been turned into whiskey." Is the workman to be chided who accepts employment in a brewery when perchance, he can obtain it nowhere else? The brewer king will aver—"I manufacture—no one is obliged to drink, much less, if he drink, obliged to undo himself by excess." The retailer behind the bar will proclaim his irresponsibility for any who patronize him. Were we fighting the battle of temperance with guns we would hardly know where to shoot—at least where to shoot first.

It teaches us to drop the thought of individuals. It permits us to dispense with personalities' do away with hates and maledictions and all that opprobrious declamation and these damnatory epithets, that go so far to aggravate persons, to embitter discussion, and to disgust well disposed classes who really want to see tenperance succeed. No, we can array ourselves against the liquor commerce. The term is sufficiently definite. Those in it are fast organizing for their own defence. It needs no prophet to say "Thou art a man." By their own association, combination and concert of action, they say plainly enough—"We are the men" It is sufficient for us to keep steady aim at the buisness, regardless of persons. Let them indentify themselves. Be sure their sin will find them out.

The liquor manufacture and commerce is producing and offering a commodity which it wants to sell. It is greedy of profits, and profits require trade. Profits are larger, the larger the sales. The buisness believes in pushing things, believes in putting goods upon the people. It searches for markets as eagerly as the weaver and mearchant of cloths. It opens markets. It fosters demand. It is going to leave no stone unturned to stimulate trade, to increase consumption, to multiply buyers, to swell the volume of transactions, and pile up wealth. This is the Goliath that confronts us to-day and defies the armies of the living God. Against that giant lies the stress of battle.—Temperance Review.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13, 1891.

Not since the "packing" of the United States Supreme Court by a Republican President, to get the celebrated legal tender decision, has there been such a bold attempt on the part of an administration to influence a decision of the Supreme Court as that which occured here this week when the Attorney General informed the Supreme Court, then listening to an argument in the now celebrated Sayward case, which involves the question of American jurisdiction over Behring's Sea, that a treaty had been concluded with Great Britain, by which the disputed question concerning the rights of the United States are to be settled by arbitration. Without entering into the question of the rightfulness of the position taken by the United States in its arguments in this case—that the case is political and therefore under the exclusive jurisdiction of the President—it is desired to call special attention to the method adopted by the administration, through its representative, the Attorney General, to influence the Court to decide that it has no jurisdiction. It was on the last day of the arguments that the Solicitor General apparently by a slip of the tongue, alluded to a treaty with Great Britain for the arbitration of the Behring Sea dispute. Justice Gray asked a question concerning that treaty, and the Solicitor General, apparently confused, said that he had betrayed a State secret. Just at this opportune moment the Attorney General arose and dramatically stated that such a treaty had been negotiated, and that only the ratification of the Senate was necessary for it to go into effect. It was plain to be seen that the the statement created a sensation among the justices of the court, just as it was intended that it should. There is no doubt that the scene had been previously carefully rehearsed by the Attorney General and the Solicitor General, nor is there that this information was made public at just this time and place for the express purpose of influencing the court to decide the question as the administration wants it decided. No details are ascertainable of this alleged treaty, and there are grounds for the belief that it has not yet been entirely agreed upon, notwithstanding the positive statement of the Attorney General. Mr. Blaine refused point blank to say one word about it, which is of itself significant. But whether the treaty has been concluded or is only near conclusion, makes no difference. The time place and manner of making it public was wrong. The executive branch of the Government exceeds its constitutional authority whenever it attempts in any way to influence the judicial branch, which is by the constitution made co-ordinate in authority. But, come to think of it, what republican administration ever respected the Constitution when it did not accord with its designs.

Four of the candidates for speaker are in Washington—Messrs. Mills, McMillin, Springer and Bynum, but as the number of Democratic Representatives here is small, there is nothing new to be said of the contest. Each of the candidates appear to be confident of success. As there will be ten days between Thanksgiving day and the opening of Congress this year, it is probable that the real contest for the Speakership will be compressed into those ten days.

Mr. Harrison is having considerable trouble in making up a new slate for the important appointments soon to be made, in place of the one smashed by the state elections. He is seeking advice in all quarters. This week Boss Clarkson paid him another visit, and Senator Plumb, who lost caste last year on account of his supposed leaning towards the Farmer's Alliance has been again taken into favor and has had several lengthly conferences with Mr. Harrison this week.

The Supreme court has postponed hearing arguments in the case involving the constitutionality of the McKinley tariff act, because of a clause being left out of the bill as it passed the House and Senate when it was signed by the President, until the 30th, of this month. The hearing of arguments in the case involving the right of Speaker Reed to count a quorum has been set for the same date, and the lottery case for the first Monday in January.

Mr. Harrison is charged with being bitterly opposed to the holding of the Republican nominating convention in Chicago. The question will be decided by the National Committee at its meeting here on the 23d of this month.

The first week in next October has been set as the date for holding the National encampment G. A. R. in this city.

Closed the Schools.

Special to the Globe.

PELICAN RAPIDS, Nov. 16.—There have been several deaths of malignant diphtheria in the village and vicinity this fall. The occurance of three the past week, with reports of new cases, occasioned an alarm that has resulted in the temporary closing of the public schools. Precautions are being taken which, it is hoped, will soon rid us of the epidemic.

A POPULAR FAMILY.

JENNIE: "How is it, Kate, that you always seem to 'catch on' to the last new thing? Do what I may, you always seem to get ahead of me."

KATE: "I don't know; I certainly do not make any exertion in that direction."

JENNIE: "Well, during the last few months, for example, you have taken up painting, without any teacher; you came to the rescue when Miss Lafarge deserted her Delsarte class so suddenly, and certainly we are all improving in grace under your instruction; I heard you telling Tommy Eames last evening how his club made mistakes in playing baseball; you seem to be up on all the latest 'fads,' and know just what to do under all circumstances; you entertain beautifully; and in the last month you have improved so in health, owing, you tell me, to your physical culture exercises. Where do you get all of your information from in this little out-of-the way place?—for you never go to the city."

KATE: "Why, Jennie, you will make me vain. I have only one source of information, but it is surprising how it meets all wants. I very seldom hear of anything new but what the next few days bring me full information on the subject. Magic? No! Magazine! And a great treasure it is to us all, for it really furnishes the reading for the whole household: father has given up his magazine that he has taken for years, as he says this one gives more and better information on the subjects of the day; and mother says that it is that that makes her such a famous housekeeper. In fact, we all agree that it is the only really FAMILY magazine published, as we have sent for samples of all of them, and find that one is all for men, another all for women, and another for children only, while this one suits every one of us; so we only need to take one instead of several, and that is where the economy comes in, for it is only $2.00 a year. Perhaps you think I am too lavish in my praise; but I will let you see ours, or, better still, send 10 cents to the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th Street, New York, for a sample copy, and I shall always consider that I have done you a great favor; and may be you will be cutting us out, as you say we have the reputation of being the best informed family in town. If that be so, it is Demorest's Family Magazine that does it."

NEW YORK is ahead. It has "a woman forty-five years old who has been married fifteen times."

ALMOST a third of humanity—or, to put it in round numbers, 400,000,000 people—speak the Chinese language. English is spoken by about 100,000,000 people.

THIS is to be a cold winter. The hornets have built their nests high up in the trees. When you see a colony of hornets building a nest on the lower limbs of a tree it is a sign of a mild winter. But it is not a sign of mild hornets. Keep away from them.

PRESIDENT DWIGHT, of Yale college, while not favoring the admission of women to study in the classes with men, does wish Yale had a woman's annex, and the only objection he finds to its establishment is that the university hasn't the money to put into it.

DR. HAYES AGNEW, of Philadelphia, and Dr. Robert Reyburn, of Washington, are the only two physicians surviving of the notable staff of medical men who tried to save Garfield's life. Dr. Reyburn took voluminous notes of the case and is preparing to publish them.

WALTER H. EVANS, a young Indiana botanist who spent the summer exploring the southwestern states in search of cacti for the agricultural department, says that he did not see a single rattlesnake or tarantula in that region, which is supposed to be their home.

GOVERNMENT statistics show that French smokers consumed in 1890 2,000,000 francs' worth of foreign cigars, 2,600,000 francs' worth of cigarettes, 29,000,000 worth of snuff and 91,000,000 worth of pipe tobacco. There is an increase of 700,000 francs in the expenditure for ladies' cigarettes. There is one anti-tobacco society in France.

AND still immigration grows. At the present rate, this will be the second largest year of foreign arrivals at New York. In 1885 the total number registered was 455,400. The number this year up to the first of November was 73,000 ahead of the corresponding period last year, and if the ratio keeps up during this month and next the arrivals for 1891 will be not less than 440,000.

THAT is a rather fine point of law which holds that a man with burglar's tools on his person, who goes up the steps of a dwelling house where he has no lawful business, has made an attempt to commit burglary, but it is a good law for the protection of the community. The steps of a dwelling are private property and one who trespasses upon them with unlawful purposes has committed an unlawful deed.

LOUIS KOSSUTH is entering upon his ninetieth year. To middle-aged people of this generation he is unknown, or known as something like a myth. But forty years ago he was recognized as one of the greatest of human orators even in the English language, which he learned while a prisoner, with a dictionary, an English Bible and Shakespeare as his only studies. Probably he might return to his home in Hungary at any time, but he has determined to die in exile.

THERE have been many centennial celebrations, but one of the most novel is to take place in Terryville, Conn., in 1893, to commemorate the beginning of American clock making and honor the memory of Eli Terry, its founder. Mr. Terry was the first man to make the old-fashioned wooden clocks, so famous in the last century and the early part of the present one. He would make the clocks and then travel about the state and eastern New York selling off his stock. From this beginning has grown one of the greatest industries of the country, and Connecticut does well to remember him.

A YOUNG girl in a toilet supply company in Cincinnati was upbraided frequently by her employer because she did not attract the male patronage that other girls did. She protested she was getting but $4 per week and couldn't dress as well as some of her successful associates. The proprietor pooh-poohed such an explanation, and said other girls were making from $30 to $40 in other of his laundry-receiving offices. This girl, who came at 7:30 in the morning and stayed until eight at night, and kept her self-respect at $4 a week, was requested to find work somewhere else. She would not "mash."

A FAMILY in New York were sitting down to dinner the other evening when a messenger arrived in haste with a note for the mistress of the house. It was from a woman friend, and ran: "I am unexpectedly invited out to dine this evening, and want to make an impression. Do send me all your diamond rings to wear and I'll return them in the morning. I shall be so obliged and will do as much for you if I ever have the opportunity." The rings were sent and promptly returned next day. And the man of the house said the ways of women were beyond comprehension, but his wife laughed and said nothing.

LATER.

Big Fires.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 18.—This city was visited by one of the most disastrous fires known in its history, buildings damaged being those of Griggs, Cooper & Co., wholesale groceries, and Farwell, Ozmun, Kirk & Co., wholesale hardware. The total loss is estimated at from $900,000 to $1,000,000. The losses are covered by insurance.

The building occupied by the two firms is a brick and stone structure five stories in height, and has a frontage on Third street of 300 feet and on Broadway of 200 feet. Griggs, Cooper & Co. occupy two-thirds of the building on the Broadway side. The flames first made their appearance at 11:44 o'clock in the fourth floor of Griggs, Cooper & Co.'s building.

At a rough estimate the losses are as follows: Farwell, Ozmun & Kirk, $400,000, with an insurance placed by a member of the firm at $225,000 and by a clerk at $350,000, of which amount $15,000 was added yesterday: Griggs, Cooper & Co. lose $250,000, with $300,000 insurance; while the loss on the buildings is placed at $150,000, probably covered by insurance. This makes the loss nearly $1,000,000, the largest fire St. Paul ever had.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 17.—The cold wave which reached this city last evening, was the cause of one of the most disastrous fires which has visited St. Louis in many years. At an early hour this morning one person was probably killed, two badly hurt and $1,500,000 worth of property went up in smoke. At about 4 o'clock fire was discovered in the furnace room of the large dry goods establishment of Penny and Gentles, on the corner of Franklin avenue and Broadway. All four corners were destroyed.

PALO ALTO, the famous horse owned by Senator Standford, beat the stallion record at Stockton, Cal., the 17th, by trotting a mile in 2:08¾. All of the world's trotting records are now held by Palo Alto horses.

ALL of the arrangements are completed for a change of management of the Merchants Hotel in St. Paul. Col. Welz will retire to be succeeded by D. P. Miller, of Rochester, Minn., and H. L. Leland of Sibley, Io.

THE latest advices from Brazil are that that country is in a state of disruption, notwithstanding all denials to the contrary.

THE farmers of Iowa complain of a scarcity of water.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

KILLED HIS SWEETHEART.

A Farmer Shoots a Girl Because She Refused to Marry Him.

Andrew Kohler, a farmer near North St. Paul, has been courting Annie Drew, a young girl of that place, who persistently refused him. Kohler called on her, and, drawing a revolver, told her that she could take her choice between him and death. Supposing it a joke she said: "Death." Kohler fired, the ball pierced the girl's heart and she dropped dead. The next day Kohler committed suicide.

State Expenses.

The following expense accounts have been audited by the state department, being October expenses: Rochester hospital for the insane, building improvements, $4,131.52; extraordinary improvements and repairs, $511.08; current expenses, $15,392.59. St. Peter hospital: Improvements and repairs, $462.63; current expenses, $14,394.58. Stillwater: Prisoner expenses, $9,858.92; current expenses, $6,791.19; permanent improvements, $2,535.52. Reform school: Expenses, $2,758.23; reform school fund, $13,596.

Eloped with a Farm Hand.

Mary Gensmer, the beautiful and attractive young daughter of Ferdinand Gensmer, one of the wealthiest and best known farmers in Winona county, living near Lewiston, eloped with Herman Phawss, a farm hand who had been employed by Mr. Gensmer during the last few months. Miss Gensmer was engaged to a young man, the son of another wealthy farmer near Lewiston, and her action has caused much excitement.

First of the Kind.

Judge Ensign, of Duluth, imposed the first fine ever made in Minnesota for selling lottery tickets. W. A. Foote, cigar and tobacco dealer, indicted by the grand jury, plead guilty to selling lottery tickets on two indictments. Judge Ensign imposed a fine of $25 and costs for each indictment. In fixing the fine the court warned Foote that this fine was no precedent, and that the next time it would go much harder with him.

Burglars Make a Light Haul.

Safe blowers visited the bank of North St. Paul, where they drilled a hole in the outer door of the vault, blew it open and rolled the burglar-proof safe into an adjoining room, where they hammered and drilled it without avail. They took two or three boxes out of the vault, in one of which was jewelry owned by the bookkeeper, the other containing about $75 in coin.

Must Not Sell Cigarettes.

Judge Ensign, of the Duluth district court, fined five cigar dealers three dollars apiece for selling cigarettes to minors. They had been indicted through the exertions of Humane Officer Haskins. The judge read the offenders a severe lesson, saying that he proposed to have the law enforced and that any more violations of it would be more severely dealt with.

A Scrimmage at Faribault.

An altercation took place between several parties at the corner of Main and Second streets in Faribault in which Peter Stonge was cut in several places about his body quite severely. Albert Rummel was arrested on the charge of having done the carving, and Carl Zemann was arrested for having been mixed up in the trouble.

Four Hurt in an Explosion.

A thrashing machine engine exploded with terrific force while at work 4 miles south of St. Hilaire, and four men were injured. The owner of the machine, Mr. Ames, and the engineer could not live. Nothing was left of the engine but one bull-wheel. The cause of the explosion was not known.

In the Second Degree.

Charles A. Brandberg, of Henning, president of the Otter Tail county alliance, was indicted for murder in the second degree for killing Ole Anderson at Henning on July 4 by striking him on the head with a club. Brandberg pleaded not guilty.

A TOWN DESTROYED.

Arroyo Seco, in Argentine Republic, Wiped Out by a Cyclone—Ten Lives Lost.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Reports from Beunos Ayres say that the great storm of last Friday which passed over the province of Sante Fe destroyed the town of Arrogo Seco. The number of deaths is reported to be ten and wounded seventy.

A Train Blown Over.

A train of eighteen coaches was at the station when the tornado swept through the town. The entire train was overturned and many of the passengers were buried in the wreck. The details of the disaster are meager. All the telegraph wires are down in consequence of the storm. There is much damage to crops throughout the entire province of Santa Fe, which is situated on the left of the Parana river and has an area of about 38,000 square miles and a population of about 100,000.

Other Villages Destroyed.

Besides Arroyo Seco several other villages in the vicinity of Rosario were destroyed. Wind and hail played havoc with the crops throughout the province. The losses, it is said, will mount up into millions of dollars. Half a mile of rails between Roserio and Buenos Ayres were torn up by the cyclone.

CAN'T MOVE THE GRAIN.

Thousands of Cars Awaiting Handling on Roads West of Chicago.

BURLINGTON, Ia., Nov. 17.—The grain blockade in Chicago has caused a serious condition of things in Iowa and the west. The worst blockade ever experienced by railroads west of Chicago is now on hand. West of the Mississippi river there are 2,000 cars of oats and wheat side-tracked on the lines of the Burlington system for lack of storage capacity in Chicago and motor power to haul them. Of this 1,300 cars stand on Iowa side-tracks alone. Local railroad men think the Chicago blockade will be raised by the middle of the week, but say that the rush of delayed grain will make things just as bad next week. The freight-car famine is also lending its aid to complicate matters. The roads west of the Mississippi have a shortage of thousands of cars and the amount is increasing daily. What will be done when the great corn crop begins to move is a question that is greatly worrying railroad men.

DEED OF A CRAZY WOMAN.

She Cuts the Throats of Her Three Daughters and Attempts Her Own Life.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The wife of a sailor named Hinton, at Southampton, became wildly insane and seizing a carving knife cut the throat of her daughter, nearly severing the girl's head from her body. The mad woman, reeking with blood, then went to a room where her two stepdaughters had sought refuge, forced open the door in spite of their efforts, and then cut both their throats, inflicting fearful gashes which almost immediately caused their depth. The mad woman, by that time soaked in blood from head to foot, then gashed her own throat with the fatal knife and sank senseless by the side of her two last victims. When the horrible tragedy was discovered Mrs. Hinton was still alive and it is expected that her life will be saved.

PUSHED OVER A CLIFF.

One Boy Murders Another and Claims He Was Ordered to Do So by His Officers.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—A boy named Wise, 17 years old, an apprentice on the training ship Boscowen, stationed at Weymouth, went ashore Sunday with a number of boys belonging to the same ship. Wise and a companion went for a walk along the cliff facing the sea and when they reached a spot about 75 feet above the level of the water Wise suddenly pushed his companion over the edge of the cliff. The unfortunate lad was killed. Wise, when questioned as to his motive for such a crime, sullenly said that two officers of the ship told him to kill the boy in the manner referred to. He is believed to be insane.

OUR PORK AGAIN WINS.

Austria-Hungary Raises the Embargo, Following Germany's Example.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Austria-Hungary has followed the example of Germany and raised the embargo on American pork. Advices from Minister Grant in Vienna are that the official proclamation will be issued soon, probably before the end of the month, revoking the decree which has been in force for several years past and American salt meats will then be admitted subject to the duty which prevails. This is $2.88 per 100 kilograms, or a trifle less than 1⅜ cents per pound.

A DEADLY DRAUGHT.

Kentucky Farmers Drink from a Jug of Poisoned Whisky—Three of Them Have Since Died.

MILAN, Tenn., Nov. 17.—George Galbreath, a farmer living at Point Pleasant, Henderson county, invited several of his friends to participate in festivities at his house last Saturday night. During the evening a jug of whisky was produced and the company drank freely. In a short time they were taken violently ill. A physician was summoned, but three of the men's sufferings were ended by death. It is not known how the whisky became poisoned.

BOILER BLOWN UP.

One Man Killed and Great Damage to Property by an Explosion at Joliet.

JOLIET, Nov. 17.—The citizens of Joliet were startled Monday morning by a terrific boiler explosion that shook the district like an earthquake shock for over a mile from the wreck. It was one of a battery of four 200-horse power boilers at the new Ashley wire works which exploded, killing John McSwain, fireman, and making a complete wreck of the greater part of the works. A freight train on the switch siding was also wrecked. The damage is estimated by the firm at from $30,000 to $50,000.

Arrested on a Serious Charge.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 17.—James Gallagher, Joseph Eveland and J. A. Gallagher have been lodged in jail charged with the murder of the two Kester brothers at Seybertsville six years ago. Damaging evidence has been secured against the prisoners.

Third Suicide in One Family.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 17.—Andrew Polman committed suicide by blowing his brains out with a revolver. He had been on a protracted spree. Suicide is hereditary in his family, his brother and sister having killed themselves within the last three years.

A TIP FOR CHILI.

President Harrison, in Receiving Minister Montt's Credentials, Voices the United States' Friendly Feeling for Her South American Sister.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The United States officially recognized the new congressional government of Chili. The ceremonies incident to recognition occurred in the blue room of the executive mansion at 11:25 o'clock, a. m., Saturday when President Harrison formally received Senor Don Pedro Montt, the new minister of Chili to the United States, and the secretaries of legation.

Montt's Remarks.

Senor Montt, upon being presented, said his mission was to cultivate and maintain the relations of peace and friendship between the United States and Chili which have ever been close and cordial. For the accomplishment of this purpose he relied upon the kindness and good will which the United States government has always manifested for the representatives of Chili. He expressed Chili's sincere wishes for the prosperity and welfare of this country, which is so highly favored by Providence, and for the president's own happiness.

The President's Reply.

In response President Harrison said: "The presence of a representative of the government of Chili at the capital we hope will tend to promote a good understanding between the two governments and the early settlement, upon terms just and honorable to both, of the diplomatic questions now somewhat urgently awaiting adjustment. The government of the United States, as well as the people, particularly desire and rejoice in the prosperity of all its neighbors in this hemisphere. Our diplomatic relations with them have always been and will continue to be free from intermeddling with their national affairs. Our people are too just to desire that the commercial or political advantage of this government should be sought by the promotion of disastrous dissensions in other countries. We hear with sorrow every fresh tale of war or internal strife, and are always ready to give our friendly offices to the promotion of peace. If these are not acceptable or do not avail it is our policy to preserve an honorable and strict neutrality, as was done during the recent war in Chili. Tempting commercial and political advantages may be offered for our aid or influence by one or the other of the contending parties, but this we have not deemed to be consistent with obligations of international honor and good will.

"This government was quite as determined in its refusal to allow a war vessel of the United States to carry to a neutral port, where it could be available for war purposes, the silver of Balmaceda—as it was to give aid to the forces opposing him. The questions involved were Chilian questions, and this government endeavored to observe those principles of non-intervention upon which it had so strongly insisted when civil war disturbed our own people. I cannot doubt that this policy will commend itself to those who now administer the government of Chili, nor can I doubt that when excitement has given place to calmness, when the truth is ascertained and the selfish and designing perversions of recent incidents have been exposed, our respective governments will find a basis of increased mutual respect, confidence and friendship.

"Mr. Minister, this government and our people rejoice that peace has been restored in Chili and that its government is the expression of the free choice of its people. You may assure your honored president, who has been chosen under circumstances which so strongly testify to his moderation and to the esteem in which he is held by the people of all parties, that the government of the United States entertains only good will for him and for the people of Chili and cannot doubt that the existing and all future differences between the two governments will find an honorable adjustment."

The presentation occupied about fifteen minutes and at its conclusion Secretary Blaine escorted the new minister and secretaries to the door of the executive mansion and shook each cordially by the hand.

INTERNAL REVENUE.

Extracts from the Annual Report of Commissioner Mason.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The annual report of John W. Mason, commissioner of internal revenue, shows that the total receipts for the last fiscal year from all sources were $146,045,416, an increase of $3,440,719 over the receipts for the previous fiscal year. The cost of collection for the last fiscal year was $4,210,604, or 2.88 per cent. of the receipts, against 2.82 last year. The estimated expenses for the next fiscal year are $4,522,350. During the year 698 stills were destroyed and ninety-seven were removed, involving the arrest of 378 persons. The aggregate amount of taxes collected from tobacco during the last fiscal year was $32,796,270. The decrease is $1,162,720. The tax on cigars and cigarettes was not changed and the collections therefrom was increased $1,386,650 during the last fiscal year. Tables in regard to the production of oleomargarine show during the year ended June 30, 1891, an increase of production over any former year, but a decrease for exportation. The total production was 44,392,400 pounds.

In a chapter on sugar the commissioner details the action of the bureau in providing for the payment of bounty as authorized by the tariff act. The number of sugar producers who have applied for license is 4,906, and their estimated production is 613,376,380 pounds, of which 572,408,380 pounds is sugar cane. The amount of bounty to be paid for the production of the year ending June 30, 1892, will, it is estimated, be as follows: On cane sugar, $8,912,500; on beet sugar, $500,000; sorghum sugar, $40,000; maple sugar, $176,250; total, $9,628,750. In the last fiscal year we imported 3,483,442,325 pounds of sugar of the value of $105,661,431, and produced 512,261,530 pounds. The amount of sugar produced in the United States is about one-eighth of the amount consumed.

AMERICAN CORN.

The German War Department Orders Its Use in Making Bread for Soldiers.

BERLIN, Nov. 16.—The war department has concluded its experiments with American corn, and has decided to recommend the use by the army of bread made of equal proportions of corn and rye. It is believed that the department of the interior will follow this example. William Walter Phelps, the American minister here, anticipates that in consequence of this decision the German markets will be thrown open for the admission of many millions of bushels of American grain.

FATAL RAILWAY COLLISION.

Four Cavalry Men and Several Train Hands Killed Near Rome.

ROME, Nov. 16.—A fatal collision between two passenger trains took place 15 miles from here. On board one of the trains was a detachment of cavalry with their chargers. Four cavalrymen and six horses, in addition to several railroad officials, were killed. In addition a number of passengers were severely wounded. The accident was due to the neglect of one of the engineers to observe the signals displayed for his guidance

A PLAIN TRUTH.

Sorrow Serves to Unite Hearts That Truly Love.

No man has a right to marry till, in every human probability, assured that he can support a family in his own station. Mere love or improvident matches seldom turn out well; poverty comes, and there is so much self-reproach on either side, that gall is added to its bitterness; their tempers are soured, and they soon wish themselves unmarried. But when trials assail an attached, a reasonable pair, sorrow unites them closer; the man, feeling how much depends on him, never flags in his exertion, and often recovers the lost step; if not, there is still consolation in his wife's unvarying love—in her sweet, noiseless sacrifices. In these uncertain times, there are few commercial men but have met with reverses, and they will often say:

"Had it not been for those at home, I should have blown my brains out; I could not have stood it."

Wife and children! They are a beacon to us in our troubled sea; we renew the struggle when ready to sink beneath the wave, and at last are saved. At the worst, when all is black—when friends are cool or reproachful—when the cruelest doubts assail us—there is still one who respects and loves us; at home we are still dear.—N. Y. Ledger.

Out of Sight.

"There was a fight down the street a little while ago, but they couldn't find a detective."

"What use did they have for a detective?"

"They wanted him to find a policeman."—Puck.

IKE the patient moss to the rifted hill
The wee brown house is clinging;
A last year's nest that is lone and still,
Though erst it was filled with singing.
Then fleet were the children's pattering feet,
And their thrilling, childish laughter;
And merry voices were sweet, O sweet!
Ringing from floor to rafter.

The beautiful darlings, one by one,
From the nest's safe shelter flying,
Went forth in the sheen of the morning sun
Their fluttering pinions trying:
But oft as the reaping time is o'er,
And the hoar frost crisps the stubble,
They haste to the little home once more
From the great world's toil and trouble.

And the mother herself is at the pane,
With a hand the dim eyes shading,
And the flush of girlhood tints again
The cheek that is thin and fading.
For her boys and girls are coming home,
The mother's kiss their guerdon,
As they came ere yet they learned to roam,
Or bow to the task and burden.

Over the door's worn sill they troop,
The skies of youth above them,
The blessings of God on the happy group,
Who have mother left to love them.
They well may smile in the face of care,
To whom such grace is given—
A mother's faith and a mother's prayer
Holding them close to Heaven.

For as she clasps her bearded son,
With a heart that's brimming over,

She's tenderly blending two in one—
Her boy and her boyish lover!
And half of her soul is reft away,
So twine the dead and the living,
In the little home wherein to-day
Her children keep Thanksgiving.

There are tiny hands that pull her gown,
And small heads bright and golden;
The childish laugh, and the childish frown,
And the dimpled fingers folden,
That bring again to the mother breast
The spell of the sunny weather,
When she hushed her brood in the crowded nest,
And all were glad together.

A truce to the jarring notes of life,
The cries of pain and passion;
Over this lull in the eager strife,
Love hovers, Eden-fashion.
In the wee brown house were lessons taught
Of strong and sturdy living,
And ever where honest hands have wrought
God hears the true thanksgiving.

Toot Makes a Match.

A THANKSGIVING DAY ROMANCE.

AUNT GRACE never saw us children, nor a lot of others in the family, until Thanksgiving time, this year, because when she married Uncle Henry she went away with him to live in England. He died about a year ago and left her all his money, and last summer she came to New York to live. Mamma and papa went to see her, but they wouldn't take me, and I think it was very unkind of them, for I'm her namesake. Toot says I'm her middle namesake. My first name, you know, is Minnie. Oh! don't I wish Aunt Grace would adopt me and take me to the city to live with her. I just hate the country, and country people are horrid. They haven't any style at all. Jimmy Lane calls them "hayseeds." Jimmy and his sister Lillie go to the city to live every winter, and they think they know everything.

Mamma said she was going to invite Aunt Grace to spend Thanksgiving with us. She said she would have a real old-fashioned Thanksgiving dinner, such as they used to have when they were little girls and lived in Vermont. I told mamma I shouldn't think she would have anything old-fashioned for Aunt Grace when she was so rich and aristocratic. But mamma was determined to have her own way and wouldn't listen to me.

I was disappointed when I saw Aunt Grace. She is short and fat and I don't think her face is pretty, though some people do. She looks very different from what I thought she would. I supposed she would be tall and elegant like a duchess.

But the very day after she came she washed the breakfast dishes and darned papa's socks and made Toot an apron. So common! I should have been mortified to death to have had Lillie Lane see her do such things, after all my fine tal's about her.

She said to me: "I suppose you are a great help to your mamma?" I said: "Yes, Aunt Grace, I always do everything I can to help mamma." I didn't know Toot heard me, or I wouldn't have said that; but she did, and said: "Why, Minnie, you wicked story teller; ain't you 'shamed to talk like that? You know you won't do anything you don't have to. Will she, Uncle Jack?"

But Uncle Jack said: "See here, Toot, I've found some peanuts in my pocket." And she went to get them. Aunt Grace looked at me real sharp and I felt uncomfortable. Toot always spoils everything. I do wish she wasn't my sister. I told mamma that night I was sure she'd spoil the Thanksgiving party. Grandma said: "If you would stop trying to appear what you are not, Minnie, you wouldn't be afraid of anything Toot could say."

I was provoked at grandma for saying that, but I didn't answer her. It's too near Christmas, and then papa was in the room. One day when papa and mamma were talking together, and didn't know I heard them, I found out something I didn't know before. When Aunt Grace and Uncle Jack were young folks they were engaged to be married, but they had a quarrel, and Aunt Grace went to England, and they never saw each other again until she came to visit us. I told Lillie Lane about it, and she said: "How very romantic!" I didn't know exactly what romantic meant but I didn't say so, for if I don't understand everything she tells me, she calls me a "country pumpkin."

I don't like Lillie very well, but she is the richest girl in school, and her folks live in the city winters, and keep a carriage; so I have her for my most intimate friend.

Lillie said: "Why don't you try and make a match between your aunt and uncle? If you should they would probably ask you to come to the city and live with them, and give you lovely presents. That's the way they do in novels."

I never read a novel—we don't have them—but Lillie has lots of them. Her mamma buys them and Lillie steals them and takes them to her room and reads them on the sly. She tells me about the lovely things she reads in them, and I'm crazy to get one and read it for myself.

We talked a long time about the match, but couldn't think of any way to manage it. But Lillie said if I kept my eyes open something might happen just right. I told Lillie to be careful what she said when Toot was around, or there would be trouble.

Aunt Grace intended to go home right after Thanksgiving, and Lillie said I had better do everything I could to please her and Uncle Jack, so I wiped the dishes every day, and didn't make any fuss about taking care of Freddie while they went visiting, and stopped leaving my things around for mamma to pick up, but oh! that Toot. I was so provoked at her. One night at the tea-table she asked, all of a sudden: "Mamma, do you think Minnie is going to die?"

"What do you mean, Toot?" said mamma, looking frightened.

"Why, mamma, didn't Mrs. Brown say Mr. Brown 'met with a change' before he died? and Minnie's stopped being so lazy and disagreeable since Aunt Grace came, and been so extremely good that I thought perhaps she was going to die, too. Anyway, she's 'met with a change,' but there's room for her to 'prove more yet, for she slapped me yesterday when you were all away, and then she gave me some candy not to tell, that's why I didn't." Papa said: "Don't you want some more peaches, Toot?" and the peaches stopped her mouth, but didn't I want to 'ap her again? And I do think Aunt Grace has the most unpleasant way of looking at me sometimes. Some days I almost wished she had stayed in New York, because, besides her unpleasant looks, that Thanksgiving dinner made so much work.

It was "Minnie, do this," and "Minnie, do that," till I was nearly worn out. There's one thing certain, if Aunt Grace hadn't been there I wouldn't have stood mamma's making such a slave of me. I had to stem raisins and beat eggs and sift flour and wash currants and cut citron, and one day Aunt Grace got a lot of greasy dishes together and made me wash them! Ugh!

All of our relations came to dinner on Thanksgiving day, and some of them came the day before and stayed all night. Mamma said Cousin Kitty would have to sleep with Toot and me.

After we went to bed Toot was so still I thought she was asleep, so I told Kitty all about the match I was trying to make. She thought it was a splendid idea, and said she would help me. Our table looked lovely Thanksgiving day. Mamma bought a new tablecloth and napkins and some new dishes.

Aunt Mary brought a lot of flowers, and we picked all we had on our house-plants and put them in our glass pitchers on the table, and we had all of grandma's silver.

Mamma told Toot she mustn't talk, and she said she wouldn't and she didn't until we were half through dinner, then she looked at Aunt Grace and said: "Aunt Grace, I wish you would stay a hundred years!"

"Do you, dear?" Aunt Grace said.

"Yes, 'cause we can 'ford so many things when you're here. I don't s'pose we could have 'forded this tablecloth and napkins and these dishes if you hadn't been here. Nor this turkey. And prob'ly grandma wouldn't have let us take her silver if we hadn't had comp'ny."

Papa said: "Toot, here's another slice of turkey for you!" and everybody began talking about something.

She didn't say any more till they were passing the pudding around. Then she said: "Mamma, will we have plum-pudding at the wedding?" The minute she said that, I knew what was coming, and thought I should die.

"What wedding?" asked mamma.

"Why, when Aunt Grace and Uncle Jack get married. I s'pose that will be the next thing we will have to see to. I didn't know they 'tended to be married 'til I heard Minnie tell Kittie last night. Aunt Grace, what makes you and Uncle Jack look so funny? Oh dear! I hope you ain't got mad at each other again and changed your mind 'bout having the wedding. I shall be so 'spointed if we don't have it. Kitty says people jump over the broom-stick when they get married, and I want to see Aunt Grace jump. I never saw a fat woman jump, but I know I should just 'joy it. Won't she look awful queer, Uncle Jack?"

Mamma told Toot to stop two or three times but she didn't pay any attention to her but went right on. Papa laughed so he couldn't say anything. Everyone laughed but Aunt Grace and Uncle Jack, and mamma and me. I never saw mamma so angry before. She got up from the table and took Toot in her arms to carry her out of the room. Toot screamed and kicked and one of her feet hit Uncle Thomas on the head and knocked his glasses off. They struck a goblet as they fell and broke. He tried to catch them and tipped over a dish of gravy on the tablecloth, and a lot of it ran down in Aunt Martha's lap on her new silk dress.

Mamma took Toot upstairs and shut her in a closet, and I guess she whipped her.

All the folks but Aunt Grace and Uncle Jack tried to help Aunt Martha get the gravy off her dress. They both started to go out of the room. Uncle Jack went into the hall. Aunt Grace intended to go to the sitting-room, but she made a mistake and went into the china closet. The doors are close together. She shut the door and couldn't open it and had to go out the other door that opens under the stairs in the hall. Uncle Jack was in the hall and they went into the parlor together, and shut the door right in my face as I was going in too.

I went back to the dining-room and told how rude they were, and they all looked at each other and seemed pleased, all but Uncle Thomas and Aunt Martha.

No one ate any more dinner and everybody wanted Toot to come downstairs. So papa went up and got her. I never saw such a looking child. Her face was red and tear-stained. And when mamma picked her up so quickly she dropped a spoonful of cranberry jelly that she was eating on her pink cashmere dress and made a big spot on the front of it, and she had kicked the closet door till the toes of her new shoes were all white. But I declare, if I wasn't surprised when everyone hugged and kissed her and called her a little darling.

After a long while Aunt Grace and Uncle Jack came out of the parlor. He held out his hands to Toot and she flew at him and got her arms around his neck and hugged and kissed him until he could hardly breathe. Then she peeped into his face and said:

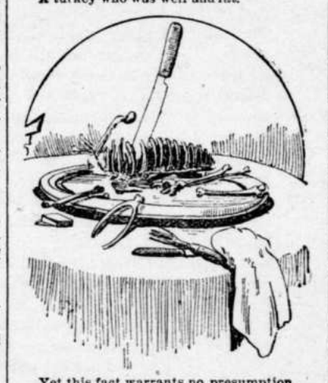
"Uncle Jack, how funny you look—just like a sheep."

"Never mind my looks, Toot," he said, "we're going to have that wedding right off and you've made the match."

"Why Uncle Jack," Toot said, "how 'dic'lous you talk. People don't make matches, they buy 'em at the store."—Bessie G. Hart, in Detroit Free Press.

APPEARANCES DECEITFUL.

Before Thanksgiving day there sat
A turkey who was well and fat.



Yet this fact warrants no presumption,
He died next day of quick consumption.

A GHASTLY PUN.

"Watch me gobble," remarked the fat Thanksgiving turkey cock, as he strutted by the small boy.

"That's all right," replied the small boy; "but wait till next Thursday, and feel me gobble."—Puck.

—On this Thanksgiving day we may take up the utterance of the Psalmist: "Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord." The blessings we have received and our unworthiness of the least of all of them ought to cause every tongue to break forth in grateful adoration. God declares: "Whoso offereth praise glorifieth Me."—Christian Inquirer.

—In the discussion of the Thanksgiving question the turkey would like to remain on the fence.

DOMESTIC CONCERNS.

—Never put away food in tin plates.

—To have the crust of a potpie brown set the pot on a few coals before the fire and turn it frequently.

—A Plain Pie Crust: For two pies, one cup lard, or lard and butter together, three-quarters cup cold water, three cups flour, one teaspoon salt.—Detroit Free Press.

—All sorts of vessels and utensils may be purified from long remained smells of any kind by rinsing them out well with charcoal powdered after they have been scoured with sand soap.

—To remove mildew from white goods dampen the spots and rub them well first with soap and then finely-powdered chalk; lay the goods in the sun and dampen it from time to time.—N. Y. World.

—Raisin Cookies; One cupful of butter, one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, three eggs, one teaspoonful each of soda, cinnamon and clove, a pinch of mace, flour to roll stiff, one cupful of chopped and stoned raisins. Bake, and cover tightly as soon as taken from the pan.—Good Housekeeping.

—Fleas annoyed an ingenious Washingtonian, and he thus describes how he got rid of them: "If those who are troubled with this insect will place the common adhesive fly paper on the floors of the rooms infested, with a small piece of fresh meat in the center of each sheet, they will find that the fleas will jump toward the meat and adhere to the paper. I completely rid a badly-infested house in two nights by this means."

—Hot Lemonade: Two good-sized lemons, four tablespoonfuls of white sugar, one and a half pints boiling water. Pare the lemons and throw the yellow peel into a pitcher. Peel the white skin off and throw away. Slice the lemon into the pitcher, taking out all the seeds; pour the boiling water over it in the pitcher. If not sweet enough add a little more sugar. This is good for a cold and should be taken just before retiring.—Housekeeper.

—Graham Biscuits: Put a quart of graham flour into a bowl; rub into it thoroughly two ounces of butter or lard; add a teaspoonful of salt and two teaspoonsful of baking powder; mix and rub again until thoroughly blended, then add sufficient milk, about half pint, to make a soft dough; turn out on the board, knead lightly, roll into a sheet about three-quarters of an inch thick, cut into biscuits; place in greased tins and bake in a quick oven twenty minutes.—Old Homestead.

—Peas a la Francaise: Rinse and drain a can of French peas. Put into the chafing-dish a generous tablespoonful of butter, one teaspoonful of flour, one teaspoonful of sugar and a level teaspoonful of salt. Place the dish over the lighted lamp and stir until the butter begins to bubble; then add the peas, and cook for five minutes, stirring with a fork. At the end of that time add half a pint of cream or rich milk and cook for ten minutes longer, stirring frequently. Keep the lamp wicks low.—Ladies' Home Journal.

—Compote of Apricots: Twelve ounces of sugar to one pint of water; some ripe apricots; boil twelve or fourteen ounces of sugar in a pint of water for a quarter of an hour, removing all the scum as it rises; put as many ripe apricots into it as required, and let them simmer for a quarter of an hour or twenty minutes, until they are tender, but do not let them break; then take each apricot carefully out on a glass dish, arranging them as taste directs, and when the sirup is cool pour it over them and set it in a cold place.—Boston Herald.

—Fillets de Bœuf: Undercut of sirloin of beef, one lemon, two ounces of butter and a little good gravy; cut the undercut of a sirloin of beef into small slices; fry them for eight minutes in two ounces of butter; warm the gravy and squeeze half a lemon into it, seasoning it to your taste; put a pound of mashed potatoes into the center of a very hot dish; stand the fillets, or slices of beef around it, leaning them against the potatoes, fresh-chopped parsely and some bread crumbs; spread them evenly over the cutlets with a knife, wrap them in buttered paper and broil them over a clear fire; serve them up in the papers with sauce piquante in a tureen.—Boston Herald.

A TIMELY CHAPTER ON FURS.

Hints as to the Popular Wraps for the Approaching Cool Weather.

Now that the air has such a decided chill in it the subject of furs will doubtless receive serious consideration. The following hints may be of service to some purchasers. Boas will certainly be as much worn if not more this year than last, and the three-quarter fur cape is a mode resuscitated from some fifty years ago. They fall well below the waist and are rather high on the shoulders. Those who can not afford sable are glad of mink. Fur muffs are to be large. Capes of every kind and shape, from the extremely ugly to the exceedingly becoming, are worn by women. The most stylish-looking reach to the knees, and are perfectly plain, with neither folds nor yoke. They have, however, well-cut and gayly-lined hoods behind, and are usually fastened in front with straps of the cloth. Two noticeable capes have been worn lately—one double-breasted and bound with leather, and the other of bright military scarlet, with a yoke covered with true lovers' knots in silver. The newest cape is lined and trimmed with fur, and very cozy and comfortable it is at the spa on cool evenings. Long cloaks, too, are already beginning to look seasonable. Many of them are made as a sort of ulster, with a large cape which does not seem to be detachable. One of the newest of these was of cloth, with narrow lines of rich crimson forming a check on a dark-blue ground; the cloak was worn open in front, and disclosed a handsome lining of crimson satin.—The Queen.

Braiding in Favor.

Braiding is as much liked and is as fashionable as if this was the first season of its introduction. Whole gowns and warps are covered with it, and it appears upon some of the most stylish and expensive of imported costumes. It is also daintily used as a finish above an edge of narrow fur or a wider band of velvet or dress skirts and coats and bodices, and it appears as a bordering to panels and in gothic, vine and spiral devices on skirt hems, and covers the entire fronts of vests, plastrons and petticoats that are partly revealed by open cloaks, dresses or redingots.—Chicago Post.

—Mother—"Effie, did I send you out to look for eggs?" Effie—"Yes, mamma, but when I did go out I found all the hens standing about doing nothing."—N. Y. Truth.

CHOLLIE'S LAST FAREWELL.

It Was "On the Dead," But Failed to Draw a Tear.

With a nervous clutch Imogene drew the fatal note from the envelope and read its burning words again and again, searing into her very soul like molten lava flows into the sweetest plain and wrecks its bloom forever with devastating wrath. For three days she had left that note lying face downward upon her inlaid escritoire—left it lying face downward across the torn envelope where she had thrown it in the first agony of reading its fatal message. It had come into her fair young life like death to the wedding feast. With ashen face and quivering lips she had gone numbly about her household duties with hollow, stony eyes that burned with the fire of woe, heart-consuming and agonized. Cold as ice had grown the touch of her lily hand. And this was the day that he always came. Always. For fourteen months his step had never failed to ring along the vaulted court and down the tesselated hall at precisely ten minutes past seven o'clock. For fourteen long, blissful, elysian months the row of cold wads of chewing gum under the mantelpiece had grown as a virgin mouth dashed down the usurper's cheap regime and welcomed back the princely blood of the chocolate caramel to the throne. For upon this evening Charles Almont had never failed to bring this tribute of affection and beet sugar. And now was it all over? Had the dream ended? Was love unrequited? Was her light, her love and her life blasted at the threshold of happiness?

Again and again she read the words of that fatal note:

"Imogene: We must part forever. Love has withered at its fountain head. Ask me not to explain. Seek not to see me more. Suffice it to say that fondest dreams must end, and circumstance over which I have no control, even though I would, inexorably separate us forever. Farewell, farewell! Ah, Heaven! How I have loved you! Yet all is ended. Forget me if you can. Forgive me if you will! I shall vanish from the scenes of your life, and blot your name and face and memory from my dreams forever, forever, forever. Farewell, farewell, farewell, one long, last, sad farewell! All is over. Life is black and dead before us both. But it must be so. We shall never meet again on earth. Farewell, and may kind Heaven, in this so cruel, deal kindly with you, if for only the sake of our dear, dead love. CHARLES ALMONT.

"P. S.—Farewell! This is on the dead, Imogene. Farewell! Farewell!"

A strange light shone in her eyes. Crushing the fatal missive into the bosom of her dainty, though disheveled, tea-gown, she tottered to the head of the great stairway. Hundreds of feet below lay the cold, hard marble floor. Just over the heavy, carven balustrade swept the empty air as if waiting an eagle's flight. One moment she paused, gasping for breath and peering into the dizzy depth. Then, collecting all her energies, she sprang to the railing and, leaning far over, shrieked to the hired girl, who was washing the spittoons in the closet under the stairs:

"Rikky, Rikky! Make a fire in the parlor right off Chollie Almont will be up to call as usual this evening, and I'm not stuck on freezing."

Then, with a bitterly sardonic smile upon her marble face, she laid the fatal note beside seventeen others just like it that Charles A. had sent her during the last fourteen months. It took a good deal to feaze Imogene.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

The Shortest Way.

"I know I am very ill, Mr. Sheepskin, and as my physician has been very kind to me, I wish to make a will entirely in his favor."

"But consider, my dear madam, what a temptation you are placing in his way, and you should fail to recover, the will would be contested on the ground of the man's self-interest, if nothing else."

"Controversy is what I wish to avoid So you may draw a contract assigning all my property to my physician in case I recover. In the event of my death it will go to my lawyer—and there is an end of it."—Pharmaceutical Era.

HOWEVER other people may look down upon it, the chimney sweep's business just suits him.—Binghamton Republican.

COPYRIGHT 1891

A feeling of dullness, languor, and depression means that your liver isn't doing its part. That means impure blood, to begin with, and all kinds of ailments in the end.

But you can stop them in advance. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery invigorates the liver, purifies and enriches the blood, and rouses every organ into healthy action. It prevents and cures all diseases arising from a torpid liver or from impure blood. Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Scrofulous, Skin and Scalp Diseases—even Consumption (or Lung-scrofula), in its earlier stages, all yield to it.

The makers of the "Discovery" claim for it only what it will do. They guarantee that it will do it. If it fails to benefit or cure, in any case, they'll return the money. Nothing else that claims to purify the blood is sold in this way; which proves, no matter what dealers may offer, that nothing else can be "just as good." Therefore, don't accept a substitute.

"August Flower"

Dyspepsia. There is a gentleman at Malden-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., named Captain A. G. Pareis, who has written us a letter in which it is evident that he has made up his mind concerning some things, and this is what he says:

"I have used your preparation called August Flower in my family for seven or eight years. It is constantly in my house, and we consider it the best remedy for Indigestion, and Constipation we have ever used or known. My wife is troubled with Dyspepsia, and at times suffers very much after eating. The August Flower, however, relieves the difficulty. My wife frequently says to me when I am going to town, 'We are out of August Flower, and I think you had better get another bottle.' I am also troubled with Indigestion, and whenever I am, I take one or two teaspoonfuls before eating, for a day or two, and all trouble is removed." ®

DELANO DIARY.

—Several of our correspondents came too late for this issue.

—J. C. Hitz is moving into the Kerr house on railroad avenue.

—On Sunday about four inches of snow fell covering the ground nicely.

—The M. E. church chimney was cleaned on Saturday and should draw better.

—The Kickapoo Indians are to entertain our citizens for a couple of weeks beginning Monday.

—A. Anderson has returned home from the west and has again opened up his shoe shop on River street.

—C. Gast has sold his family horse and outfit to Con O'Leary, who now rides while "Dad" comes to town afoot.

—Dr. Carter, the dentist can be found at the Danforth House to-day and to-morrow. Persons needing dentistry done can find him there.

—Vol. 1, No. 1 of The Aztec is on our table. This is the official organ of the ancient order of Aztecs, printed in Minneapolis and is well gotten up.

—Andrew Moberg, formerly of Watertown has purchased the Irvin Stewart place on River street and moved his family in becoming a Delanoite.

—At about 7 p. m. on Sunday the moon was almost totally eclipsed and soon after r'sing above the eastern horizon presented a strange appearance.

—Profs. Holcomb and Bohn furnished music for a dance at Dassel last night and will play at Rockford to-night for the new landlord Mr. Spray.

—Notices of Demorists monthly magazine and the Toledo Blade are to be seen in this number of the GAZETTE. We club with them. Persons wishing to subscribe will do well to call at this office.

—Prof. Bohn says his new cow is becoming quite tame and he expects she will soon repay him for the unusual trouble to which she put him in bringing her home. Perseverance is sure to win, Professor.

—Delana needs a firm to purchase pork, butter, eggs, and other produce for cash, so that our farmers will not be driving to Minneapolis with their stuff and bringing back goods they might buy at home.

—C. W. Ingerson called yesterday to inform us that his congratulatory letter to Governor-elect Flower, of N. Y. has been duly acknowledged by that gentleman in a short and polite reply which Mr. I. received a few days ago.

—Chas. Fitzner shot Andrew Stohl, at Carver, yesterday. After firing twice and severely wounding Stohl, he fired two shots into his forehead from which he died. The cause is supposed to be a love affair. Both were railroad men —A lengthly and interesting discussion was carried on this morning in the post office lobby while the mail was being distributed. Subject "gas". Several Delanoites took part and Squire St. John, of Watertown held his own.

—We are in reciept of an interesting and instructing publication by the Minnesota Historical Society. In sending out these journals our citizens are made acquainted with historical facts concerning Minnesota.

—The Austin Daily Herald is the new Democratic paper at Austin, Minnesota. From the number of Democratic papers entering the field we think the coming educational campaign will have considerable of a leaning to Democratic principles.

—On Tuesday Neighbor Buckley visited the Public School for a few minutes, and, we are informed spoke a few words of advice to the pupils. This is commendable in Mr. B. and if his example should be followed in this insatnce, and visitors, with words of encouragement would occasionally appear before the pupils it would help to break the monotony of school life and serve as a stimulus to both teachers and scholars.

—The Childrens' Home Finder is the name of a new monthly journal which has been received by us. It is neatly printed and contains much useful information concerning matters af this kind. It represents the work in several States. Headquarters is in Chicago. President Cyrus Northrup, of the State University is President of the Minnesota Society and Rev. E. P. Savage who once visited our town is State Superintendent for Minnesota, and our State has a department in the journal.

The Tonka Mill Condemnation

The appraisers in the Minnetonka milldam condemnation proceedings, Messrs. Jamison, Lovejoy and Elwood, have filed a report allawing $12,000 for the water power, mill and elevator, and recommending that the water power alone be condemned at $8,000. Hector Baxter, who is attorney for the five nonresident owners, says his clients will contest this "confiscation of their property" to the bitter end, but that if they are given a fair and reasonable award he will quash proceedings. He characterized the award as paltry.—Minneapolis Times.

—Messrs. I. C. Stewart and E. J. Swedebeck were seen hauling several loads of furniture and household goods this week to the rooms above Swedebeck's store. It must be that housekeeping will be carried on soon there.

—The Clarions, Minnesota's Temperance Quartette, under the management of Chas. W. Howe, of Minneapolis gave one of their unique concerts in the city Hall on Wednesday evening to a fair sized audience. The entertainment was good and highly enjoyed by those present. Mr. Howe is an enthusiast in the cause he espouses, and is a fine impersonator, giving German, Irish, and Ethiopian characters in good style. As a story teller he is above the average. Entering as he does into the spirit of the songs he cannot fail to be appreciated. He is supported by his wife, and another lady who is an expert crayon artist and whose work was highly appreciated, and by two gentlemen, one of whom is his brother. They make Prohibition their objective point and no more telling blows can well be made for that cause than those made by the Clarions. Should they ever appear here again the hall would undoubtedly be filled. Armstrong furnished her quota of the audience, quite a number being present from that neighborhood having heard them before and coming here to enjoy another evening with them.

Personals.

Ed Kelsey went to Minneapolis this morning.

Henry Kurtz, of Dwight, Dak., visited Delano friends this week.

John Larson and Andrew Naisland of Hope, Dak, came down on Wednesday.

Orlando Roberts, of Rockford passed through the metropolis one day this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Mealey, of Howard Lake visited with their son A. L. here yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Powers went to the cities yesterday where they will spend the Winter.

Richard Bennett, one of Woodland's prosperous farmers was a GAZETTE caller on Wednesday.

Charley McNaughton is home for Thanksgiving from Iola, Kansas where he is working on a stock farm.

Mrs. I. H. Grafft and son Curt. contemplate spending the winter with their "Hoosier" friends in Indiana.

Dr. J. S. Shrader did not stay at St. Cloud but has resumed his practice here. Success doctor, just the same.

Village Council Meeting.

On the 16th the city council met. Several claims were allowed the principle one being that of L. M. Maxfield for lumber and roof, $202.78. It was voted to take care of Mrs. Nellie Anderson, the sick woman at Mrs Chance's at the expense of the village. Ordinance No. 4 was amended raising license from $3. to $5. per day. Street Commissioner Brandon tendered his resignation, laid on the table. The street commissioner was instructed to have snow cleaned from sidewalks and crossings at nine o'clock a. m. or street committee should hire others to do it, and to report to Pres. when work commences.

County Cullings.

The Waverly Tribune kindly offers to umpire the game on Tariff is a Tax between the Journal and Times and Dr. Catlin. The position of umpire is usually looked upon as one of danger and the Tribune displays considerable sand in volunteering to fill that office. Better get a mask brother for there is no telling what those protectionists may do.

"The GAZETTE is certainly mistaken in quoting Sen. Davis as saying that the tariff on coffee is a tax. The GAZETTE should know that the senator could scarcely say anything like that for the simple reason that there is no tariff on coffee. What Senator Davis did say, however, was this: That if a tariff WAS put on coffee it would certainly be a tax because coffee cannot be raised in the United States and has to be imported. We do not think the doctor would willingly mispresent what Senator Davis said and if he reflects for a moment he will soon see how easily he has fallen into error."—Eagle.

The Eagle then is beginning to learn her lessons in Tariff is a Tax!

Just listen! "There is no tariff on coffee." Thats right, old bird it has been a long time since Uncle Sam got any of her money from this source.

"The GAZETTE should know that the senator could scarcely say anything like that!" We are not so presumptious as to tell what the Senator "could scarcely say" or what he could not scarcely say but simply quote from his Buffalo speach what he did say. He was simply showing that sometimes Tariff is a Tax, and for that purpose it was immaterial whether in naming coffee be said, is a tax, or, as it used to be, was a tax, or as the Eagle would have it, "if a tariff WAS put on coffee it WOULD certainly be a tax." Right again, old bird! Take courage. It is, was, or would be never too old to learn, You may, can or must get your lessons, and not stop to quibble over what the Senator "could scarcely say," Now since you have learned that "if a tariff WAS put on coffee it would certainly be a tax." don't you see it would be the same with tea, with quinine and lots of other things. Thats right, now tax your brains a little more and see if you don't find that Tariff is a Tax.

The Bond Muddle.

There seems to be some misunderstanding about whether or not the village of Delano shall pay a share of the bonds issued this summer to help build the Ruckholdt bridge. The town and village together voted bonds and it is not yet settled whether they will together pay them or whether Franklin will pay them without the help of the village. From the town clerk we gather that the status of the matter is as follows:

Last Spring when the building of the Ruckoldt bridge was being agitated the supervisors of the town of Franklin instructed the town clerk, Mr. Zeibarth to write to the Attorney General and get his opinion as to whether the village of Delano would participate in an election called for the purpose of voting aid in building said bridge.

The following answer was received by Mr. Z. from the Attorney General:

ST. PAUL, May 16, 1891.

MR. WILLIAM ZIEBARTH,
Delano, Minn.
Dear Sir:—

Your favor of the 15th inst. is at hand. If the village of Delano is incorporated under the general law, it is a part of the town in which it is situated for all purposes except as a road and bridge district, and the people of the village in such case would participate with those in the township in the control and management of the affairs of the town; but the town would have no control over the roads of the village; but while this is true the question of bonding the town for the purpose of building a bridge is one of general interest not limited to any particular road district. That is, while the bridge may be in a road district, the bonds are issued by the town and the property of the village would undoubtedly be taxable for the payment of such bonds. It would follow, therefore, that the inhabitants of the village would be entitled to vote upon the question of issuing the bonds, that is, if the village is incorporated under the general law, and has not been made a separate election district. I am,

Very truly yours,
Moses E. Clapp.

In accordance with the opinion of the Attorney General the people of the village and of the town of Franklin, at a special meeting held, voted a bond of $800.00 to pay for the building of this bridge.

The bond tax was in course of time duly certified to by the supervisors to the county auditor and, later on, the following letter was received by the Town clerk·

BUFFALO MINN., Oct. 14, 1891.

MR. WILLIAM ZIEBARTH,
Town clerk of Franklin.

Dear Sir:—The question as to whether the village of Delano should be taxed jointly with the part of Franklin outside of said village to pay for the bonds of the town issued for aiding in building the Ruckoldt bridge was submitted by me to the attorney of Wright county, and his opinion is adverse to extending such tax to property within the village of Delano. I have no doubt that this opinion is good law, and his opinion will be followed unless the courts rule otherwise. If there is any opposition to the proceeding and I presume there will be, please to proceed by mandamus, if that is the way, at once. I would like to have the matter settled by Nov. 1. Mr. Cutting has no objection to the suggested legal proceedings and both of us would be glad to have the courts settle the matter.

Very truly,
A. C. HEATH,
Co. Auditor.

As the time was too short, Nov. 1st for the supervisors to do anything, we understand that the end is not yet and that legal steps will be taken to bring the matter before the courts if no settlement can be had with the village.

The Weekly Blade and Campaign of 1892.

THE TOLEDO WEEKLY BLADE, the most prominent Republican weekly published, is the only political weekly newspaper in the United States that is edited with special reference to circulation in every part of the Union. It has subscribers in every State, territory and nearly county of the United States. It has always above 100,000 subscribers and during a late Presidential campaign had 200,000 subscribers. Aside from politics it is a favorite family paper, having more and better departments than can be afforded by papers of small circulation. Serial and Short Stories, Wit and Humor, Poetry, Camp-fire (Soldiers), Farm, Sunday School Lessons, Talmage Sermons, Poultry, Puzzles, Household, (best in the world), Answers to Correspondents, etc., etc. Only One Dollar a year. A POPULAR FAMILY.

JENNIE: "How is it, Kate, that you always seem to 'catch on' to the last new thing? Do what I may, you always seem to get ahead of me."

KATE: "I don't know: I certainly do not make any exertion in that direction."

JENNIE: "Well, during the last few months, for example, you have taken up painting, without any teacher; you came to the rescue when Miss Lafarge deserted her Delsarte class so suddenly, and certainly we are all improving in grace under your instruction: I heard you telling Tommy Eames last evening how his club made mistakes in playing baseball; you seem to be up on all the latest 'fads,' and know just what to do under all circumstances; you entertain beautifully; and in the last month you have improved so in health, owing, you tell me, to your physical culture exercises. Where do you get all of your information from in this little out-of-the way place?—for you never go to the city."

KATE: "Why, Jennie, you will make me vain. I have only one source of information, but it is surprising how it meets all wants. I very seldom hear of anything new but what the next few days bring me full information on the subject. Magic? No! Magazine! And a great treasure it is to us all, for it really furnishes the reading for the whole household: father has given up his magazine that he has taken for years, as he says this one gives more and better information on the subjects of the day; and mother says that it is that that makes her such a famous housekeeper. In fact, we all agree that it is the only really FAMILY magazine published, as we have sent for samples of all of them, and find that one is all for men, another all for women, and another for children only, while this one suits every one of us; so we only need to take one instead of several, and that is where the economy comes in, for it is only $3.00 a year. Perhaps you think I am too lavish in my praise; but I will let you see ours, or, better still, send 10 cents to the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th Street, New York, for a sample copy, and I shall always consider that I have done you a great favor; and may be you will be cutting us out, as you say we have the reputation of being the best informed family in town. If that be so, it is Demorest's Family Magazine that does it."

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill

"A Tariff on Coffee is a Tax, Unquestionably."—Senator C. K. Davis at Buffalo.

If tariff on coffee is a tax, tariff on sugar is a tax, tariff on tin is a tax, tariff on knives and pearl buttons and tariff on anything that has to be paid is tax. If you smuggle goods the tariff may be escaped, but that does not destroy the truth that TARIFF IS A TAX.

MILWAUKEE has "shied her caster into the ring" for the honor of having the next National Democratic convention at that place.

JOHN G. CARLISLE in answer to a letter from Congressman Warner has expressed himself as of the belief that Mills would make a good Speaker of the House. And that the wise democrats will hang on to the tariff issue.

SHOULD the Minneapolis National Republican Convention turn out to be of the same makeup as the last one held at Chicago was reported to be the Prohibitionist friends will have lots of campaign arguments that will not assist the G. O. P. in restoring their old majorities in the western states.

ST. PAUL is in the field for the National Democratic Convention and proposes to work hard until about Feb. 22, when the committee is expected to decide the matter as to whether or not it will be held there. Or where it will be held. As Minneapolis is to have the Republican Convention, it is but fair for St. Paul to have the honor of nominating the next Democratic President, Grover Cleveland.

THE G. O. P. did not see fit to accept our generous offer to hold their National convention in the beautiful groves near Delano and to drink milk, but have elected to have it in the neighboring village of Minneapolis a few miles down the track. We would like to have a convention, very much, and extend to the Democrats even a heartier invitation to accept the same offer. In June our woods are fine and milk is plenty. The delegates could have a genuine old fashioned campmeeting, and under the green trees and blue sky nominate a man for President who would donbtless be elected by a large majority.

NATIONAL REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

To Be Held in Minneapolis June 7th, 1892.

On Monday evening the National Republican committee met in Washington D. C. and after quite a warm discussion as to when and where the next Convention should be held, after seven ballots decided on Minneapolis as the place and June 7th, 1892 as the time. This is quite a victory for the Republicans of Minnesota. The delegation from this State assisted by their friends from Dakota did some good arguing before the committee took their ballot. Col. Johnson stated to them that the constituency of Minneapolis consisting of the States of Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin, North Dakota, Montana, Washington, Oregon, Kansas, Nebraska, California, Wyoming, Idaho, and Colorado will cast one fifth of the votes in the electoral college in '81, and these will all be more or less influenced by where the convention is held. He pointed to the records of the dwindling Republican majorities in these formerly solid Republican states and used these together with the fact that Minnesota and several other states have quite a showing of Democratic Congressman now as strong reasons for holding the Republican convention in Minneapolis, in order to recall some of their lost votes, and these arguments were successful and Minneapolis keeps her reputation as the City of Conventions.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20, 1891.

The coming session of Congress promises to be one of the most interesting, particularly to Democrats and opponents of the present high tariff, we have had for years. Notwithstanding the Republican majority in the Senate there is a probability that some of the worst features of the McKinley law may be modified if not repealed, and the Democratic House will see that the appropriations are kept within reasonable bounds. The people have had enough of billion dollar Congresses.

The Speakership contest is now in a very interesting stage, and, in spite of the nearness of the assembling of Congress, is still in doubt. It had been considered previous to this week that Mr. Mills was slightly in the lead, although lacking considerable of enough votes to nominate him, with Mr. Crisp a close second. It is now thought that this is reversed, owing to the announcement that the Democratic members from New York city would support Mr. Crisp. These members are all connected with Tammany Hall and there is a disposition among some of the opponents of Mr. Crisp to call him the Tammany candidate, but remembering the fate with which Mr. Fassett met for calling Governor-elect Flower a "Tammany candidate", they speak softly. It is the befief of many shrewd observers that neither Mills nor Crisp will be elected, but that the honor will go to some of the other candidates, McMillan, Springer, Bynum, Hatch or Wilson.

Considerable amusement was created here by Secretary Foster's attempt, in his financial speech before the New York Chamber of Commerce, this week, to catch both free comage and anti-free comage men in the same net. It will not add to his fame as a financier, but as a juggling feat it is worthy of its author and in keeping with the policy he has followed from the first day he took charge of the country's finances.

The Sherman-Foraker fight in Ohio may result in disrupting the cabinet before Mr. Blaine's Presidential aspiration does it. It is no secret in Washington that Blaine dislikes Sherman and that the feeling is cordially returned, nor is it that Mr. Harrison has long ago thrown the administration's influence to Sherman. To add insult to injury, Mr. Harrison treated Foraker in such a brusque manner the other day when he called at the White House to pay his respects that the fiery Ohioan took himself off in a huff, and went to Mr. Blaine, his friend, for consolation. This week Secretary Foster raised a big row in the Ohio Republican Association, which contains many friends of Foraker, by making a speech in favor of the re-election of Sherman. Mr. Blaine doesn't like this and it is believed that he is bringing all the personal influence he can command in Ohio to Foraker's aid, and that Foraker is to reciprocate next year.

The administration has had an opportunity of showing whether it had sufficient back-bone to fight the Steamship and Castle Garden ring in New York, as Mr. Scuthesis, who was selected as a member of the commission to visit Europe for the purpose of investigating immigration at the request of the president of the Federation of Labor, has, by a trip from Europe in the steerage of a steamer, secured evidence that the steamship officials and the Government officials at the New York end were in collusion to violate the immigration laws.

The day after the State elections Secretary Rusk remarked that the Massachusetts leather manufacturers ought to be punished, for not having carried the State for the Republicans, by having the duty restored upon foreign hides. The matter was regarded as one of "Uncle Jerry's jokes, bnt, as he seriously makes the recommendation in his annual report, he was evidently in earnest.

The case involving the constitutionality of that clause of the anti-lottery law prohibiting the carrying of newspapers containing lottery advertisements in the mails was argued this week before the Supreme Court. It is of course impossible to say until the decision is handed down what impression the arguments made upon the court, but the impresston outside was that Attorney General Miller was outclassed and got decidedly the worst of it.

The movement to steal Senator Brice's seat has been abandoned since it was learned that Senator Sherman has refused to enter into it.

Democrats here take no stock in the talk about putting Governor Russell, of Massachusettts, on the National ticket.

The Bell telephone monopoly this week secured a patent which has been "hung up" in the Paetnt Office since 1877. It is for what is known as the Berliner combined telegraph and telephone.

ONE CAUSE OF POVERTY.

A Potent Factor in the Production of Pauperism and Vice.

The Chicago Tribune has just published a brief table which is of considerable interest to every student of the liquor question. The population of Chicago is in round numbers 1,200,000. A recent report of the City board of health gives the number of firms and persons engaged in various occupations.

From that report the Tribune takes the figures in the following table, which shows the number of inhabitants to each saloon, meat market, ect.:

Saloon	217	Grocery	87
Meat market	750	Drug store	2,00
Lawyer	450	Doctor	70
Cigar shop	900	Officeholder	120

The officeholders are at the head of the procession, and the saloons come next. Notice the great jump there is from the saloon to the grocery and meat market, both of which cater to the prime necessity of mankind—food. The Tribune remarks that "there is one municipal and government employe for every one hundred and twenty Chicagoans, men, woman and children; that is a good record, and it shows where the taxes go."

That paper might well also remark that there is one saloon for every 217 people—men women and children—in Chicago, and that this shows where the money goes. It shows why their is so much poverty in the slums of Chicago; it shows why vice is so rampant there, it shows why it is the breeding place of anarchy and the hot bed of socialism. Probably every one remembers how in his childhood, the familiar adage was dinned into his ears: "You can't have your cake and eat it, too." This adage has its application to Chicago, and in fact to every other city in the land. Poor men desire to become wealthy, but they desire also to satisty their appetites and passions at the same time.

If an intelligent man, of sound body and mind, and with a good trade at his command, desires to accumulate property, there is no country in the world in which he can so easily do so as in the United States. The rate of wages is higher here than in any other country in the world, and higher, too, in proportion to the cost of living. It is not difficult for a young man unmarried, and with no one dependent upon him, to save half of his wages. All he has to do is to open an account with a savings bank figure out how much is absolutely necessary for his living expenses, and when he draws his weekly pay to immediately deposit every penny above this sum and leave it deposited.

Right there comes the test. It is not difficult to make this first accumulation—the nest-egg of the future fortune—if a man once makes up his mind to do so, but it is the indisposition of the average workingman or employe to do this, which is the great cause of poverty. Men desire to have their cake and to eat it at the same time. They wish to get all the possible enjoyment which their money will procure at once, unmindful of the fact that the extravagant habits which they are acquiring will hang like a millstone around their necks and utterly prevent any saving when the care of a wife and family are added. After a few years a man finds that it is a constant struggle to make both ends meet and he sees no hope of any betterment of the future. If he gets an increase in wages or salary he finds that by some strange process his needs or desires increase suddenly in the same ratio, and month after month goes round and finds him either with empty pockets or struggling with debt. Some men cease struggling, give themselves up to selfish indulgence and go swiftly down the declivity which lands them in a drunkard's grave. Others become soured and embittered at the world, look upon all men who have made savings as their natural enemies and fall into the communistic idea that "all wealth is robbery." It is a peculiarity of human nature that a man very rarely places the fault where it should belong—on his own shoulders He does not blame himself for being extravagant and reckless with his money, but blames other men because they are not so, and therefore because they save.

It may be put down as a maxim that a man who has nothing to depend upon but his own exertions is certain to die a poor man if he becomes habituated to drinking. A man cannot be a drinker—"one of the boys"—and save money. Aside from the wastefulness which the habit entails in paying for the liquor which the man himself consumes and that with which he treats others, it also causes a considerable waste of time each year. A man will drink too much, and be obliged to take a day or two off in order to sober up; or he drinks when his bodily functions are deranfed, becomes ill and loses time until he recovers. The ways are very numerous in which the drinking habit, directly or indirectly, keeps a man down in the groove of poverty. There is no more potent factor in the production of poverty and pauperism than this habit; and those economist who are vexing their souls in the endeavor to find the cause and cure of poverty, if they desire to quit theorizing and adopt practical work, cannot do better than to join in the effort to pulverize the rum power.—Toledo Blade.

CORRESPONDENCE

MONTROSE CHIPS.

It is snowing at this writing and hence prospects are quite good yet, for sleighing during Thanksgiving.

Considerable of cordwood is being handled at this point; the price for the best is about $3.80 per cord.

Charles Schwerin, a letter carrier in Minneapolis, came up to spend Thanksgiving under the parental roof.

Mrs. Halgren has gone to Minneapolis where she will remain for several weeks under medical treatment.

Several of our young men, who have been away during the past summer, have returned to spend the winter under the parental roof where they will have plenty of time for meditation upon future action, and mental, moral and physical improvement.

Very interesting and successful daily evening services are being held in the M. E. Church by Rev. J. R. Davies, who is a very able and earnest speaker in his profession. All are invited to attend these services, and those who do will profit thereby.

Ere these items are perused by their many readers Thanksgiving shall have come and passed together with joys and pleasures incident thereto. Among the dinners given and invitations issued we venture to give the following, not vouching, however, for the correctness thereof: Rev. and Mrs. Davies at Swartout's; G. M. and Herbert Wright and L. L. Halgren and their families at W. H. Wright's; C. H. Ferrell at W. H. Stacy's; our teachers at their several homes; Mr. and Mrs. Gerdsen at C. Kraus' Sr; F. W. Ruppelius and family at his father's. Mr. Leuzinger will have a house full of friends and relatives for the occasion; and the hotels will also be prepared to satiate the appetites of their guests in the line of turkey and chicken.

WAVERLY.

Martin Burke returned from a visit to the city Saturday.

Editor Tanner of the Tribune is busy getting things in order for the holidays. Mr Tanner is quite a hand in the newspaper business.

Mr. J. J. Barrett and Miss Johnson went to Cokato Saturday.

Mrs. J. Nuwash visited Hopkins, Sunday.

Jack Ourn took a trip to Howard Lake, Monday.

Among those who visited the city this week are Chas. Jordon, D. W. Flannigan, Patrick Powell, Mike and John Boyle, and P. J. Powell.

J. K. Cullen has the finest display of holiday goods in our city and he is bound to sell them.

Michael Barrett's two boys James and Edward are laid up with the typhoid fever.

Mrs. J. Chaldfent, of Butte, Montana, is visiting our city this week.

John Powell, brakeman on the G. N. is taking a lay off.

Martin Burke returned to Willmar Saturday to run a train. Martin is a good conductor when ever he can get around.

Mr. Paddy Stiff was in town Sunday and made quite a visit.

Christ Vandlec left for St. Paul Monday after a visit of about two months.

Our merchant tailor is doing a big business here. He is expecting his brother from Norway who is also a good tailor, to help him in his business.

ANNANDALE.

Rev. Mr. Higgins held his usual services last Sabbath; in the evening giving a history of the origin, purpose and growth of the Epworth League. His subject was previously announced and attracted a large audience, the house being full; The Elder did himself good credit on the occasion.

Mr. L. Cofield started last Saturday for the hunting fields of the west: the deer and the bears may as well now, like Davie Crockets' coon, come down and save him his ammunition for he don't go up there for fun only.

We noticed Mac Kenedy of Kimball whose right arm was amputated by Dr. Ridgway a few weeks ago on our streets last Saturday, all flip and lively; and Charley McDonald, who had a finger amputated by the doctor a few days ago, around with his arm in a sling but says the stump is so nearly well that he attends to the business of Cofield and McDonald in their absence.

Chas. M. Dally is putting an addition onto his house.

The masons under the bosship of Prof, Sandstrom, of Cokato, have commenced the brick work on Mr. Rennie's new store building, unless the weather moderates considerable they are liable to have cold fingers before the job is done.

Fireman Calhoun on the Soo road broke a leg Tuesday evening on train going west. The accident occurred between Maple Lake and Annandale. He was taken off at the latter place and Dr. Ridgway fixed up the broken limb and he was carried back to his home in Minneapolis, Wednesday morning.

Rev. Pinkham accused church members of voting for saloons and declared that "hell is full of such christians."

[Last weeks items]

Rev. Higgins preached a discourse last Sunday evening to young men which, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, was listened to by a very goodly audience. First on the importance of making a right choice of their profession or calling, and second; of the sinfulness and wrong of wasting time in frivulous and foolish amusements, and warning them of the importance of time; that an hour wasted was so much time gone forever and could never be recovered.

Thos. J. Dalbow, the party who lately bought out A. B. Mathews' hardware and tinshop business is erecting a building in the rear of his store as a shop for the manufacture of tin ware, thereby enlarging his salesroom.

We observed our friend John Scheyer, Esq., last Saturday, with a boot with an ugly gash in it in one hand and a cane in the other halting along towards the shoe shop of Professor Weburg. The gash in the boot was amply suggestive. We needed ask no questions.

Dr. Tim O'Connor, of Maple Lake, was in town Tuesday morning, calling upon Doctor Ridgway.

Will McDonald started for the west last Monday morning for a few days sport at deer hunting. Will is said to be a good shot and the old Bucks, if wise will give him a wide berth. This is not intended as a notice to the animals as we do not expect the GAZETTE circulates among them much.

Martin Futrell has returned from his deer hunting excursion to find his barn, built last summer, with its contents burned down. Some of his kind hearted friends are around soliciting contributions to reimburse him, in part at least, for his loss. This is right, we should help each other, but some object on the score that they say to have their own property insured and therefore do not feel their obligation to contribute towards the loss es of others by fires that they otherwise would. Insurance is easily obtained and the rates are reasonable so there is little excuse for those who are not able to bear their own losses.

This "cold wave" has suspended work, for the present on Mr. Rennie's new block.

Mr. D. C. McCrorey has moved, with his family, into the rooms formerly occupied by the late James M. Pratt in his mansion house.

William L. Haggerty is now installed as R. R. Station Agent at this place and has rented Mr. Joseph Cleveland's house on Cherry Avenue, for a residence.

Mr. Joseph Cleveland has converted the buildings formerly owned by Sam Wells and occupied for a store and dwelling, into a dwelling and restaurant.

Now that there has been several new houses erected on Cherry Avenue the village authorities have commenced the work of grading and improving the street.

Gideon Rudolph has moved into his new house on Cherry Avenue.

PROF. GAINES insists that he has practically discovered the language employed by monkeys in communicating with each other. He states that he will conduct a series of experiments with monkeys, dogs and cats, and prove to the world that animals have a language that can be understood by human beings.

THE largest specimen of leaf or fern gold ever found will be exhibited at the world's fair. It was found near Walla Walla, Wash. It is valued at $300 for the gold in it alone, but today five times that amount would not purchase it. The delicate tracery of the fern is as fresh, beautiful and crystalline in appearance as ever nature turned out of her laboratory, and it is fully a foot square.

THE first flag of stars and stripes was made for the United States army by a Quakeress named Betsy Ross in a little brick building still standing on Arch street in Philadelphia. It is proposed by the Pennsylvania Historical society to purchase this building from the present owner, Mrs. Amelia Mund, and exhibit it at the world's fair alongside the home of William Penn. And, if possible, the first flag should be flown from the gable.

A CO-OPERATIVE home for young women students has been started in Boston with accommodations for about one hundred and fifty, the prices ranging from $1.50 to $3.50 a week. Most of the rooms are in suites, and the arrangements for table board are separate. The intention is to make it self-supporting, and if any student remains there a year she will become a partner in the scheme and have a share of the revenue. Entertainments of various degrees of importance are to be provided.

CHILI is a great country for newspapers. There are more than forty of them in Valparaiso and Santiago, and there are others in all the head towns of departments. Chili has many literary men, including a regiment of poets, and also many scientific men and a multitude of statesmen and generals. The schools are free, and there are provincial lyceums, normal schools, an agricultural school, schools for the arts and trades, military and naval academies and a national university, all supported by the government. In some years there have been 1,000 students at the Santiago university.

IT has long been believed that the portrait of George Washington in the white house is not a replica of the original by Gilbert Stuart, though bought as such. Trace of the Baker replica was lost after 1798, and there has been a suspicion that an English artist, Winstanley, who made several unauthorized copies, palmed off one of the latter on the committee which made the purchase for the presidential mansion. The full-length portrait of Washington recently discovered on the Isle of Man is alleged to be that for which a Winstanley copy was substituted, and how it got there is now the question.

THREE statues, ten feet in height, of rose granite, have been found at Abukir, Egypt, a few feet below the surface. The discovery was made from indications furnished to the government by a local savant, Daninos Pasha. The first two represent in one group Rameses II. and Queen Hentmara seated on the same throne. The third represents Rameses standing upright in military attire, a scepter in his hand and a crown upon his head. Both bear hieroglyphic inscriptions, and both have been thrown from the pedestals face downward. Relics of the early Christians have been found in the same locality.

THE Brazilian dictator, Fonseca, resigned in favor of Fleriano Peixotte.

LATER.

Peace in Brazil.

RIO JANEIRO, Nov. 24.—The revolution in this city by which Fonseca's dictatorship was overthrown was almost as peaceful as that by which Dom Pedro was deposed. The insurgents in this city have long been planning a coup. Yesterday morning a strong force made an attack on the naval arsenal, where the arms and ammunition of the government were stored, and after a half-hearted attempt at defense the garrison gave up. But few shots were exchanged, and the poor resistance made by the defenders is illustrated by the fact that none of the insurgent force was even seriously wounded.

Members of Fonseca's cabinet resigned when the triumph of the revolutionists became an established fact, and the manifesto of Fonseca that he would bow to the will of the people was soon issued. It is expected that the members of the congress dissolved by Fonseca will be recalled.

THE Chilian authorities having the Baltimore sailors' grievances in course of investigation are weakening considerably. The stand first taken by the police and other officials has dwindled down into a very much more common sense frame of mind. It is reported here in official circles that whatever the result of the Baltimore inquiry may be, the United States will demand an indemnity from Chili for the families of the men killed and for the expense the United States has been put to, owing to armaments, etc., made necessary by the recent trouble between the governments.

THE archbishop of Arx was recently fined 3,000 francs for insulting M. Faillieres, minister of public worship at Paris, France.

THE storm of the 23d that raged throughout the east blew Arthur Crooks, aged seventeen years off of a railway trestle at Clarks Ferry, Pa., and nearly killed him.

IT was decided the 24th to hold a winter carnival in St. Paul.

THE damage to Washington, D. C., by the recent storm is placed at $250,000.

MERCHANDISE exports from the United States during the past month were valued at $102,933,296, against $98,338,646 in October, 1890. Imports during October past were valued at $66,795,239, against $72,550,279 in October 1890.

ST. PAUL will try to get the Democratic convention.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

HAD PLENTY OF WIVES.

A Man with Mormon Propensities Runs Away from Duluth.

Harry Zick, proprietor of the Bon Ton restaurant in Duluth, left suddenly, taking with him his 7-year-old daughter. He took with him $225 in cash, a gold watch worth $150 and a diamond ring and gold necklace belonging to his wife. He left his wife with two of her children and a large amount of debt on the restaurant. His present spouse married him about two months ago, and she put $700 in cash into the restaurant. The runaway husband wrote from Sioux City, Ia., that he was not coming back. Since he left it has been discovered that he has a wife in Helena under the name of Hipp, and one at Ashland, another at Glencoe and still another at Detroit, Mich. His last wife will prosecute him for bigamy.

Owns Part of Chicago.

R. B. Hinckley, cashier of the Rock county bank of Luverne, acting as guardian for Mrs. Harriet Bryan, an insane woman of 90 years, living there with her sister, has secured title to eighty acres of real estate near Jackson park, Chicago, valued at $200,000. The land was not lost to her by the statute of limitation, but because of her lunacy. It was originally purchased by Charles Stanton in 1837. Stanton died in California in 1843, and the property was sold at tax sale.

No More Ice Palaces in St. Paul.

The St. Paul Ice Palace association, which was incorporated to run thirty years in 1886, was practically kicked out of existence by the chamber of commerce, which unanimously decided to build no more palaces of congealed crystals because of the fact that they advertised Minnesota as the coldest region within Uncle Sam's borders. The winter carnival this year will be turned into a celebration of the city's fiftieth anniversary.

He Threw a Stone.

A wedding which took place in St. Paul came very near reaching a fatal conclusion. One of the guests, named Peter Kavinsky, became angry about something and went out in search of a stone. He found it and returning to the front door threw it in among the guests. It struck a woman named Theruski on the head, knocking her insensible. Kavinsky was arrrested and a physician was called to care for Mrs. Theruski.

Thousands of Wild Geese Dying.

Hunters from Park Rapids and Red Lake Falls report that an epidemic had broken out among the wild geese, and that thousands of birds were floating weak and helpless in the lakes and ponds. The natives were gathering them in great quantities to pluck the feathers. Sportsmen said the disease was universal, and that all wild geese were more or less affected.

Killed by a Bull.

Thomas Pasley, a prominent farmer living 2 miles from the ferry in Bloomington, went into a pasture to look after some cattle. His not returning in due time alarmed his wife and after he had been gone three hours she went out in search of him and found him lying in the pasture dead, having been gored to death by a vicious bull.

Half a Million Loss.

A fire which started in St. Paul in the wholesale grocery house of Griggs, Cooper & Co., and extended to the wholesale hardware house of Farwell, Ozmun, Jackson & Kirke, caused a loss to the grocery firm of $300,000 and the loss to the hardware firm was nearly $200,000. Both firms were well insured.

Trouble Drove Him to Suicide.

John J. Erin, engineer at the Winona hotel in Winona, committed suicide by shooting himself. He left a letter saying that he was in trouble, the nature of which was not stated, and he did not want it known. His parents reside in the east. Coroner Stewart decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

The News Briefly Chronicled.

Williams & Donaldson, boot and shoe dealers of Ada Rapids, have failed.

George Korods, aged 5 years, of Minneapolis, was crushed to death by a pile of lumber falling upon him.

The contracts for the $35,000 building to be erected at Winona by the Schlitz Brewing Company of Milwaukee have been signed.

On January 1, 1892, the works of the Milwaukee Car Wheel & Foundry Company will be removed to St. Paul.

Railroad post office service has been established on the line of the St. Paul & Duluth railroad between Taylors Falls and St. Paul, distance 50 miles.

Ex-Mayor Ludwig has received word from Capt. Pabst, of Milwaukee, that he had decided not to erect an opera house in Winona at present.

Park Rapids' new $10,000 hotel, the Great Northern, has been opened. J. H. O'Neil is proprietor.

Quite a number of outbuildings and chimneys were blown down at Marshall by a heavy wind.

The mills at Dundas, after having been shut down for over two months, have again begun operations. They have a capacity of 800 barrels a day.

There are 260,000 pupils enrolled in the public schools of Minnesota.

William H. Halfering, an employe at Parcher's livery stable in St. Paul, died very suddenly from apoplexy.

Ed Whelan, a lumberman, was frozen to death at Grand Rapids. He had been drinking and lay down in the road.

A theater performance at Winona was stopped by the police Sunday night. The mayor said he did not propose to allow Sunday exhibitions in tights in Winona by theater companies.

Three children were killed by wolves in Ramsey county 10 miles north of St. Paul. Twenty-five armed men with hounds chased 125 of the beasts into a swamp and killed eleven of them before they could escape. The wolves were driven southward by the great forest fires in September.

Fred Beer, Jr., of St. Bonifacious, shot himself accidentally while out hunting rabbits.

Anton Dahl, a thrashman, laid himself away in a barn at Stephen to sober off and awoke robbed of $100. There was no clew to the robbers.

A thrashing boiler exploded at Red Lake Falls, mortally injuring L. Ames, one of the proprietors, and dangerously injuring Stephen Ford and A. Baker.

The wholesale houses of the Minneapolis Glass Company and Lindsay Bros., agricultural implements, were burned, the total loss being $185,000; total insurance, $133,000.

MINNEAPOLIS WINS.

After Taking Seven Ballots the Republican Committee Decides to Locate the National Convention in the Minnesota City—June 7 the Date Chosen—Clarkson Elected Chairman.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The next national republican convention will be held at Minneapolis. It was necessary for the national committee to take seven ballots to decide the question. The first informal ballot resulted:

The Balloting.

New York, 9; Chicago, 0; Omaha, 5; Minneapolis, 13; Cincinnati, 4; San Francisco, 8; Detroit, 1; Pittsburgh, 2; St. Louis, 1; Chattanooga, 4.

First formal ballot: New York, 10; Chicago, 0; Omaha, 3; Minneapolis, 14; Cincinnati, 8; San Francisco; 5. Detroit, 1; Pittsburgh, 1; Chattanooga, 4.

Minneapolis had 29 votes on the seventh and last ballot and gets the convention. Cincinnati received 13 votes on this ballot and New York 3. On the seventh San Francisco and Omaha threw up the sponge and, under the agreement that the cities west of the Mississippi should unite against the east, threw their votes to Minneapolis. These, with 2 from New York, made 29, and this gave the northwestern city the prize.

Will Meet June 7.

The time set for the republican convention is June 7.

San Francisco's claims were presented by Congressman McKenna and M. H. De Young; those of Detroit, by Senator Stockbridge, Representative Allen and ex-Senator Palmer; Senator Washburn and Gov. Merriam, of Minnesota, and Senator Casey and M. M. Johnson, of South Dakota, spoke for Minneapolis; Judge C. R. Scott, Senator Manderson and John M. Thurston, of Nebraska, and Senator Casey, of Wyoming, favored Omaha; ex-Gov. Foraker and Gov.-Elect McKinley argued Cincinnati's claims; Mayor Guerley and John Dalzell spoke for Pittsburgh; W. F. Bradley, of Kentucky, pleaded in favor of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Chauncey F. Filley advocated St. Louis as the location; Col. Shepard, Senator Hiscock, J. S. Fassett and Gov. Hawley were heard in New York's behalf, and Mr. Campbell, the committeeman from Illinois, presented a resolution adopted at Chicago stating that Chicago could not be a competitor for the convention, but would do what was proper if selected.

Clarkson Chosen Chairman.

The resignations of Chairman Quay and Treasurer Dudley, of the committee, were accepted, and the action of the executive committee in naming J. S. Clarkson, of Iowa, as Quay's, and William Barbour, of New York, as Dudley's successor, was approved. The contest between McBride and Bartch to represent Utah on the committee was decided in favor of the former. Garrett A. Hobart, of New Jersey, was elected vice chairman.

EARTHQUAKE IN JAPAN.

Nearly 4,000 People Killed or Injured and Over 200,000 Made Homeless.

YOKAHAMA, Nov. 24.—A severe prolonged shock of earthquake occurred October 28 a few minutes before 7 o'clock in the morning. It was the most severe experienced since the terrible catastrophe of 1855, and must be classed as a national calamity. The greatest damage to buildings and loss of life occurred in the perfectures of Achy and Gifymin, in which nearly 4,000 people were killed and wounded. In those prefectures 42,000 houses were totally destroyed. The number of provinces throughout which the disturbances were strongly felt was thirty-one. The center seems to have been in Mino and Owari, but even as far south as Higo and Rikushu in the north the disturbance was sensibly felt. The destruction of 40,000 houses means 200,000 people have been rendered homeless. Up to November 5 the earthquakes still continued to be felt with intervals between them; gradually the intensity of the shocks diminished. From the commencement of the disturbance up to that date it is estimated 6,600 shocks or more than one every two minutes were felt.

The shock experienced at Ocaki was so severe that scarcely a sound house was left standing with the exception of the castle, which, despite its 400 years, stood the shock remarkably well. The Gobo temple, belonging to the Shin sect of Buddhists, was crowded with worshipers, it being the anniversary of the death of Shinran, the founder of the sect. The temple fell, burying at least fifty people. The ruins took fire and the shrieking victims were consumed.

A slight shock was felt at Nagerio on the night of Sunday, October 25. Wednesday morning forty Christians were assembled in one of the buildings of the Methodist Protestant school when the sound of distant rumbling arose and the building began to totter and the worshipers fled to the doors. One Christian and his wife were killed by falling bricks and tiles and two other Japanese were so badly injured that they have since died.

The Prohibition Convention.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—A meeting of the national committee of the prohibition party, to decide on the location of the national convention of that party, will be held in Chicago December 17. At the meeting there will be a fight between New York, Chicago and Cincinnati for the convention. A convention of the prohibition editors of America will be held at the Sherman house December 18.

Killed Himself.

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., Nov. 24.—Dr. Andrew McFarland, the well-known authority on insanity, committed suicide at his Oak Lawn Retreat for the Insane, near here Sunday night. He was suffering from brain trouble. He had put a chair against the door, tied a sheet about his neck, fastened it to a transom bar, jumped off the chair and strangled to death.

[Dr. McFarland was a native of New Hampshire and a graduate of Dartmouth and Jefferson medical college. He was superintendent of the New Hampshire state insane asylum from 1845 to 1854 and of the Illinois hospital here from 1854 to 1870, when he resigned and established Oak Lawn.]

Crisp in the Lead.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—The World presents a list of the democratic members of the next house and their speakership preferences, which it affirms is prepared by an experienced ex-official of the house of representatives. While there may be numerous changes before the date of the democratic caucus, it believes that this table will furnish a fairly accurate forecast of the strength of the several candidates on the first ballot: Crisp, 107; Mills, 54; McMillan, 23; Springer, 15; Bynum, 10; Hatch, 13, and Wilson, 3.

A STORM'S WORK.

Great Damage to Property in Pittsburgh, Washington and Other Eastern Cities.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Monday's storm was one of the most disastrous in its effects and far-reaching in the area of its sweep of any known to this country for years. Already from numerous points come reports of damage, destruction and death, and when a cessation of the warring elements permits of a restoration of telegraphic communication with points at present inaccessible by prostration of wires, the extent to which the seemingly wild rumors will be borne out by actual facts is wholly conjectural.

Devastation in Pittsburgh.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 24.—From all parts of Pittsburgh and Allegheny come reports of damage by the storm. Houses were blown down or unroofed, trees snapped off short, signs broken from their fastenings and telegraph poles torn up and wires broken.

In the west end Grimm's new three story hotel, not yet finished, was blown down, crushing a small dwelling adjoining it. The occupants all escaped but Mrs. Peebles, who was preparing dinner in the kitchen. She was buried in the ruins and probably fatally injured. In Allegheny several electric light towers were blown down, and in the east end trees along Sheridan and Collins avenues and Broad street were uprooted.

Along the Railroads.

Great damage is reported along the line of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad west of Connellsville. Trees and outhouses are reported to have been blown down. The coal tipple at Alpsville is almost a complete wreck. At New Brighton, Pa., on the Erie & Pittsburgh railroad, a large tree was blown down at the intersection of Main and Harmony streets, where the telephone wires cross the trolley wire of the Beaver Valley Traction Company. The tree fell upon the telephone wires and forced them down on the electric wire, which was carrying 500 volts. The results were startling.

In the Oil Fields.

The storm had a rather disastrous effect upon the derricks in the oil fields. Old as well as new derricks were blown down, and nearly all the districts within 50 miles of Pittsburgh suffered to a greater or less extent from the storm. In all but a very few instances no part of the rig except the derricks was destroyed. Between Oakdale and Noblestown twelve derricks were blown down, and reports from the McCurdy, Moon, Washington, Butler, Greene and other oil districts are to the effect that they all suffered. The losses to the oil men are roughly estimated at $25,000.

Cyclones in Ohio.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 24.—A cyclone from the southwest swept over Lawrence Sunday about 4 o'clock. All houses in its track were lifted bodily from the ground and carried away, many pieces of timber falling several miles distant. The residence of Tom Dennis, in which were his family and himself, was destroyed. Mrs. Dennis was severely bruised about the head and had one shoulder dislocated, while one of her children—a little girl—had her brains knocked out by a falling joist. A number of negro cabins were blown away, leaving the occupants with bruised bodies and broken limbs. The Methodist church was almost entirely destroyed, as was the residence of Mr. Clay.

The Capital Visited.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—A heavy wind and rainstorm, amounting almost to a hurricane, passed over this city about 12:30 o'clock Monday, doing great damage to property. The walls of the new Metzerott music hall, in course of construction, were blown down. George White, the ladies' tailor, and one of his sewing women were taken out dead from the building adjoining Metzerott's, and two others are badly hurt.

Damage at the White House.

A section of the stone balustrade around the roof of the white house was blown down during the storm and crushed through the roof of the portico at the eastern entrance of the basement. A large number of telegraph and telephone wires were naturally carried down with the mass of stone, completely shutting off all communication with the house by wire. The section destroyed was about 30 feet long, composed of freestone in blocks and pilars, and in falling it carried with it a large portion of the portico.

The Estimated Loss.

One of the reservoirs of the Washington Gas Company was struck by lightning and burned. The loss is $50,000. Total losses in the vicinity of Washington will aggregate more than $100,000.

Boys Killed in a Manitoba Blizzard.

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 24.—A 16-year-old son of L. B. Cochrane and a 10-year-old son of E. Walton, merchants of Medicine Hat, whose ranches are just outside of town, were caught in Friday night's blizzard while looking for some cattle. Searching parties organized the following morning found no trace of them until Sunday night. The Cochrane boy was found 16 miles from home frozen to death beside a haystack, his horse eating hay over his dead body. The police are scouring the country for the other boy. Something over a foot of snow has fallen within the last week and the thermometer has been as low as 17 degrees below zero. Heavy snow is blockading the railways and accentuating the grain blockade.

CIRRUS clouds, popularly called a mackerel sky, because they suggest the appearance of a school of mackerel, foretell rain; they usually precede a gathering storm of both wind and rain of some duration, although it may sometimes be of rain alone.

A Cranky Canary.

A childless couple up-town expend most of their sympathies on a canary bird which is a crank on the feather question. The little fellow, who is seven years old, has always had an aversion to his natural dress, and has industriously pulled out every feather he could reach. The result is that he has now a smooth, shiny skin which looks like polished parchment, two or three lonely tail feathers, and a trifle of plumage on his head and neck. In summer he is all right, but the cold of winter bothers him. As soon as frost comes he is clad in a warm flannel jacket, which he admires immensely. At night he lies down on a bed of cotton batting, submits quietly to be covered up, and sleeps there contentedly till morning. If the cold becomes too severe he calls out until he is taken out of the cage and put in bed with his mistress, to whom he cuddles up eagerly for warmth.—N. Y. Sun.

THE Hartman Manufacturing Co., of Beaver Falls, Pa., is a first-class house and makes first-class goods. Its principal productions are Steel Picket Lawn Fences and Gates, Wire Panel Farm Fence, Steel Picket Tree and Flower Guards, Flexible Steel Wire Mats, and Woven Wire Carpet. It is stated that this firm manufactures 80 per cent. of all wire mats used. The Company has sale agencies in the leading cities, and their goods are of course on sale everywhere. They get out Catalogues and Booklets relating to their various specalties, and all their printed matter is exceptionally handsome and must be seen to be appreciated. The Catalogues and Booklets will be cheerfully sent to any address.

BABY MARGARET.

Baby Margaret! here she comes,
Holding wide her rosy thumbs,
Fresh from out her smiling lips;
And her tiny finger tips
Softly curling in the air
On the way to find my hair.

"Sweet!" Why, she is sweeter far
Than whole hives of honey are;
"Pretty?" As the blossoms be
On a June-set apple tree.
Dimples try to steal a bite
From her cheeks so pink and white;
And who ever saw the skies
Bluer than our baby's eyes?
And I hardly dare disclose
How we're led by her small nose.
"Has she hair?" Yes, quite enough
For a mouse's winter muff.
And her feet! Why, all her shoes
Dare not hide them, but refuse,
And go skulking under chairs,
Or a-sliding down the stairs.

Then our baby is so wise;
See the wisdom in her eyes!
By this sign she makes it known:
Shuts her mouth and slowly winks
As she sits and thinks, and thinks,
Like a serious old sage,
Full of knowledge as of age.
"There are babies fairer far."
Did you say? Perhaps there are;
But we never saw one yet
We'd accept for Margaret.

—Rev. Ada C. Bowles, in Boston Transcript.

"If there's one thing more to be despised than another," said Miranda Flint, bringing down her smoothing iron with a decided thump on the snowy linen before her, "it's a man who counts over half his natural life without bringing matters to a close."

"Very true," replied her sister, glancing up from her sewing, "and its my opinion that Silas Weeks is a hankering arter you quite long enough. I'd have given him his walking papers long ago, if I was you."

"No, you wouldn't," replied Miranda, with a toss of her flaxen head. "I ain't wasted ten years for nothing, and I mean to bring him to the point or my name ain't Mirandy Flint."

"Time you did," said Priscilla, "if you don't want a place on the shelf, as you're nigh onto thirty now."

She laughed spitefully as she gathered up the drifts of snowy muslin, new curtains for the sitting-room, and walking out on the low, broad piazza, left Miranda very much excited. To say that young lady's face was scarlet would only be a mild expression; it was a bright crimson, outrivaling the huge poppies nodding at the casement.

Sisters are not always the best of friends. One would suppose by our narrative that the Misses Flint were antagonistic. Far from it; they only disagreed on one point, or rather, one individual — Silas Weeks, Miranda's "young man." Priscilla had no pretentions whatever to good looks, while her sister was quite an acknowledged belle. Her hair was flaxen, eyes blue, cheeks as rosy as apples, reminding one of a very bright chromo, only dispelling the illusion by laughing occasionally and displaying a faultless set of teeth.

Many a country swain sighed for a glance of encouragement, sighing, alas! in vain, however, as Miranda's heart and hand were already spoken for.

Silas Weeks was the lucky suitor. Once he had obtained the girl's promise to become his wife, he appeared in no hurry at all to settle down to married life, preferring to keep company as Mirandy expressed it, "one half his natural life." To be sure he meant to marry the girl in his own good time, never dreaming that by his conduct he was submitting her to the idle gossip of the village. He was a saving fellow, rather inclined to be stingy. It was less expensive to keep one than two, or perhaps more; for Silas Weeks was a far-seeing fellow.

The spring drifted into summer, the bright autumn came, the snows of many winters passed; Miranda saw scores of her companions married and settled, while she remained Miss Flint.

Not until she realized that the face her mirror reflected was not quite as fair as it used to be, that the blue eyes were growing more dim, the roses fading from her cheeks, she determined to bring her lover to the point.

"I'm just glad," said Priscilla, dropping down into the first seat she came to, "that Mirandy's coming to her senses; but I'm afraid that she'll never be married. I'm sorry I mentioned her age, it always riles her so; but then she knows it, and even if she should forget it, it's written down in the family Bible in black and white, and there's no denying figures."

After which burst of feeling she went back to her sewing, singing snatches of an old love song. Thump, thump! went the smoothing iron, while Miranda, with flushed face, bent over it.

"I'll just tell him how Ephraim Brown invited me to the church picnic; that'll bring him round; he's awfully jealous, Silas is.

She smiled proudly at the thought of her lover's jealousy. There is nothing that will make a woman more independent of her old suitor than the advances of a new one. Never did Miss Flint look more bewitching than on that soft summer evening, when, dressed in neat muslin, set off with bright ribbons, she waited for her lover.

He came down the long country road, whistling a merry tune.

"Gracious, Mirandy!" he exclaimed, drawing up in front of the gate, "you do look stunning, though! I've half a mind to eat you up."

Miranda looked very dignified, quite unlike a young lady to be made a meal of, as she gravely replied:

"Oh, don't do that, Silas; you might be sorry for it."

He spent that evening as he spent many others in the trim little sitting-room, listening to Miranda playing the organ. They missed Priscilla's sweet soprano to join them in singing. She was having a good cry thinking of Miranda's "dressing up to receive that good-for-nothing fellow."

"Going to the picnic?" asked Silas of his lady love.

"I think so," said Miranda, playing nervously with the roses at her bodice. "That—is—Ephraim Brown wants me to go with him, and I've not quite made up my mind yet," and she looked up coquettishly into his face.

Ephraim Brown! if the ground had suddenly opened beneath his feet, Silas could not have been more astonished. His face flushed, then grew suddenly pale, as, thrusting his hands down deep into his pockets, he exclaimed:

"Look here, Mirandy, so long as you and me's keeping company, I'll have none of this nonsense; you'll go to the church picnic with me, do you understand?"

So saying, he started off omitting the customary kiss.

Poor Miranda! She felt that she had made a dreadful mistake. What if Silas should go away and leave her? How Priscilla would laugh and call her an old maid!

"Never mind," she said, as she arranged her back hair for the night. "I'll try something else. I'll tell him that Aunt Chary has written for me to come and live with her. He'll never hear of my going so far. Of course it's not true; it's a downright fib; but then women folks have to do something to bring tardy lovers to terms, and I won't be an old maid, so there!"

With this she blew the candle out and was soon safely tucked in bed, dreaming that Silas and she were going to the parson's, when, horrors! the wagon broke down. After tying it up as best they could, they started once more on their journey only to meet with a second delay; for the horse stood still, utterly refusing to go another step, while the entire village laughed and jeered.

How long they would have remained thus she did not know, as the harsh voice of Priscilla broke upon her slumbers.

"Do get up, Miranda!" she fairly shrieked. "Sit up half the night courting," she added, "and lie abed the next day!"

The morning sun was streaming in the little window as she awoke, but little refreshed after her night's rest, and more determined than ever, after that horrid dream, on bringing Silas Weeks to the point.

Her lover called the following evening; it took more than a twinge of jealousy to frighten him off. Again Miranda played the organ, while he sat opposite in a comfortable arm-chair, with his head thrown back and long legs outstretched, just as he had sat and listened three evenings out of the week for ten long years. Priscilla had condescended to come into the parlor and sing, in a high-pitched voice: "Oh Be Joyful."

Miranda did not again refer to Ephriam Brown's invitation. She simply told her lover in a mattet-of-fact way of her intention of making a home with her aunt, happy in the thought that the subdued light in the room kindly hid from view her telltale face, for Miss Flint was not given to telling untruths, and felt rather ashamed of this fall from virtue.

She listened with fluttering heart for his response. Would he agree to her leaving him, after all these years of devotion?

"Now, Mirandy," he broke forth in that nasal, drawling tone so familiar to her, "you ain't goin' to leave me, not if I know it. I wouldn't believe it until I saw you goin' bag and baggage. Just wait till you and me gits married afore you talk of goin' to furrin parts."

So saying, he crossed one long, lank limb over the other and remarked dryly:

"Let's have a little music, and Mirandy, if you don't mind, give us a verse of the 'Sweet By-and-By,' I allus find it kind of soothin'."

She sang in a trembling voice that sweet old hymn, and then found Silas, hat in hand, ready to depart.

"No nearer the point than ever!" she sobbed, as the last echo of his footsteps died upon her ears. "Well, I must do something desperate. I love Silas and I think he loves me just a little; although Priscilla says he doesn't give the snap of his finger for me; but I know that he does, or he would never have riled up so at my going to the picnic with Ephriam Brown. He says," and she brushed the flaxen hair back from her flushed and tear-stained face, "that he'll never believe, until he sees my bag and baggage, that I'm going. Well, he shall see them," she added, while a determined look came into the little woman's face.

Two weeks more rolled by. It was a sultry day in July as Silas Weeks came strolling over the dusty country road, a great straw hat shading his bronzed face, on which there was a pleased and gratified expression. He had sold a yoke of oxen, thereby realizing a goodly sum. His thoughts turned to Miranda.

"I'll buy her somethin' stunnin'," he said, half aloud; "you've got to keep these women folks in good humor."

An approaching vehicle interrupted his meditation. Thinking it a neighbor to whom he might impart his good fortune, he glanced up, when lo! was he dreaming? Before him, fully equipped for a long journey, he saw his lady love. Yes, 'twas Mirandy, sure enough, with a determined look upon her face, while piled up behind her on the wagon were all her earthly possessions, including household effects and a huge green parrot.

"Why, Mirandy!" gasped the dumfounded lover. "Where be you goin'?"

"Going!" and Miranda Flint's eyes flashed with indignation. "Silas Weeks, I'm goin' to leave these parts. You and me's been keeping company quite long enough. If you don't want me, there's some one else as does. I'm in a hurry," she added, "to catch the train. If you'll allow me, Mr. Weeks, I'll be gettin' on."

"But, Mirandy," he exclaimed, catching hold of the horse's bridle, "don't do anything rash! Listen," he continued. "What would you have me do? Just you mention it and 'twill be done in the twinklin' of an eye!"

"What would I have you do?" said Miss Flint, grasping tighter the reins. "Just go to the parson's with me and get hitched."

He looked dumfounded as he replied: "Not in these clothes, Mirandy? You'll let me go home and get these togs off, won't you? We'll go this evenin', sartin."

"No, you don't!" said Miranda. "It would take you another ten years to make up your mind what colored trousers you'd wear."

One look into her face convinced him that, womanlike,

"When she will she will,
You may depend on't,
And when she won't she won't,
So there's an end on't."

Away down deep in his heart this simple country fellow loved the girl, and the thought of losing her well-nigh drove him mad. He had calculated upon marrying after harvest time, but Miranda was determined to hurry matters up, and sitting with a "take me or leave me" expression upon her fair face, he knew that nothing would appease her anger but to go at once to the parson's.

"WHY, MIRANDY, WHERE BE YOU GOIN'?"

Helping the indignant girl from her elevated position and tying the horse to a tree by the wayside, they went directly to the parsonage.

Now the clergyman was a slender, meek little fellow; a man not likely to be attacked with apoplexy; yet he told the deacon (confidentially, of course,) that when he saw Silas and Miranda coming to be married he thought he was going to have an attack of that dreaful disease.

It took but a few moments to make them man and wife, and the groom insisted on giving the parson half the amount he had received for the oxen as a wedding fee.

The newly wedded couple drove home, taking Priscilla completely by surprise as Silas remarked, winking knowingly the while:

"Come now, sister, and shake hands with Mis' Weeks, won't you?"

How the busy tongues of the village gossips wagged!

"Well," said one, "I never thought that Silas Weeks would marry Miranda Flint!"

They are happy in their little home, he content with the idea that he captured Miranda before she went away.

"Had I stayed another half hour to close that bargain," he would say, "I'd a lost her, sure's my name's Silas Weeks!"

The clever little woman laughs to think that she hadn't the remotest idea of leaving the village. "I only wanted to bring him to the point," she said, "and I did it, or my name ain't—Miranda Weeks."—Kate W. Clements, in Yankee Blade.

AN UNDERTAKER'S FIND.

How Eighteen Hundred Dollars Was Made Hauling Out a Dead Body.

During the war I was at Louisville. There were twenty-eight hospitals in the city alone, and funerals were by the wholesale. We buried four thousand after the battle of Shiloh and the lot the government bought soon proved altogether too small for the increasing wants of the dead. One night I was ordered to take out the body of a soldier, and for company as well as help I took along a colored man named Frank. I never did know his other name. He was a slave and belonged to the Lightburnes. I noticed that the pockets of the corpse seemed much inflated as if each contained a hat, and pretty soon Frank, who never kept his eyes off the corpse, to see if it would wake up I suppose, at last broke out: "Massa, wonder what dat dead man has got in dem pockets. Guess I'll look and see. Speck it might be something worth something." I said nothing and Frank went ahead and searched the pockets. He pulled out some immense rolls of confederate money and a silver half-dollar. I took the silver half-dollar and Frank looked over the money, then said: "Say, boss, dat ain't no good. Now, it's a long time since I seen a silver dollar and I'd really like to have that piece for luck. I'll give you all this money for that half-dollar." I thought a moment, and, more to humor the old fellow than anything else, I made the exchange. I regarded the confederate money as absolutely worthless, and really thought I had the worst of the bargain. We drove back to the city and the next day the brother-in-law of the man I was employed by saw me with the roll of money and at once began to banter me for a trade. He was a blockade-runner or cotton-smuggler or something of that sort, but I thought he was only quizzing me. At last he said: "I'm in earnest. What will you take for the roll?"

"What'll you give?" I said.

"Sixty cents on the dollar," he promptly replied.

The hair fairly stood on my head. I didn't believe he was in earnest, but he said: "Count it out; I mean it." Well, of course I did, and counted out three thousand dollars' worth.

"What did you get out of it?"

"Only eighteen hundred dollars in good American money. It was the biggest day's work I've done from that day to this. The money didn't belong to nobody anyhow, and only for my having met the blockade-runner could I have got a cent out of it."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

—The lovely city of Florence has undergone a very beneficial renovation of its sanitary arrangements and is now considered perfectly healthy. The Florentines heard last spring that Queen Margaret had given up her intention of passing a month in their city, owing to the typhoid scare, which resulted from the defective water supply, so after this they did not take long to make improvements.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—Lemon juice will whiten frosting, cranberry or strawberry juice will color it pink, and the grated rind of an orange strained through a cloth will color it yellow.

—Hashed Poultry: Cut fine one pint of any kind of cooked poultry, and cook it for fifteen minutes in a sauce made the same as for creamed potatoes; but place the dish over boiling water when the meat is added.—Christian Inquirer.

—The best way to clean plaster of paris casts which have not been waxed is with a paste of starch. Pound two cups of starch to a powder, sift them through a flour sieve, make a thick paste of it with cold water and apply this to the plaster of paris surface. Allow it to dry on the plaster. Then brush it off with a stiff brush and cloth.—N. Y. Tribune.

—Bread Griddle Cakes: Soak dry pieces of wheat bread in milk or water over night, mash soft in the morning, beat up two eggs and add a little salt, a pint of sour milk; thicken with flour to make a batter; dissolve a small teaspoonful of soda and stir through the mixture; bake on a griddle, serve while hot. If eggs are scarce, one will do.—Housekeeper.

—Pure glycerine is a new remedy for tea and coffee stains of long standing. It should be washed off and the linen washed and exposed to the air in the usual way. Most stains on table linen can be removed by soaking the spots in hot or cold skimmed milk. When strong bleaching fluids are used unless great care is taken the linen becomes tender and will bear but little washing thereafter.—N. Y. World.

—A Pilau: Take a large fine chicken and cover the breast with slices of fat bacon or ham secured by skewers. Put it into a stewpan with two sliced onions. Season it to suit your taste with pepper and mace. Have ready one pint of rice that has been well picked, washed and soaked. Cover the fowl with it. Put as much water as will well cover the whole, stew it about half an hour or till the fowl and rice are thoroughly done, keeping the stewpan closely covered. Dish it all together either with the rice covering the foul or laid round it in little heaps.—Home.

—French Pancakes: One pint of milk, three eggs, two cups sifted flour, two small teaspoonfuls baking-powder, pinch of salt. Beat the yolks of the eggs light, and pour the milk upon them. Sift the flour with the salt and baking-powder, and add this alternately with the whipped whites. Have ready a heated griddle, and cook the latter on this in large spoonfuls. As each pancake is done, transfer it to a hot plate, spread it lightly with butter, then with jam or jelly, and roll it up, the sweetmeat inside. When the rolls are neatly arranged on a dish, sprinkle them lightly with powdered sugar.—Harper's Bazar.

—Sweet Potato Pone: Wash, peel and grate the best quality of sweet potatoes. Measure five teacupfuls into a large bowl. Into this stir three cupfuls of the best molasses, two cupfuls of butter (melt the butter carefully and do not let it get oily,) one cupful of preserved ginger, cut into bits like citron that is prepared for cake, one cupful of preserved orange-peel, also chopped fine, one teaspoonful of pounded ginger and two tablespoonfuls of mixed spices. Mix all thoroughly together. Grease well a plain cake-pan, pour the pone in and bake in a moderately hot oven. Try it with a knife. When the blade comes out clear, remove from the oven. Let it get well cold before removing from the pan.—Boston Herald.

A Velvet Winter Ahead.

Fashion proclaims a velvet winter, which is tantamount to saying that it will be a velveteen winter for those who can not afford the costly fabrics of Lyons. The "Louis" velveteen is one of the very best makes which are upon the market. It is made in every conceivable shade, especially in the new tones of heliotrope, gray and blue. The dyes are admirable, whilst in surface it is silky and sheeny, and in weight it is marvelously light. For a smart costume during the evening season nothing would look better than a slightly-trained skirt, made "umbrella" fashion, to define the figure closely, and over it a three-quarter coat, opening with handsome lapels to display a waistcoat of rich brocade. Dressed in this manner a young lady would be at once fashionable in appearance, while she would have the agreeable consciousness of having effected a good bargain from a pecuniary point of view. It is worth noticing that strong foundation linings are supplied to match every shade of the velveteen.—N. Y. World.

White Broadcloth Table-Cover.

A table-cover of white broadcloth is elegant. Take a square of one yard and a half, and decorate it with a conventional border design, set four inches above the straight cut edge. Work in long-and-short stitch in white or any delicate color of filofloss; work the flower forms well in with the long-and-short stitch, and couch two rows of medium-size gold thread around this. Do the stems in three rows of gold thread couched down, the stitches alternating. Couch the outside line of the leaf with the gold thread, and inside of this lay four lines, following the outline, and running each line inside of the other until the four rows are finished, when the end of the thread must be well fastened after being drawn through. Line with India silk to the lower edge of the design. This is very Japanesque in effect.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Capes for Evening Wear.

Some of the new capes of velvet for dressy evening wear are elegant and picturesque in appearance, and confer great distinction on the wearer if she be tall and slender. One model is of Venetian brown velvet, finished with a jewel-studded color and lined with satin amber. Another of green velvet is lined with fawn-colored silk shot with pale green. The collar is covered with jet. Black velvet capes, made full all round and not gathered in at the back, are variously finished, and some are very gay in effect, being lined with vivid red faille, deep orange brocade, pale rose armure or with a fancy-plaided silk, showing a rich mixture of Persian colors.—Chicago Post.

—The difficulty of applying concrete under water can be overcome by filling a wooden pipe with the substance and lowering it, end first, over the spot where it is to be deposited. By lifting the pipe from the bottom the concrete will spread out without mixing with the water. The precaution should be taken to have the pipe long enough to extend four or five feet above water when resting on the bottom, filling as required so as to retain the proper "head."

Stick to it!

Sometimes you may have to wait. The troubles that have been years in gathering can't always be cleared away in a day. For all the diseases and disorders peculiar to womanhood, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the surest and speediest remedy. You can depend upon that—but if your case is obstinate, give it reasonable time.

It's an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and strengthening nervine, and a positive specific for female weaknesses and ailments. All functional disturbances, painful irregularities and derangements are corrected and cured by it. All unnatural discharges, bearing-down sensations, weak back, accompanied with faint spells and kindred symptoms, are corrected. In every case for which it's recommended, "Favorite Prescription," is guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money is refunded. No other medicine for women is sold on such terms. That proves that nothing else offered by the dealer can be "just as good."

"German Syrup"

Here is an incident from the South—Mississippi, written in April, 1890, just after the Grippe had visited that country. "I am a farmer, one of those who have to rise early and work late. At the beginning of last Winter I was on a trip to the City of Vicksburg, Miss., where I got well drenched in a shower of rain. I went home and was soon after seized with a dry, hacking cough. This grew worse every day, until I had to seek relief. I consulted Dr. Dixon who has since died, and he told me to get a bottle of Boschee's German Syrup. Meantime my cough grew worse and worse and then the Grippe came along and I caught that also very severely. My condition then compelled me to do something. I got two bottles of German Syrup. I began using them, and before taking much of the second bottle, I was entirely clear of the Cough that had hung to me so long, the Grippe, and all its bad effects. I felt tip-top and have felt that way ever since." PETER J. BRIALS, Jr., Cayuga, Hines Co., Miss.

—Thanksgiving passed off quietly in Delano. Services were held at the Presbyterian church by Revs Campbell and Davies. Mr. Campbell preached an able sermon.

—Rev. J. R. Davies who has been holding a series of meetings at Montrose reports the best time he has ever met with in the State. He has quite a reputation as a revivalist.

—William Ziebarth has settled down to solid Granger life for the winter and occasionally takes his place among the sturdy farmers on the hay market. Politically he is as Democratic as ever.

—Among passengers on the G. N. R'y. on Monday bound for the cities we noticed Harry Halgren and O. Jones, of Watertown, Fritz Moy, of Winsted and Cassius Buck, of Howard Lake.

—Dakota winds were not too strong for the whiskers of some of our young Delanoites who have succeeded in raising quite a respectable crop in the few weeks they have spent in that famous farming country.

—At a meening held at the M. E. church last night the following officers were elected to fill vacancies: Second Assistant Superintendent, Miss Irene Cheeley; Secretary, Miss Anna Quinn; Librarian, Otto Kelsey.

—The new furnace in the public Schools is working very satisfactorily and will, when perfectly understood by the teachers, prove an efficient means of heating and ventilating.—Eagle

The Eagle appears to be a little hard on the furnace or the teachers for it must be a poor concern or very dull teachers to require such a paragraph to forestall public opinion after these many weeks of school.

Persons visiting their old homes in the East this winter should take along printed matter descriptive of their new homes in the Northwest. Take copies of this paper with you and ask agents of the Great Northern Railway for a supply of publications. 8-5t, —On Tuesday, Henry C. Parslow, secretary of the Washington Grove No. 9, A. O. U. D. of Delano recieved a draft for $1000.00 which he gave in payment of the benefit to the heirs of their late brother, Jonas Johnson, deceased. Some delay in receiviug this insurance was occasioned by delays in sending for it and from the fact that there happened to be six deaths in one week, a thing not apt to occur often. This makes the second $1000.00 the Druids have paid to hiers in Delano, that of the late Jacob Kurtz being the other case.

—On Wednesday afternoon during the snow fall people living along R. R. Ave. enjoyed a free show at the depot. Agent Bolton and Operator Pappe with an inprovised snow plow consisting of a wheat car door, or something similar, sallied forth in a hurried manner as if they were expecting J. J. Hill on the afternoon train which would be due in a few minutes, to clean off the sidewalk. All went well except when the edge of the plow came into juxtoposition with a spikehead or other obstacle, when both the laborers would make an uncommonly polite bow, accompanied occasionally with that peculiar look of an infant in need of paregoric.

Another Fine Chance.

The opening of the Fort Berthold Indian Reservation in North Dakota to settlement adds about 1,600,000 acres to the public domain. A great deal of this land is very choice and there promises to be quite a rush of settlers, especially to that portion along the Missouri and White Earth rivers. A new government land office for this district was recently established at Minot, N. D., on the line of the Great Northern Railway. Col. W. C. Plummer, the well known North Dakota editor and orator, is receiver of the office. The Colonel will be pleased to answer inquiries about the country. Address him at Minot, N. D.

Credit to Whom Credit is Due.

The Great Northern Railway officials are entitled to high credit for the interest they are taking in attracting immigration to the Dakotas and Minnesota this year. This company maintains a regular immigration bureau and not only advertises the country extensively through the press and pamphlet literature, but it has sent representatives to all state fairs and expositions with fine displays of farm products. It is also publishing carefully authentifcated statements of farm yields this season, which are having a large circulation in the East. If every railway company in the northwest would do as effective work as the Great Northern, an immense influx of desirable settlers would pour into this state in 1892.—Grand Forks (N. D.) Personals.

A. W. Wittman and Dr. Catlin were among city visitors on Monday.

Mrs. Mulford took this morning's accommodation train to the cities.

Henry and Curtis Grafft spent Sunday with their father, at Hamline.

Hitzman's threshing crew returned home from Park River, Dak., on Friday.

F. L. Halgren, mail agent on the G. N. called on Delano friend on Wednesday.

James and Edward Sutton returned from the land of the Dacotahs last week.

Henry Jarret, of Maple Plain, was in town this week, talking horse as usual.

Mrs. Hugh McGuire, of Rockford, was doing business in Delano on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Cunningham took a load of poultry to Minneapolis on Tudseay.

A few weeks since we put in a bid for the national Republican Convention to be held at Delano, and only missed it 30 miles.

Adolph Hohl, of Rockford, passed through Delano on Saturday on his way to visit his sister, Mrs. Ruppelius, at Montrose.

John McGary and wife, Fletcher Ingerson and Sam Briley were among Hennepin county folks in town the day before Thanksgiving.

Miss Julia Steffes returned this morning from Minneapolis. One would think from the bundles she carried that she was traveling for a millinery house.

Misses Mary and Bridget Davis, of Southwest Franklin, were in town Saturday. Miss Bridget was on her way home from Minneapolis where she had been in the hospital for some time.

Assessments and Roads.

EDITOR GAZETTE—Two weeks ago it was Wm. Sturman's assessment of 1890 and last week it was the road leading towards the Ruckholt bridge that laid heavy in the Eagle's gizzard.

Too bad that Franklin town supervisors don't ask the Eagle first what he wants done on the roads in town, too bad that Mr. Sturman knew too much about the property of the proprietor of the Eagle.

One thing however strikes me about the assessment of 1890 in the village, and it is this; that no one from the village to my knowledge has applied to the county board for an abatement or correction of Mr. Sturman's assessment. If the assessment was really as bad as the Eagle would have it, I should think, and I remember the Eagle a year ago intimated to that effect, that a great many applicants would be made to the county board for a correction and abatement, but as I said before I don't know of any, no one seems to have thought it worth while to bother with it, and this should show and prove that the assessment was not so bad after all. I remember in 1885 and 1886 when Delano had its own asessor, a good many applications for abatement were presented to the county board. Ignatius Gutzwiller presented one or more himself, and it would be very interesting reading if that gentleman would give to the public a copy of the affidavit he swore to as Administrator of the estate of Wm. Benz to serve an abatement of taxes, and if he would also give the figures for which the property was assessed, and what it a few weeks after sold for.

But what in the name of common sense is the assessor to blame for, if the total of the assessment don't foot up as much as the Eagle would like to have it, so long as the county board reduced the village, yet suppose for a moment that the assessor put up the property higher, would not the county board have reduced it still more, or what basis or what genius was at work to fix it that way. Somebody certainly made an ass of himself but I don't think it was the assessor. I know the Eagle claims that a great deal of the property was omitted but that can't be true, for the board of review looked into the assessment of 1890 pretty thoroughly and they found 9 buildings omitted in Delano, which they assessed at a total of $750.00 and no doubt some of those buildings Mr. Sturman thought not worth while to assess.

In regard to the other matter about the road to the Ruckholdt bridge. That is a county road and I don't know of any law that supervisors can change county roads. The road from Thomas Worthy's to the bridge in a straight course ought to be opened long ago, now it is null and void. The cow-path as Ed. Ziebarth used to call it, is the only road now to the bridge, if the county board, after they recieve a petition of course, should lay a new and straight road to the bridge, pay the damages for the land, which in this case will not be a trifle, if they as Sec. 56, chapter 13 of general Statute of 1878 provides, open that road, the town of Franklin will without question as the same section of law provides, keep said road in repair, the same as other roads in the town.

County Cullings.

A special from Buffalo to the Minneapolis Times of this morning says J. F. Taylor has left that place owing many creditors.

On Monday while in the flour city we took occasion to call on Editor Stacy of the Tribune about whom all our Wright county people like to keep posted. We found him in his little editorial room high up from the ground and, with one of his associates on the staff, busily engaged in studying the divorce laws. Not, however, we presume, with a view of taking any advantage of them himself as he very smilingly informed us that his family and his salary had both been increased a short time since. He thought it very fortunate that these two events occured at about the same time, and seemed as good natured as usual.

INDEPENDENCE.

MR. EDITOR—My mind of late has become very much exercised over the many articles I see in the papers with big headlines over them, "Does farming pay." For one who does a little farming on a small scale would say "Yes, any fool ought to know farming pays more or less for without farming, the human race would be extinct, for every thing we eat drink and wear comes from the earth and is produced by the farmer but they ask the question, we presume, to see if anvone carries the idea that farming pays big enough to make millionaires we would answer no. Farmers do never become millionaires by mere farming but they do become the tag-end and bob-tail of everything else that comes along from the hewers of wood and drawers of waters to the servants of all clans, cliques and political parties. The good crops of Minnesota and throughout the United States has caused many people to think or imagine that there is more money to be made out of a 40 acre farm than there is out of the G. N. R'y. They count everything all gain. A farmer has only to plant his seed in the spring and sit down on the back porch and has no more to do till it is ready to harvest. It makes a fellow tired to see some of the articles in the papers that are written about farming etc. and some of those fellows could not tell whether potatoes grew in the ground or on stalks same as corn. It would be better if those fellows would tell us something about what they know and not try to tell us about something they know nothing about.

The Republican party is swimming in high anticipation of another glorious victory in '92. Well, perhaps this may come around in due time, can't tell, but let us be consistent and not attribute the growth of the crops during the past season or the present prices paid for farm produce to any political party. Paul may plant, Appolis may water but God giveth the increase." The average yield of spring wheat throughout the spring wheat growing states in 1890 and 1891 was a fraction over 94 percent, in 1883 and '84 it was 100 per cent, in '86 it was 98 per cent. So you see we have had good crops before but it seems we have a class of people that think the farmer must have somebody tell him how much wheat, oats, corn, barley, etc. he has raised and the price he is realizing for the same. Now these fellows are only trying to stuff up the farmer and make him believe he is rich and has lots of money to spend in politics, shoddy clothing and rotgut whisky, but hope there will be some who will stand on their dignity and say get behind me Satin for I never knew you. Yes, these fellows write articles for the papers telling what fine farms and nice buildings can be seen all over the country. So much different from what it was 20 or 30 years ago. Does this not show the farmers in prosperity? My friend do you know the hardships and privations of pioneer life? How were these great improvements made in Hennepin and Wright counties by men who came here in an early day? They left home, friends and dear associations in the east and pioneered this country where they hoped to get a home for themselves and families. They took up a claim in Crow River valley, built a cabin dobbed it with mud and moved in with their little family and for thirty years, or more, by hard work, industry and privation we will say most of them are comfortably situated but none of them are millionaires. The farmers that are now in easy circumstances have plenty of this world's goods in a measure, are responsible to no political party, but to themselves and providence who has watched over them during their sojourn from the early settling of this country up to the present time. Some of these fellows have voted the Democratic ticket all their lives and yet they live! How strange!

The revival meetings are still in progress at Armstrong conducted by Rev. J. N. Potter, of Rockford, and Michael Wellcom, of Monticello, the meetings are good and quite a number have manifested a desire to live a more exemplary life. It is thought the meetings will continue through the present week.

Mr. Editor hoping your thanksgiving dinner may be a sayory one composed of roast turkey, baked beans, brown bread, the McKinley bill and cold water to wash it down. The turkey is a wonderful bird. It has the honor of presiding at the annual feasts in this country for more than two centuries and at public gatherings and political rallies has had more or less experience.

KICKAPOO INDIANS.

ON THE WAR PATH!

NATURE'S REMEDIES.

Some six or seven years ago Dr. Frank Cushing, of the Smithsonian Institution, astonished the world by his account of the semi-civilized Zuni Indians, who, until his visit to them, had successfully maintained their exclusiveness. He only succeeded in securing an entry into one of their villages through the kind-heartedness of the Zunis. When he was commissioned to investigate the character and habits of these superior people he was a very sick man, was being treated, in fact, for consumption. The mission was given him in the hope that residence in the warm South would restore him to strength and preserve a valuable officer to the Government. During his journey his illness grew upon him, and when he reached a Zuni village he was stretched in exhaustion upon a litter which was carried by his friends. They represented to the Zunis that a great American chief had come to them imploring to be cured. On this the Indians received him, nursed him assiduously and finally made a well man of him. Eventually he was received into the tribe, learned their language, religion and science of medicine.

DR FLY.

DR FLOATING POPLAR.

One curious thing he discovered was that the principal cause of his cure was a liquor whose composition is unknown to the Zunis. They hold it in great esteem and twice every year they send an embassy to the Kickapoo Indians, who manufacture it, and purchase a supply of it. Several times the Zunis attempted to purchase the secret of its composition, but always without success. Once they attempted to force the coveted knowledge from the Kickapoos and made war upon them for that purpose, but were repulsed.

Fortunately a white man was more successful with the Kickapoos. This tribe originally dwelt in Illinois. Thence the Government moved them to Kansas and later on to the Indian Territory, where they inhabit the old Sacs and Fox reserve. A Government scout, Mr. Charles Bigelow, better known on the border as Texas Charlie, was taken very sick while visiting the Kickapoos, and was restored by their doctors, whose chief prescription was the Sagwa, whose ingredients the Zunis are so desirous of learning. When Mr. Bigelow recovered he pointed out to the chiefs of the Kickapoos that they might acquire wealth by preparing quantities of Sagwa for sale

DR BAD EAGLE.

AMONG THE WHITES.

They demurred for a long time, but finally fell in with the proposal and sent a group of their doctors to travel under the guidance of Mr. Bigelow and sell the Sagwa. Their success was phenomenal, so great, indeed, that it became impossible to supply the demand and adhere to the crude processes of manufacture adopted by the Kickapoos. Accordingly, the Kickapoo Indian Medicine Company was formed, with headquarters at New Haven, Conn., and the manufacture of Sagwa and other Kickapoo remedies was begun on a large scale. About six hundred men are employed, and the capital of the Company is $200,000. Giving round numbers only, the sales of the Company last year were 500,000 bottles of Sagwa, 400,000 bottles of the Kickapoo Indian Oil, 100,000 bottles of the Kickapoo Cough Cure, 120,000 boxes of the Kickapoo Worm-Killer and about 90,000 boxes of Kickapoo Salve.

DR FLYING CLOUD.

The Sagwa is a tonic purely vegetable in character, being the liquor obtained by boiling in water certain varieties of bark, leaves, herbs and roots. The Kickapoo theory of sickness is that it results from a poverty of the blood, involving cessation or sluggishness in the action of one or more of the vital organs. Hence they direct their attention solely to the purifying and strengthening of the blood. This the Sagwa effects beyond question, though just how it acts will probably not be known until the Kickapoos are willing to make the ingredients of their great specific known. The benefits of its use may be noted in the Kickapoos themselves. No finer race physically exists in the world. Both men and women are tall, strong and magnificently developed. There is not a weakling in the tribe. They are a very reticent people. Like the Zunis they are very conservative and have never acquired the vices of civilization. The Indian nations generally, judging from the reports of early settlers and travellers in this country, were healthy people until intemperance and diseases contracted from white men began to play havoc with them. The Kickapoos have always resisted contaminating influences and preserve their pristine vigor. Possibly the fact that Sagwa keeps them robust is the reason. A desire for alcohol often arises from irregular action of the bodily organs. However that may be it is a fact that derive astonishing benefit from the use of Sagwa. It appears to act upon the stomach, bowels, liver, kidneys and bladder, stimulating all of them to action; and it is never too violent a stimulant, for the Kickapoos live to a remarkable old age. They always administer the Sagwa to their sick either alone or in conjunction with their other famous remedies. The price of Sagwa is one dollar a bottle.

RED DEER.

DEBILITATED PERSONS

DR HOLE IN THE DAY

DR GREAT MOON

The Kickapoo Indian Oil is a very valuable remedy, affording effectual and speedy relief in all nervous and inflammatory diseases. As a quick cure for all kinds of pain it is magical. The oil may be taken internally or applied externally. For children it is excellent. The price is twenty-five cents per bottle.

The Kickapoo Indian Worm-Killer is prepared by the Kickapoos from their native formula, of roots and herbs. It is a positive specific for the removal of stomach, seat or pin worms, whether in adults or children. It is a pleasant, safe, prompt and effective remedy, and requires no physic. Its price is 25 cents per box.

DR BRAVE BEAR.

The Kickapoo Indian Salve is made by the Kickapoo Indians from the best buffalo tallow (not hog's lard). It is a specific for skin diseases, soothing and excellent for erysipelas, eczema, boils, piles, burns, &c. It also sells for 25 cents per box.

The Kickapoo Indian Cough Cure is an invaluable Indian remedy for coughs, colds, asthma, throat and lung diseases. It is purely vegetable and pleasant to take. Its action is specific. The price of the Kickapoo Indian Cough Cure is half a dollar per bottle. These are the chief medicinal preparations in use by the Kickapoos. Their excellence is proved by the fact that they have preserved the tribe in health, notwithstanding the fact that they have been removed from their original home in the north to the centre and afterwards to the extreme south of the country, and have thus been forced to brave great climatic variations. Another proof of the superiority of these medicines is found in the enormous quantities that are being sold yearly in all parts of this country. In any house where once they have been used a supply of the Sagwa, at least, is always kept on hand, for it is known to be necessary. Most everydruggist will it.

"A Tariff on Coffee is a Tax, Unquestionably."—Senator C. K. Davis at Buffalo.

If tariff on coffee is a tax, tariff on sugar is a tax, tariff on tin is a tax, tariff on knives and pearl buttons and tariff on anything that has to be paid is tax. If you smuggle goods the tariff may be escaped, but that does not destroy the truth that TARIFF IS A TAX.

The Eagle and Journal each in its way seeks to destroy the effect our tariff quotations might have on the reading public and among other things to deny the authenticity of the quotation from Hon. C. K. Davis' speech. Each informs its readers what Mr. Davis did say from their standpoint. Below we give their versions. Compare them for yourselves.

"What Senator Davis did say, however, was this: That if a tariff was put on coffee it would certainly be a tax because coffee cannot be raised in the United States and has to be imported."—Delano Eagle, Nov. 19.

"A tariff on coffee WOVLD unquestionably be a tax, was what the Senator did say and he went on to show why it would be—"—Buffalo Journal, Dec. 2.

As for the Journals fling about their being no tartff on coffee if he read the GAZETTE of Nov. 20 he must know that we were aware of that fact. It can hardly be possible that the Journal got its information from that source.

When the Journal, the Eagle or anybody else says we are trying to decieve they are wrong.

"Tariff Pictures.

During the fiscal year 1890, when 90 per cent. of the duties on foreign materials manufactured and exported was refunded, and the amount of drawback pay was $2,771,224.99.

Under the McKinley Tariff law which returns to the exporting manufacturer 99 per cent. of the duties paid on foreign materials, the amount of drawback swelled during 1891 to $4,911,189.54.

Our manufacturers now enjoy, practically, all the benofits which free raw materials could give, yet the free trader is not happy."—New York Press.

From a Repbulican stand point this may be all right. But, from a Democratic view of the matter it is all wrong. For some time we have heard of different articles of American manufacture being sold in foreign lands for less prices than we Americans can buy them here at home, where they are made. If you will carefully look into the matter you will find this Tariff Picture, quoted above, explains the matter quite nicely. It says that on material brought to this country and manufactured and then taken out of the country and sold, under the old tariff law, 90 per cent. of the tariff, that had been paid, to get the raw material into this country would be refunded. And that now, under the McKinley bill, 99 per cent. of the tariff is refunded, to those who have brought raw material here and made it up and shipped it out of the country, leaving them but one per cent of the tariff to pay; whereas, if they sell the same goods in America they must add the full tariff to the price of the goods and figure their profits on the increased price in order to come out whole. No wonder many American made goods can be bought in other countries cheaper than at home if the manufacturers are paid by the United States government, by way of refunding the tariff, the enormous sum of $4,911,189.54, as the Press says they are. Why should citizens of the United States make themselves pay this or any other sum of money to manufacturers in new England or any other place for the priviledge of having them reap the harvests they do and become millionaires while we use inferior qualities and pay superior prices for our own purposes? If these manufactures can buy raw materials and pay a tariff on it, and then by having 99 per cent of the tariff paid back leaving them to pay the one per cent compete in the world's markets for trade. Would it not be better to leave off the tariff in the first place and allow ourselves to buy the goods for what they are worth instead of paying the advanced prices while our manufacturers are supplying the same articles or better ones to our foreign neighbors leaving us at a disadvantage? No goods are too good for our people to use. We like nice warm woolens as well as do our German and Scandinavian bretheren across the water. These cold northern states in winter time should be supplied with flannels with the tariff off if any countries in the world are. We need them and nobody knows it better than we do ourselves, and since C. K. Davis informed our citizens at Buffalo that he had saved them at least $25,000. in Minnesota by the reduction on binding twine that he succeeded in persuading Congress to make we are better aware that the same could be done on woolens and other goods. Who says tariff is not a Tax?

DEMOCRATS at Washington are having a lively time over the selection of a Speaker of the House to succeed Tom Reed, whose rulings as presiding officer was so obnoxious to many at the last session. Roger Q. Mills appears to stand the best show though Crisp of Georgia is a strong competitor, McMillan, of Tennesee, Springer, of Illinois, and Wilson, of W. Va. are also in the field.

ST. PAUL is still rustling for the National Democratic convention to be held next summer. It has been proposed to turn the Market Hall into a grand Auditorium capable of holding 15,000 people, for the occasion. Market Hall is centrally located and would make a fine place for such a meeting.

"LAND BILL ALLEN" who is said to have spent $60,000. in getting the Homestead Law passed, died, Nov. 29, in the Franklin county Infirmatory, Ohio. Though thousands live in pleasant homes on account of this man's acts he died homeless.

NEW YORK politicians are having rather an interesting time to find out who shall have the most members in the Senate, the Republicans or the Democrats. Both claim frauds, steals, etc., etc. Such things ought not to occur in a well civilized country.

REPORTS from Otter Tail county say that Hon. J. B. Hompe is a probable candidate for Congress from the seventh district and that he claims it is sure for the Alliance party to which he belongs.

THE Golden Jubilee of Archbishop Peter Richard Kenrick, of St. Louis, was held on Nov. 30. Archbishop Ireland was present and participated in the ceremonies.

THE sanity of Kaiser Wilhelm, of Germany, it is reported has been called into question from some of his inflammatory utterances to his soldiers recently.

HUNDREDS of people are said to have been nearly asphyxiated by the natural gas works getting out of order on Tuesday night at Detroit.

CORRESPONDENCE

ST. MICHAELS.

Pretty cold! Everybody feels it and yet everybody says so as if it was something new.

High court in Squire Engel's office yesterday. Valentine Herman from St. Michaels Station was accused of having maimed a sheep belonging to Philip Jos. Zachman Found guilty and fined $25.00 and costs or 60 days in the county jail. Not having the cash and not being able to procure bail he was committed and forthwith transported to Buffalo by Constable Menth.

The advocates of McKinleyism have promised good times to follow the rise in tariff duties, and the metropolitan papers predicted a plethora of money for the farmers before a kernel of the crop of 1891 was harvested. I wonder they didn't furnish the farmers extra large portmanis to hold that deluge of money but now the grain is gathered and in the bins and the farmer finds it just as hard and difficult to meet his obligations as in former years. The crops were fairly good (have seen by far better ones with better prices) but only a small per centage of the net gain in it is going to the farmers pocket. The grain dealers with the Great Northern and Northern Pacific R'ys. to aid manage to get the biggest share of profits and the farmer has to submit. It seems the farmers were created to feed the world and make a lot of millionaires and if they are allowed to eat their fill they ought not to grumble, it is rebellion against the Creator. Farmers mind this and work for the prosperity of your country even if you are cheated out of the biggest share belonging to you. A FARMER.

INDEPENDENCE.

Our first winter month has just got along. Cant say we were anxious for its annual return for it always brings with it a kind of coldness the people do not appreciate very much. The cold weather we have been having of late was about as hard as we generally get this time of year it seemed to fit snug and people were talking about protection a good deal of the time and wishing for a copy of the McKinley bill to keep themselves warm but there is not very much warmth in a shoddy overcoat made of rags from the pest houses of Europe.

Earl and George Hoisington expect to raise a breeze now. Each of them has a windmill and will take their drinks of the water that comes from the regions far below.

The revival meetings that have been going on at Armstrong during the last three weeks conducted by Rev. J. N. Potter, of Rockford, and Elder Michael Wellcom, of Monticello, we are happy to say, have resulted in much good to quite a number of persons. These two ministers have labored hard for the upbuilding of the Gospel and their fellow man.

A few of the Independence people have been attending the Kickapoo Indian Sagwa Stomach Liver pad performance at Delano. As far as they went all pronounce it very good. What is it anyway? Much ado about nothing.

There will be a business meeting at the Independence A. C. church on next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. All members of the A. C. church are invited to be present.

Prohibition meeting at the town hall to-night. Everybody invited to come out.

J. N. Potter and family, of Rockford took thanksgiving dinner at H. J. Bowen's Independence.

The village of Maple Plain is very much in need of some kind of a professional man. A prosesssinal mule driver might do if nothing better could be found.

Mrs. Peter Moss is on the sick list.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fogleman went to Minneapolis last week by the Soo line, to visit relatives.

John M. Williams has been on the sick list but is improving.

Cord wood is in good demand this cold weather.

Mrs. Shaw, of Independence has moved to Minneapolis.

About all the threshing crews have returned from the west.

When your corressondent was in Minneapolis a few days ago took the trouble to visit the mammoth court house which is now being built. As I looked upon it I thought what a prodigal waste of stone, brick, money and brains. It will do for a show and a blow but do not think there will be any more comfort in it than one that would cost half the money. It will also bring a burden upon the tax payers of Hennepin County that will last for half a generation and will add no value to the real estate of Hennepin county outside of Minneapolis.

JOHN H. MCGARY.

WATERTOWN WAYS.

Mr. E. Edwards, of Minneapolis, is visiting relatives in this vicinity this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Eppel, of Delano, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Kohler on Thanksgiving day.

Mr. G. O. Moore, of Minneapolis, representing the "Inter-State Savings and Loan Association", of Minneapolis, lectured in the town hall last Tuesday evening.

We noticed J. M. Finnegan, of Norwood, on our streets one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Hanseman, of Delano, were calling on friends in Watertown on Sunday last.

Mr. Frank Crawford, we understand, was married to a Miss—— last Wednesday. We extend our congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Crawford and wish them a long and happy life.

Professor Carlson of the St. Peter Lutheran College, is to deliver a lecture in the Swedish church, both in the afternoon and evening on the 26th of this month, in the evening he will lecture in English. Mr. Carlson has the reputation of being a first class speaker and those who go to hear him may expect a treat.

Professor Dean and Miss Peters, our efficient school teachers, we understand will spend their holidays abroad.

Rev. B. E. Sherwin preached an excellent sermon last Sunday evening from the text found in Matt. 16 Chap. 26 v., "For what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul."

There will be a Chrisimas tree in the M. E. church on Christmas eve.

If you would make your families glad and yourself happy, call on our merchants and purchase each member of your family a Christmas present.

WAVERLY.

Miss Nellie Barrett spent Thanksgiving at home.

Miss Smith, of Albion, spent Thanksgiving in town.

Our wood dealers Thomas Noonan and W. J. Walsh have quite a business of late. They are shipping wood as quick as they can get cars, but the cars are very scarce.

Mr. and Mrs. J. McKesky, of Hopkins, were in town Monday visiting friends.

Among those who went to the city Tuesday were Mr. and Mrs. Hill, Mrs. and Elvie Cruzen, Mrs. McGuire, Mrs. J. Suck, W. King and F. Martin.

The express car being so crowded on the G. N., on Tuesday some of the goods had to be put in the baggage car.

Johny O'Conall, our popular merchant went to St. Paul, Tuesday.

John Westrel, of Waconia, was in town, Tuesday on business.

John McHale, our popular butcher, made a large shipment of poultry, Tuesday. This looks like Thanksgiving.

The team of Frank Matson ran away Tuesday. The result was a small injury to Frank.

C. B. wrote to a certain lady in town but she gave the letter to C. S. "Write again Charlie."

Dr. Flanigan was in town Tuesday.

J. F. Kventsky Sundayed at home.

Ernest Stuck took a trip to the sawdust city Wednesday to sell some poultry.

J. J. Barrett made a trip to Smith Lake this week.

S. Stevens, of Montrose, was in town Tuesday on business.

Mike Boyle spent Tuesday in the city.

C. O. Keene of the Minnesota and Dakota Elevator Co. is laid up with rheumatism this week.

Mr. Chas. Sobets and Miss Nora were united in marriage, Tuesday, by Rev. J. Guillot. After the ceremony the hosts retired to the home of the bride where a pleasant time was reported.

The corpse of Thomas Muldoon was brought up Thursday evening and was buried Friday, at 10:00 o'clock. The funeral was very large on account of his being known well around here.

John Muldoon returned from Fargo, Friday to attend the funeral of his dead brother.

Jeff O'Conall was a city caller Monday.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27, 1891.

How much longer is the Blaine-Harrison farce to be kept on the boards? Mr. Blaine's friends on the Republican National Committee as well as those who were here during the week with the delegations from various cities are telling everybody that Mr. Blaine is to be the candidate of his party next year. Mr. Harrison is a mild-mannered, cold blooded, sort of a man, but this committee and delegate business was a little more than he could patiently stand, so when the committee, after finally adjourning, called at the White House in a body, its members met with a reception colder than Raum's patent refrigerator could ever produce. Mr. Harrison was offended, and he took special care to impress that fact upon the committee. But the committee did not seem to care much, for as its members left the White House on their way over to the State department, one of them remarked loud enough to be heard by all, "Who is this man, Harrison, anyway?" Mr. Blaine received the committee in his most cordial manner, and made himself so pleasant that they remained in his office nearly an hour, and when they left they nearly paralyzed the staid and dignified employes of the State department by giving three cheers and a tiger for Blaine.

Maj. McKinley has the Blaine fever. He took advantage of his stay in the city this week to call on Mr. Blaine and to let him understand that he was willing to take the second place on the ticket with him but with nobody else. Mr. Blaine is said to have been very demonstrative at this meeting with McKinley, in the way of placing his arm around his shoulder, etc., but he took particular care not to commit himself in favor of McKinley for an associate on the ticket. This sort of thing can have but one ending—Mr. Blaine must retire from the cabinet unless Mr. Harrison will withdraw his claims for a renomination. A bet was made last night in a prominent hotel that Mr. Blaine would resign before Jan. 10.

$100,000 is big money to pay for a political convention, but that is said to represent the price paid by Minneapolis for the advertising she will get out of the holding of the Republican National Convention there next June, and that amount, which is to be paid to Boss Clarkson's committee, does not include the price paid for the votes of two committeemen and the incidental expenses of the delegation here.

Much interest is already expressed in the meeting of the Democratic Executive committee, which will be held here December 8, to fix a time for the meeting of the full committee to select the time and place for holding the next National Convention. Washington, Cincinnati, Baltimore, Minneapolis, New York, and Detroit are already in the field.

The first applicant for a loan under the Farmers' Alliance sub-treasury scheme made his appearance at the Treasury Department this week. He was from Harford Co., Maryland, and was not very positive what he wanted, further than that he wanted as much money as the $18 cash, which he said he had, would pay the interest on, and he told the clerk in the Fourth Auditor's office, to whom the application was made, that his farm would be security for the principle of the loan. He was very much disappointed when told that Uncle Sam was at present himself a borrower instead of a lender.

If the statements made by California and New York Republicans to the National Committee of that party be accepted, and there are good reasons for believing that they stated the situation just as it appeared to them, there is little chance for the electoral votes of either of those states being cast for the Republican nominee next year. And according to the same source of information it will require herculean efforts on the part of the party managers to keep the northwest in line, notwithstanding the holding of the convention at Minneapolis. These statements are but confirmatory of Democratic information, with the single exception of California. Although it had long ago been determined by the Democratic leaders to make a hard fight for that state, it was done more on general principles than because of any specific knowledge of a change in the sentiments of the people toward the Republican high tariff. That the northwest, the great agricultural section, is slowly but surely adopting Democratic ideas on the tariff, is as certain as that the sun rises in the east and sets in the west, and if there is no mistake made by the party leaders a majority of the states in that section will become, in time, as reliably Democratic as Texas.

Representative Bynum, since his withdrawal, has been working hard for Mills, whose friends now claim 90 votes. Mr. Crisp's managers say that he has 114 votes, but others say that he has not over 85. The other candidates give no figures. Only ten days left to settle it.

The Toledo Weekly Blade Free.

The proprietors of the TOLEDO BLADE, the best known political weekly of the United States, are making preparations to create a sensation this winter by sending a million specimen copies to as many readers in all parts of the United States, who do not now take that paper. To that end they invite everybody to send the addresses of as many people as they care to by postal card or letter. Send one name, ten, twenty, one hundred or a thousand. As many as you have time to write, only take care to send correct addresses of people that you know appreciate good reading. It will cost but a little trouble, and the thousands who receive sample copies will feel grateful. Send all the names and addresses you please to THE BLADE, Toledo, Ohio.

The Weekly Blade and Campaign of 1892.

THE TOLEDO WEEKLY BLADE, the most prominent Republican weekly published, is the only political weekly newspaper in the United States that is edited with special reference to circulation in every part of the Union. It has subscribers in every State, territory and nearly county of the United States. It has always above 100,000 subscribers and during a late Presidential campaign had 200,000 subscribers. Aside from politics it is a favorite family paper, having more and better departments than can be afforded by papers of small circulation. Serial and Short Stories, Wit and Humor, Poetry, Camp-fire (Soldiers), Farm, Sunday School Lessons, Talmage Sermons, Poultry, Puzzles, Household, (best in the world), Answers to Correspondents, etc., etc. Only One Dollar a year. Send postal to THE BLADE Toledo, Ohio, for a free specimen copy. Ask, also for confidential terms to agents if you want to easily earn a few dollars cash.

A POPULAR FAMILY.

JENNIE: "How is it, Kate, that you always seem to 'catch on' to the last new thing? Do what I may, you always seem to get ahead of me."

KATE: "I don't know: I certainly do not make any exertion in that direction."

JENNIE: "Well, during the last few months, for example, you have taken up painting, without any teacher; you came to the rescue when Miss Latarge deserted her Delsarte class so suddenly, and certainly we are all improving in grace under your instruction; I heard you telling Tommy Eames last evening how his club made mistakes in playing baseball; you seem to be up on all the latest 'fads,' and know just what to do under all circumstances; you entertain beautifully; and in the last month you have improved so in health, owing, you tell me, to your physical culture exercises. Where do you get all of your information from in this little out-of-the way place?—for you never go to the city."

KATE: "Why, Jennie, you will make me vain. I have only one source of information, but it is surprising how it meets all wants. I very seldom hear of anything new but what the next few days bring me full information on the subject. Magic? No! Magazine! And a great treasure it is to us all, for it really furnishes the reading for the whole household: father has given up his magazine that he has taken for years, as he says this one gives more and better information on the subjects of the day; and mother says that it is that that makes her such a famous housekeeper. In fact, we all agree that it is the only really FAMILY magazine published, as we have sent for samples of all of them, and find that one is all for men, another all for women, and another for children only, while this one suits every one of us; so we only need to take one instead of several, and that is where the economy comes in, for it is only $2.00 a year. Perhaps you think I am too lavish in my praise; but I will let you see ours, or, better still, send 10 cents to the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th Street, New York, for a sample copy, and I shall always consider that I have done you a great favor; and may be you will be cutting us out, as you say we have the reputation of being the best informed family in town. If that be so, it is Demorest's Family Magazine that does it."

Doubtless others will arise to fill their places, since each generation produces men to meet all its emergencies.

IN the thirty-five states and territories of the United States which have made returns of the deposits in the savings banks, amount to $1,524,844,306. The savings bank deposits in Great Britain are $329,174,542. Many American workmen own their homes and invest their savings in building associations. British workmen are almost invariably renters.

ONE of the leading mine owners in Colorado says that electricity has opened up a new era in the production of silver. Many of the high mountain mines have been almost valueless because of the expense of transporting fuel to them. Now, through the utilization of water power with the electric motor these mines can be operated cheaply, and a notable increase of output may be looked for.

DIPHTHERIA, which has been more or less epidemic through the eastern and central states for the last two months, is now raging fiercely west of the Mississippi. Its sister disease, scarlet fever, goes hand in hand with it. Across the Atlantic influenza, or la grippe, is raging from the north of Scotland to the south of Italy. It is a singular year for epidemics, and yet, withal, the death rate is not abnormally high.

THE papers of New Orleans are prophesying that their port will become the greatest shipping port of the country within the next ten years, greater even than New York. They say that the producers in the northern states west of the Ohio river and in the southern states west of the Alabama river have found out that they can ship grain, cotton and pork to Europe from New Orleans more cheaply than from any other port.

IN speaking of the rice crop, the American Grocer says: "Reports from Japan are confirmatory of damage as regards the quality and quantity. Competent authorities estimate that recent typhoons and bad weather will cause a shrinkage of fully 20 per cent. from average crop—say equal to 5,000,000 to 6,000,000 barrels. The loss is undoubtedly very severe, as importations are being made into Japan from Corea and adjoining sections."

A RHODE ISLAND man whose land stretches for two or three miles along Narragansett bay planted several years ago 150 acres of the apparently barren shore with larches, white pines and suitable imported trees, and has secured a growth that is both handsome and profitable. The old settlers told him that weeds wouldn't live there, but he planted carefully and intelligently, and his lesson in forestry is attracting much attention in the state.

As state legislatures are about to assemble in winter session, the war upon the free pass system begins to break out in feverish spots. As an instance, the transportation committee of the Boston Executive Business association may be mentioned. It proposes that the legislature make any of its members asking for or receiving railroad passes guilty of a misdemeanor and likewise any executive officer of the state or member of the judiciary who may receive or ask for railroad passes.

A PROPOSITION has been made by a Munich inventor to build an electric railroad between Vienna and Buda-Pesth, about 200 miles, and run cars on it at the rate of from 120 to 150 miles an hour. He does not propose to have trains, but single cars fifty feet long each propelled by electricity supplied from the rails and to follow each other ten minutes apart. To obviate the difficulty which the inevitable air current which so great a speed will create, he proposes to have the tracks at least ten yards apart. Otherwise the tremendous air currents might blow the passing train from the track.

SINCE the admission of new states and the new apportionment the total number of votes in the electoral college is 444. Each state is entitled to as many electoral votes as it has senators and representatives in congress. Under the new apportionment the house of representatives will have 356 members, the ration being one member to 173,901 of population. There are forty-four states or eighty-eight senators, which, added to 356 representatives, give the total number of electoral votes, which is 444. A majority is 223, a tie 222. In case of a tie the election would be thrown into the house.

LATER.

More Trouble.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 1.—Information reached this place to-night of more trouble in the mining region at Oliver Springs. This is one of the places where the stockade and other property was burned and the convicts released. There has been another reign of terror there during the last three or four days. It started Friday night when the white miners got on a big drunk, shouldered their Winchesters and marched on the house where the negro miners were employed. They attacked their house, firing hundreds of shots, and gave the negroes notice that if they did not leave within twenty-four hours all would be killed, A nuber of negroes fled in terror. Others more bold, called on the president of the company for protection. He secured the names of ten of the leaders of the mob and took out warrants for their arrest. The men fled to the mountains, though the officers succeeded in capturing two. They postponed their trials, and Saturday the white miners struck because their demand that the warrants against the ten men be dismissed was refused.

AN engineer on one of the railroads in Switzerland became enraged because of his discharge. For revenge he waited for a favorable opportunity and entered the cab of a locomotive, opened the throttle of the engine as wide as possible. He then jumped from the cab and let the locomotive dash down the track at full speed just as a train loaded with passengers came rushing from the opposite direction on the same track. The runaway locomotive and the locomotive of the passenger train plunged into each other with awful force, both engines being entirely wrecked and filling the track with a mass of debris. The engineer and fireman of the passenger train were killed, and three passengers fatally injured.

FOR some time the people of West St. Paul have been annoyed by the increasing number of small fires. On the night of the 1st, Morris and Marx Michaels were arrested in the act of firing a building. NOBLE REPORTS.

The Secretary of the Interior on the Work of His Department During the Year.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The secretary of the interior has submitted his annual report to the president. In a summary of its contents he gives this resume:

A Summary.

The general land office is nearly abreast of its work; the Indian bureau is accomplishing the rapid disintegration of the Indian reservations, the severance of tribal relations and the education of the Indian youth. The pension office is rapidly completing the allowance of all pensions legally possible under the laws, moving at the rate of about 30,000 a month; the census has been taken and its publications rapidly going on; the geological survey is selecting the reservoirs for the arid lands of the far west and southwest; the railroad bureau is making ready for the maturity of the debts due from the subsidized railroads, the Union Pacific and others; the bureau of education, besides having distributed the vast fund allowed the agricultural colleges for white and colored pupils in the different states, is engaged in new plans for the accumulation and distribution of information useful for the schools and their better management; and the patent office having celebrated its centennial, is still advancing in the volume and variety of its investigations and patents.

On Homestead Settlements.

The report notes: "The years of the present administration have been marked to a notable degree by the expansion of the public domain for private settlements." The history is given of the opening of the new Indian purchases in Oklahoma under the proclamation of September 22, when nearly 1,000,000 acres were taken by settlers between noon and dark; while 2,718 Indians were elevated to citizenship by taking allotments of 160 acres each. It is a significant fact that a shipment, by special train, of a cargo of wheat from the Oklahoma lands, first opened by proclamation on April 22, 1889, was received in August last at one of the Armour elevators in Chicago, and the population has already reached 80,000.

Naturalizing Indians.

Over 16,000 Indians have already become citizens of the United States, and about 4,000 more by taking their allotments have signified their desire to become citizens. To these numbers should be added the 7,619 Indians in Oklahoma, who have taken or agreed to take allotments. A total of 27,619 Indians naturalized, and total of acres acquired for settlement of about 13,000,000 during the present administration alone.

The Indian Population.

The Indian population is reported as 250,000, exclusive of natives of Alaska. The number of Indian youth enrolled and the average attendance in the schools has increased. In 1888 the appropriation for support of Indian schools was $1,179,916, in 1891 $1,842,770, and for 1892 it is $2,591,650. The Indians, as a rule, have consented so readily to send their children to school that it was not found necessary immediately to enforce attendance.

Pensions.

The secretary refers to the relief afforded by the act of June 27, 1890, to thousands of disabled veterans and their dependent relatives, who through lapse of time are not able to prove the origin of disability in the line of duty as required by prior enactments. It is shown that first payments have greatly decreased in amounts, that the allowance of original pensions will soon all be made, that there will then be a great decline in the sum necessary to pay pensions, and the lists will rapidly decline from death and other causes. There was 262,521 first payments made during the fiscal year, requiring $38,572,214.31, being less in amount by $63,592 than the 130,514 first payments of the previous year required. The average value of first payments in the fiscal year of 1890 was $485.71, while the average value in 1891 of first payments in all claims was $239.33, and first payments of claims under the act of June 27, 1890, was only $71.28. The present issue of certificates is about 20,000 per month, and it is thought that the pension bureau will be able to carefully adjudicate 350,000 claims during the present year. The work at this rate will allow all lawful pension claims within the next thirty months, and of course all first payments will then have been disposed of. This alone will cause a drop of $30,000,000 in the appropriation, and the list will thence on constantly diminish by natural causes. It is predicted that the pensions will when the highest point is reached not exceed very greatly the present sum, and be subject to a great decrease immediately after. The estimate for 1893 is $141,156,000.

The Census.

The secretary expresses the belief that the eleventh census will stand as much fair and honest criticism as any work of the same magnitude heretofore done either at home or abroad. The announcement of the population, November 26, 1890, as 62,622,250, has not been changed, and upon that announcement the apportionment law was passed nearly two years sooner that at prior census periods. It is estimated that to complete the work will require a further appropriation of about $1,000,000.

The Patent Office.

The work of the patent office shows a slight falling off as compared with the previous fiscal year. The number of applications received was 43,616 as against 43,810 in 1890. A surplus of receipts over expenditures amounting to $157,291.69 was turned into the treasury to the credit of the patent fund.

Debts of Railways.

The secretary gives an abstract of the earnings of the several aided railroad companies, showing also the amounts due from them to the government December 31, 1890. It appears therefrom that the total debt, principal and interest, to the United States of each company was as follows:

Union Pacific	$51,761,208 17
Central Pacific	53,682,612 20
Sioux City & Pacific	3,654,621 90
Central Branch Union Pacific	3,414,170 79
Total	$112,512,613 06

The Territories.

In considering the territories the report says there has been an increase of 10,000 in the population of Arizona, making it about 70,000. In New Mexico it is claimed there are 153,076 persons, and the governor appeals for an enabling act to become a state. In Utah the population is estimated by the governor to be 215,000. The total assessed value of property, real and personal in 1891, was $121,146,648.37, an increase over the year before of $16,387,498. 37, or 16.55 per cent. The secretary concurs in the recommendation of the government of Alaska that revision of the laws be made. The population of the territory is 30,000.

ALL WERE DROWNED.

Loss of the Tahiti with 300 South Sea Islanders.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 30.—The brig Tahiti which put into this port some weeks ago on her way from the South seas to Mexico with 300 natives, who were going as laborers for a Mexican plantation has been wrecked off the coast of Mexico. All on board are supposed to have been drowned.

Gold from Australia.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 30.—The steamer Mariposa brought here from Sydney £550,000 in gold, which, together with the amounts brought by the four preceding steamers, made a total of £1,425,000, equal to over $7,000,000 in American gold, all of which has gone into the local branch of the United States mint for recoinage.

Used the College Funds.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Mrs. E. S. West, for six years the principal of Rutger's female college, has by her own confession used over $3,000 of the institution's funds.

Hypothecated Securities.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—It has been developed in the failure of Field, Wiechers, Lindley & Co., in New York, that the firm had hypothecated securities held by them on a loan of $600,000, and amounting to $1,000,000. Steps are being taken to send Edward M. Field to an insane asylum.

Killed at a Crossing.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 30. — Frederick Whitmeir, a farmer aged about 50 years, while driving across the tracks near Ives station, this side of Racine, was struck by a locomotive and himself and his team were instantly killed

HELD UP A TRAIN.

A Bold Robbery in the Suburbs of St. Louis—Six Masked Men, Aided by Dynamite, Secure $15,000 from an Express Car.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 1.—One of the most daring train robberies that has occurred for years was perpetrated on the St. Louis & San Francisco road, almost within the limits of St. Louis, last night. When passenger train No. 3 on that road left the depot last night at 8:25 o'clock it was just twenty-five minutes late.

Boarded by Bandits.

The limits of the city had been passed and the engine was just preparing to make up for lost time when three men who had boarded the train at Old Orchard climbed over the water tank and coal and covered the fireman and engineer with revolvers. The engineer was ordered to stop the train near Glendale, and as an additional inducement to him to obey orders three men who were in ambush at that point opened fire on the train with rifles, but whether they succeeded in wounding any one has not yet been learned. When the train had been brought to a standstill the engineer and fireman were ordered down from the cab, and after detailing two of the band to keep watch over them the other four men started back for the express car, in which was the safe of the Adams Express Company, containing about $15,000.

Forced Open with Dynamite.

Messenger Mulrenen, who was in charge of the car, had observed the slacking up of the train and had opened the door of the car to see what the matter was. Suspecting that something was wrong and becoming suspicious of the men he saw advancing toward him he hurriedly closed and secured the door just as the men reached it. The robbers first tried to induce him to open it, and failing tried to pry it open, but the stout door foiled all their efforts, and after spending about ten minutes in this work they put a charge of dynamite under the door and blew it open.

Took to the Woods.

As soon as the door was broken the four men leaped in. Messenger Mulrenen made a brave resistance, but the robbers turned on him and after beating him into a condition of passivity with the butts of their revolvers began operations on the safe. This did not long resist their attacks, and after rifling it of its contents the guard was called off the engineer and firemen and the sextette of desperadoes took to the woods. The men were all masked and had evidently planned their work well, as each one seemed to know exactly what to do, and but few words were spoken during the entire operation.

Passengers Warned Away.

During the time the train was stopped at Glendale some of the trainmen and passengers attempted to come to the assistance of the engineer and messenger, but the guard placed over the former covered each side of the train with their rifles and warned them back on pain of death.

Besides rifling the safe of the express company it is said the robbers opened several bags of registered mail matter on the car and selecting what appeared to be the most valuable carried it off. About five years ago a train was held up and robbed at about the same place near Glendale.

BODIES LEFT BURIED.

No Effort to Recover Those Lost in the Landslide Near Hot Springs, Wash.—Great Indignation.

HOT SPRINGS, Wash., Dec. 1.—The report that twenty-seven men were left buried in the landslide on the Northern Pacific railroad at Canton station in the Eagle gorge of the Cascade mountains last Wednesday, so emphatically denied by the Northern Pacific officials, has been fully confirmed. There are probably buried in the edge of Green river under the rock and mud fully twenty men if not more. Laborers still employed in the gorge repairing the damage to the tracks from recent washouts say there was a terrible destruction of life and some of them place their estimate as high as thirty men. Railroad employes and settlers in small communities in the mountains along the railroad are indignant at the cruel indifference of the officials and bosses. A foreman named Murray says that sixty-two men were at work at the spot the morning of the accident. Only forty-four, including dead and wounded, were accounted for after the accident. Eight men had been sent for help, leaving out of this number ten missing who could not be found. Two bodies he knew of were got out and one floated down the river. Three other men, named Erickson, Martin and Ogillvie, said that twenty were left buried alive in the river. Excavations for the bodies of these men could be made only at a great expense in building a dam and the labor of a large gang of men. One boss is reported to have said that the men were buried just as well as they could be where they were and that the bodies would make good riprapping. The citizens of Ellensburg have had an indignation meeting and demand an official investigation by the state. No effort was then or has been made by the company to recover the bodies. Railroad officials still stoutly deny the story and say if any bodies were not taken out they were washed down the Green river before they could be recovered.

SOME CURIOSITIES.

A CALF in Doylestown, Pa., has a double mouth, four complete sets of jaws, with teeth to match, and two tongues.

THERE is a street in Mexico named "Love." It is said to be the favorite residence street for newly married couples.

A METEORITE found a few weeks ago in the rotten roots of a willow tree at Lysabild, Denmark, was seen by the finder to fall into the tree in August, 1843.

THERE is a dog in Philadelphia who appears to have a great fondness for smoking. He is frequently seen promenading South Ninth street with a corncob pipe in his mouth, and, from all appearances, he seems to enjoy himself immensely.

UNDER the death notices in the Melbourne newspapers are funeral notices, inserted by the undertakers, respectfully inviting friends to follow the body to the place of interment. The undertakers add their business addresses and telephone numbers.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

Terrible Fate of a Wood Chopper.

John Zealander, a Dane wood chopper, met with a fearful death a few miles west of Wheatland. He left his wife and children in the morning, intending to remain until supper time, but when night came he did not return, and his wife and daughter got anxious and walked to where he had gone, several miles distant. They found him pinned under a huge tree. He said he had lain there since 9 o'clock in the morning. Help was with difficulty procured, but he was dead when finally released.

A Terrible Tragedy.

The modest little cottage at 2712 Bloomington avenue in Minneapolis was the scene of a terrible tragedy when Gottlieb Hoeft, a cooper about 50 years of age, took his own life by cutting his throat with a razor. The unfortunate man had been low spirited for some time on account of the poor business done by a cooperative cooperage company with which he was connected, and it was thought that his troubles affected his mind. He leaves a wife and four grown-up children.

Shot His Employer.

An attempt was made to kill G. W. Kenyon, a farmer living 3 miles southeast of Owatonna, by his hired hand, George Lerow. The later fired three shots at Kenyon, one ball striking him in the face, but not seriously injuring him. The sheriff was sent for, and when an attempt was made to arrest Lerow he turned his revolver upon himself and fired, the ball passing through his left lung. His injuries would prove fatal. The man was probably insane.

An Enjoyable Family Reunion.

A pleasant reunion was held in Winona of four brothers who had not been together for twenty-three years. They are E. G. Nevins and W. Z. Nevins, of Winona; J. D. Nevins, of Philadelphia, and Dr. L. W. Nevins, of Chicago. Their aged mother, Mrs. Sarah Nevins, 83 years old, was with them, as was also a sister, Mrs. John Gay, who resides in Winona. Two other sisters in Ohio were unable to be present, else the family circle would have been complete.

Shot at by Thieves.

Thieves entered the room at the West hotel in Minneapolis occupied by W. A. Crawford, a traveling man, and were going through his clothes when he awoke and began shouting for help. The men left the room and ran out into the street followed by Bookkeeper Willis and several attaches of the hotel, whom they shot at three times. The men were described as having the appearance of Jews, were well dressed and were evidently new arrivals in town.

Probably a Double Murder.

That which has every appearance of a horrible double murder was brought to light in St. Paul. The dead bodies of John Whalen and James Walsh were found lying in an upper room of the Manitoba house. Two men who were believed to have been implicated were in the custody of the police. There was considerable mystery about the affair.

After a Woolen Mill.

At a mass meeting of citizens of Owatonna at the city hall a committee of five was appointed to confer with outside parties about moving a woolen mill plant to that city which employs from twenty-five to thirty men. The committee was authorized to offer them from $500 to $1,000 bonus to locate there.

The Christmas Wide Awake

Is as gay as old Santa Claus himself, and it is a big pack of holiday delights. Its exquisite frontispiece, in color, is from the terra cotta bas relief "Day and Night," by Caroline Hunt Rimmer, daughter of Dr. Rimmer, the late famous Art-Anatomist. Rarely has anything more beautiful been given in a magazine. Perhaps the story that will attract the most attention is the first one of the "Fair Harvard" series, "Such Stuff as Dreams are made of," by John Mead Howells, the son of W. D. Howells. The opening story is as delicious and fresh: "How Christmas came in the Little Black Tent," by Mrs. Charlotte M. Vaile. "Christmas with 'Ole Sherman,"' is an incident of the war, in which General Sherman figures genially. In her story "The Fairy 'Content,'" Mrs. Jessie Benton Fremont is at her brightest and best. "Queen Margaret's Needles," by Susan Coolidge, is an historical ballad of Norway. Another fine ballad is "The Fourth Little Boy," by Mary E. Wilkins, fully illustrated. "The War of the Schools," by Capt. C. A. Curtis, U. S. A., is a splendid snow-balling story. "In Arctic Pack-Ice" is a thrilling story by Lieut.-Col. Thorndike, the first in a series of "One Man's Adventures."

The illustrated papers are interesting: "A Roumanian Princess," by Eleanor Lewis, and "How I became a Seneca Indian," by Mrs. Harriet Maxwell Converse.

The serials open well: "Jack Brereton's Three Months' Service," a war story by Mrs. Maria McIntosh Cox, "The Lance of Kanana," a historical Arabian story by Abd el Ardavan. Then there are the departments, "Men and Things," Tangles, and Post-Office, besides many bright pictures and poems.

"There's something behind it."

That's what you think, perhaps, when you read that the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy offer $500 reward for an incurable case of Catarrh. Rather unusual, you think, to find the makers of a medicine trying to prove that they believe in it. "There must be something back of it!"

But it's a plain, square offer, made in good faith. The only thing that's back of it is the Remedy. It cures Catarrh in the Head. To its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties, the worst cases yield, no matter how bad or of how long standing. It has a record that goes back for 25 years. It doesn't simply relieve—it perfectly and permanently cures. With a Remedy like this, the proprietors can make such an offer and mean it. To be sure there's risk in it, but it's so very small that they are willing to take it.

You've "never heard of anything like this offer?" True enough. But then you've never heard of anything like Dr. Sage's Remedy.

"August Flower"

Perhaps you do not believe these statements concerning Green's August Flower. Well, we can't make you. We can't force conviction into your head or medicine into your throat. We don't want to. The money is yours, and the misery is yours; and until you are willing to believe, and spend the one for the relief of the other, they will stay so. John H. Foster, 1122 Brown Street, Philadelphia, says: "My wife is a little Scotch woman, thirty years of age and of a naturally delicate disposition. For five or six years past she has been suffering from Dyspepsia. She became so bad at last that she could not sit down to a meal but she had to vomit it as soon as she had eaten it. Two bottles of your August Flower have cured her, after many doctors failed. She can now eat anything, and enjoy it; and as for Dyspepsia, she does not know that she ever had it." 59

THE SEASON'S WAY.

Two happy birds in soft spring weather
Chatted and chirped and bustled together,
Bringing fibrous, tender roots,
Long wisps of hay and thread-like shoots
To build a nest 'neath the old house eaves—
Close under the eaves.

Sunshine or storm—what matters weather,
With patience and love in a nest together
Waiting and watching with tireless care,
With brave hearts beating to do and dare
For nestlings to come 'neath the old house eaves?
Hope under the eaves!

Hope's sure fruition comes. And soon
The nest awakens to cry and croon
Of mother bird over her nestling three,
Her mate as proud as a bird can be,
Calling his happiness under the eaves.
Joy under the eaves!

But to-day as winds drift low from the west
Stirring threads of the old brown nest,
The faint air fragrant with late day scent,
With the year's fruition redolent,
What of the nest 'neath the old house eaves?
Dearth under the eaves!

Well builded it clings to the old house wall.
No wind or storm can make it fall;
But life and joy and love have gone
To a broader outlook. Low winds mourn
And murmur around it beneath the eaves.
Bare under the eaves!

But watching it so, swift thought suggests
Next year's mission of empty nests.
When brave home-seekers espy it there,
Well builded, sheltered, wind-swept and fair,
Some other lives shall come 'neath the eaves—
The old house eaves!

A COWARD AND A HERO.

I.

IT was the sixteenth of December, before Son-Tay. For two days we had splashed in the mire of rice fields, the water up to our knees. I knew well we would get used to it, but it was worrying all the same. Nevertheless, we marched steadily on, as regular and attentive as if we were on drill.

I tell you this is true: I am an old tramp, have been nine years in the service and six with the rank of sergeant, and the number of young soldiers I have trained and commanded "right about face" is incalculable; but never have I seen men march like these, shoulder to shoulder, as exact as if drawn by a line; and that, I tell you, in two feet of mud. Sapristi! but it was superb. I was jubilant, and yet a little vexed, to see how well the scamps could keep step when they chose. Ah, well; I had nothing to complain of that day.

Halt! Well, not a bit too soon, I thought, and yet a droll place to halt in. No matter. I filled my pipe and looked around to see where we were. Rice fields to the right, to the left, and behind us a thick slush mud made by our tramping feet.

A little corporal who had a tongue well hung, indeed too well hung, called out to me: "Sergt. Bertrand, Sergt. Bertrand, no need to light your pipe. Wait awhile, they will light it for you."

The jackanapes! As if I didn't know we would soon be under the fire of the enemy.

Suddenly I heard them calling the roll of my company and saw my brave fellows break ranks and trot like rabbits across the rice fields to meet the baggagemaster who was returning with a great package under his arm!

Letters! Now I ask you was this a good time to distribute letters? There they were running like so many madmen. I was the only one to remain tranquil. It is true I have no one to write me—no family, no friends, nobody—all alone in the world, like an old bear. Heaven help me! At length I see my men return to their places, holding up their hands to keep the letters from being soiled by the water, as carefully as if they were guarding the last words and testimony of their dying mother.

"Ah! Jacque has a letter. News from home, Jacque?"

Jacque is sergeant of my company. I am chief of the first section, he of the second. A handsome young fellow with a bright, boyish face, a beardless chin and cheeks as smooth as a girl's. Nevertheless I hold a little grudge against him. It is always vexing to see these brats of twenty-two promoted alongside of an old trooper like me; but for all that he is a nice boy, and the men would go through fire and water for him. He is well connected, of good family and often receives letters with the seal of the war department; but that is his business, not mine.

"NEWS FROM HOME, JACQUE?"

I watched him out of the corner of my eye as he ran through his letter. Then I saw him wipe away a tear, a little tear, that glistened on the end of his eyelash.

I pretended not to see it, even joked a little, to make him laugh.

"What has she written to you, Jacque? What says my lady fair?"

He turned without a smile and gravely said: "I have no lady fair, Bertrand. It is from my mother."

"Ah!" I felt as if I had made a fool of myself, and said no more, but Jacque continued:

"Do you see these letters, Bertrand? It would be better not to receive them in times like this."

That was my opinion, as I had already said. It was not good to allow them to break ranks, the scamps; they ask nothing better. But through politeness to Jacque I said: "It is always pleasant to receive good news from home, no matter where. I hope you had nothing disagreeable."

Jacque shook his head.

"Oh, no; to the contrary." And that was all. Really Master Jacque was not talkative this morning. His eyes were fixed on the horizon far away, where there was nothing to be seen but a bit of blue sky. I wondered what he could see over there.

II.

At last: "Forward, march!" I repeat: "Forward, march!" for my section. Jacque, no doubt, was still dreaming and did not hear the word of command, for I heard the lieutenant behind me say:

"Ah, well, Sergt. Jacque, lagging behind—already?"

I hoped to hear a reply of some kind, no matter what. When an officer so far forgets himself as to speak in that way to a subordinate I like to see a little indignation. Parbleu! you dare not speak out loud; that is against the rules; but a muttered word under your breath is a solace to your self-respect.

But Jacque said not a word; he simply repeated: "Forward, march!" in a dragging tone, as if he were weary. That is to say, it was not the tone a French sergeant uses when he commands: "Forward, march!" They never mumble these two words, but shout them with enthusiasm. What is the matter with Sergt. Jacque this morning? He is not like himself.

Ah, that was a rough day, I tell you. When night came we were still in the water, but up to our waists this time. And all around us little field-pieces were spitting fire like so many demons. But we marched steadily on until we were within five hundred meters of the walls of the citadel. Not a gun-shot, not a movement; the rascals were saving their powder until we came near. I said to myself: "Wait, old fellow, you will have something to warm you up by and by; don't be discouraged."

When, behold, we were again commanded to halt. The captain steps in front of the ranks, and demands in a low voice—all the same it was distinctly heard—"A sub-officer willing to undertake a secret and dangerous mission!"

Naturally I stepped forward. Now I have the misfortune to be a little too well appreciated by my captain, an old toughskin like myself, who had been my lieutenant in Africa.

"Not you, Bertrand. I know you well, and when I want you I will find you. Be kind enough to remain quiet." You see, some officers will not grant you the least favor. Then I said to myself: "This is just the thing for Jacque." The captain seemed to be of the same opinion, for he stopped exactly in front of him and repeated under his nose: "A sub-officer willing to undertake a dangerous mission." It was plainly to be seen he was making advances to Jacque, and you will think I am mocking you when I tell you my fine fellow lowered his eyes under the gaze of his captain and said not a word. You may be sure the captain was angry, for you know it is not pleasant to make advances to anyone and have them thrown back in your teeth. I heard him sneer under his mustache: "Well, he means to take good care of his skin."

Ah, it was rough. Jacque turned as red as a beet, but said not a word; only when the captain had passed he raised his eyes and fixed them on that bit of blue sky far away on the horizon where I could see nothing, nothing at all. Then I said to myself: "Well, my fine fellow, you are decidedly a coward."

To be brief, Berthelot of the third division was chosen for the expedition, he returned without a scratch, the jackanapes, when my poor Jacque—

III.

Well, we set off again; there was no lagging behind this time. About two hundred and fifty meters from the walls the scoundrels gave us a broadside full in the face. Sapristi! how it rained, the balls fell to the right, to the left, in the rice fields, making a "flic-floc" as they struck the water. We answered back, but it was like firing into the air, the rascals were so well protected by their walls. This fusillade lasted only about ten minutes, but I shall remember it a long time.

However, it could not continue in this way. The bugle sounded the charge! Sapristi! that music always sends a shiver of gayety through me. Behold us running with fixed bayonets, like mad men. But, as I had already noticed, the gateway of the citadel opened upon a high embankment, scarcely three meters wide; to enter there we must climb that narrow ascent and push in two by two under a terrible fire, and that, too, through a palisade of bamboo which the rascals had constructed to bar the way, already narrow enough. Ah, it was sufficiently difficult without that cursed bamboo, and God only knows what it cost us. I saw my two lieutenants fall, the adjutant of the battalion and many others. Impossible to pass that cursed bamboo. My captain raged like a demon. At last he commanded:

"A section up there!"

This time it was serious, very serious; no time to hesitate; all who climbed there were sure of certain death. I think the captain must have retained some spite against Jacque, for he turned to him and said:

"Go up there, sir, and tear away that bamboo."

It is but justice to say he did not wait to be told a second time. Touching his cap, with "All right, my captain," he started in a quick run. In passing me he drew a package of letters from his pocket.

"Take care of this for me, Bertrand," and in the twinkling of an eye he was up there with his section.

Ah! the brave boy! It was beautiful to see him, so cool, so calm; not a loud word, not an oath, only quick, determined orders: "Tear away this. Throw that in the ditch." He was as tranquil as if superintending a squad of soldiers on fatigue duty. And all the time the enemy was pouring upon them a deadly fire, the balls whistling, tearing the bamboo, plowing up the ground, every now and then crushing in a shoulder, carrying away an arm or breaking a leg. My God, what a sight! They were all left there, all my comrades—Jacque among the number, but he was the last. Just as the work was finished a ball struck him between the eyes. Just as he raised his arms to shout a great hurrah, he fell dead, face foremost.

Perhaps it was not very proper what I did next morning, but truly it was too much for me—that packet of letters that Jacque gave me as he went to his death. I would not keep them. I thought: "A boy who acts like a coward and a few hours after dies like a man. It is not natural; there must be something under this;" and I felt I had the explanation there under my hand in those letters. They burned me. It was impossible to keep them. Ma foi! I could not. Then—then, I drew out the packet.

Upon my word there was only one letter, the one he had received that morning. Nothing else. Ah! blood of blood! what a letter! He was right, poor boy. One ought not to receive a letter like that just before a battle.

As for me, I cried like a baby and was scarcely able to read it for the tears in my eyes. It was from his mother, and here is what the good woman wrote to her boy as she ended her letter:

"Now, my precious Jacque, take care of yourself for my sake. Remember, you are all I have in the world, and if anything should happen you I would surely go mad. It is true the time passes very wearily when one is waiting, but I try to be patient, to forget the present, and only think of the future when you will return.

"Above all things, my precious boy, be prudent. Do whatever you are commanded to do, like a brave soldier, but do not expose yourself unnecessarily. I forbid you. No, my darling Jacque, I forbid you nothing. I implore you, before entering intoany engagement, to think of your mother, who is always thinking of you, and do not risk too much. Promise me this, will you not? And remember, a man is not a coward because he loves his mother."

The letter fell from my hands. I understood all now. He had thought of his mother, the brave boy, and waited until he was directly commanded to go.

And no doubt that morning when he was looking away to that bit of blue sky where there was nothing to be seen, he was thinking of his mother and of that promise he had sworn to keep.

And that is why Sergt. Jacque, who died like a hero with his face to the enemy, was considered a coward twice in one day.—N. Y. Recorder.

AN INGENIOUS BARBER.

He Found That by Dispensing With a Clock He Gained Custom.

There is a barber down-town whose long acquaintance with Americans has taught him not to keep a clock. Strange, isn't it? "And why such madness?" I hear you say. Ah! There's method in it. I'll tell you in his own words.

"You are about the hundredth man that has asked me about the clock," he said pleasantly. "Well, I'll tell you a trade secret. You know my customers are all business men and stop in two or three times a week to get shaved. Whether in a hurry or not they want to get through with all possible speed. That's one of the peculiarities of Americans. An American may have all the time in the world, but, nevertheless, he'll rush his lunch and his barber all the same.

"So long as I had my clock here in the shop men would come rushing in here, take a glance at it, jump into the chair and tell me to rush them through in ten minutes, as they desired to catch a train or keep an appointment. If I didn't get through with them in that time there would be a picnic, sure, and not only that, but I'd run the risk of losing a good customer. So after a while I caught on to this clock racket, and I took my reliable old timepiece from its accustomed corner and placed it beyond reach. How does it work? Splendidly.

"The first few days I could hardly restrain myself from bursting into fits of laughter. You know, the first thing an American looks for when he comes into any place is the clock. You should have seen the disappointed faces in my shop the first few days. Everyone rushed in with his accustomed haste, glancing at the corner for the clock, and my! Well, you can imagine the rest.

"And now," said the barber with a satisfied air, "I can give everyone a first-class shave, and none of them knows just how long I take to shave them, because there's no clock here to regulate me by.

"Next!"—N. Y. Herald.

Girls' Gossip.

"How do you like my new gown?"

"Oh, my! I think it is just too lovely. And how do I look in mine?"

"Superb! Couldn't be more exquisite."

"And what's the matter with mine? Doesn't it fit elegantly?"

"Perfectly grand! Just like a Worth production."

"Won't we cut a swath out there, though?"

"Oh, no! Guess not! We'll just make 'em green with envy."

The above remarks were overheard in the west end of the government building by an Enquirer reporter.

Sounds very much like society ladies' talk, doesn't it?

But it wasn't.

The talking was done by three very dignified gentlemen.

They were the justices of the new court of appeals and they were clothed in the handsome silken gowns of their judicial office.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

It Might Have Been Worse.

Two Irishmen who had not met for years ran across each other, and after a period of handshaking adjourned for some wet congratulations.

"Long time since we met, Clancy, isn't it? Great lot of things have happened since then," said the first.

"Yes, indeed. Look at myself. Sure it's married I am," replied Clancy.

"You don't tell me? Have you anything to show for it?" asked O'Grady.

"Faith and I have that. I've got a fine, healthy boy, and the neighbors say he's just the picture of me."

O'Grady looked at Clancy, who wasn't built on the lines of a prize beauty.

"Ah, well, what's the harrum so long as the child's healthy?"—Buffalo Enquirer.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—A pound of sulphur burned in a tightly-closed room will destroy every living thing in it, from moths and bedbugs to possible disease germs.

—For baked eggs warm a gill of milk, add one tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful of flour and six eggs, whites and yelks beaten separately, season with salt and bake in a quick oven for fifteen minutes.—N. Y. World.

—Little Folks' Loaf: To one-third of the bread dough add one tablespoon butter, one teacupful sugar, one teacupful of currants or any fruit to suit. When quite light, bake in medium oven thirty to forty minutes.—Christian Inquirer.

—North Carolina Cake: Two cups of sugar, four tablespoonfuls of butter, one cup of sweet cream, whites of eight eggs (beaten stiff), two teaspoonfuls extract of lemon, two cups of flour, two teaspoonfuls baking powder; mix and bake.—Detroit Free Press.

—Cream Walnuts: Take two pounds of white sugar, a teacup of water, and boil until it threads. Flavor liberally with vanilla extract, and then take from the fire and stir until white and creamy. Have walnuts prepared; make the candy into small, round cakes, press walnuts into the sides, drop in granulated sugar and put aside to cool.—Ladies' Home Journal.

—German Compote of Apples: Peel and core whole apples. Fill the cavities with current jelly, place the apples in a pudding-dish, adding as much water as the dish will hold without touching the filling. Add half a pound of sugar and the thin peel of half a lemon. Cover tightly and cook slowly till done. Remove the apples to a glass dish, boil down the sirup to a jelly, and pour it over.—Demorest's Magazine.

—Very nice salads may also be made of cold veal and lean pork. For the dressing, beat two eggs, add one teaspoonful of mustard, one of salt, two of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, a small cupful of vinegar. Stand this in boiling water and stir till it thickens. If you have half a cupful of cream, sweet or sour, add that also. With the addition of a little celery, lean pork salad is quite as good as chicken or veal.—Housekeeper.

—Delicious Sponge Cake: A delicious sponge cake is made with twelve eggs, a pound of sugar, half a pound of flour and the juice of a lemon. Beat the yolks of the eggs with the sugar and add the lemon juice. Beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth, and add them alternately with sifted flour. Beat the cake thoroughly with a whip. Do not attempt to use a patent beater for either the eggs or the batter of sponge cake, but use a sponge-cake whip. Pour the cake into square tins. Sift or dredge a little powdered sugar over it before putting it in the oven.—Boston Budget.

—Boulettes aux Foie de Veau: Mince two pounds of calves' liver as fine as possible, and a few slices of bacon or ham; stir into it a bunch of sweet herbs, finely chopped, a little pepper and salt, the yolk of one or two eggs, well beaten, and a cupful of cream. Put the whole, when well mixed together, into a stewpan; set it over the fire until it becomes firm, and then roll it into balls with your hands, which should be well covered with flour. Brush them over with the whites of the eggs, well beaten, then roll them in bread crumbs until they are nearly or quite covered, and fry them in boiling butter. Drain them in a seive before the fire, and serve them on a folded napkin, or, if preferred, with piquant sauce poured around them when sent to the table, in a hot dish.—Boston Herald.

Full Dress Styles.

Most of the trained toilets for full dress the coming season are in princesse style, the length of the train moderate, the usual skirt springs and other supporters replaced by the taffeta-silk petticoat, which shows a graceful, ingenious arrangement of plaited flounces at the back, skillfully grouped and adjusted with a view to supporting the train. The foundation skirt appears only at the back and is lined to the depth of three-quarters of a yard with very light-weight canvas. Then the plaited train which falls above this is lined either with feather-weight cotton flannel or cottonback moire silk, a material made expressly for lining skirts of handsome gowns. In other respects evening toilets show the same general details as other dresses, as in them also much emphasis is laid on picturesque collars and sleeves and fancy and elaborate corsages. Medieval designs appear again upon gowns for special wear, the skirt falling straight and being lifted slightly on the left side with a rich chatelaine ornament of silver. The quaint style of dress also that is worn by Marguerite in "Faust" is copied almost literally for youthful, petite figures.—Chicago Post.

A prominent New Yorker is going around with a subscription list to raise money to complete the Grant monument. He called on Mr. Portly Pompous, of Madison avenue, a local merchant prince.

"We are getting up a subscription to finish the Grant monument. Would you not like to subscribe?"

"Yes, that's a very good idea; I am very much in favor of it," replied Mr. Pompous.

"What will you subscribe?" asked the delighted canvasser.

"I'll subscribe myself 'Your most obedient servant, Portly Pompous,'" exclaimed the local merchant prince, seizing a pen.

THE GOOD OF RAIN.

Some of the Blessings That Come With the Showers.

When we complain of the rain, as we too often do if it be continuous or interfere with our plans and pleasures, we are showing a poor comprehension of the ways of nature, of its ceaseless beneficence, and of its wise purpose. Perhaps we are showing also a great want of the love of beauty; for there is a wonderful beauty in the gray cope of a low-hung sky, in the soft down-slipping of silver showers against the green; and there is, besides, a rare exhilaration to be found in the wild wind-blown rushing and pouring of the easterly gale, with the low bending and swinging and beating of singing boughs, and the keen crying of the blast. "If it would only rain and be done with it!" one exclaims; "If it would do all its raining in the night!" cries another—the one ignorant that because of the colder air much more rain does fall in the night, and both with strange reference to that impersonal agency "It" in their language. Yet the varying frequency of showers is a thing, after all, much more agreeable both as to dust and vegetation than long periods of rain and drought would be; and the shut-in seclusion of an occasional day of steady down-pouring, and the seeming familiarity with nature which we feel when looking out at her without her full regalia of sunshine and blue sky, are both a part of pleasant experience.

But apart from the external beauty or from the domesticity of life on a rainy day, there is a folly—to call it no worse—in impugning the arrangements of nature which should give the grumbler pause, if a view of its uses and the facts of its design does not. The childishness of shrugging one's shoulders at the inevitable, at the movements of power outside and beyond us, and not in any way to be reached by us, is so evident that it would seem as if any who had arrived at years of discretion should be ashamed of it. If we do not like a climate, rainy or otherwise, of capricious or of settled weather, we are at liberty to change it; let us strike our tents and go elsewhere. We are poor incapable dolts, bound and chained by circumstance instead of mastering circumstance, if we can not get away; and so a decent self-respect should oblige us to be silent.

When we see the vapor-laden atmosphere depress our own systems, cause the swelling of tissues so that joints and hard muscles and corns, and callouses, unable to stretch out with the rest, can only ache; when we see it act on the nervous organization of all brute beings, making them dull and lethargic for want of oxygen, so that cows low, and horses whinny, and sheep shelter themselves where they can, the air all the time too heavy to hold up the falling smoke; and when we see this moisture in the atmosphere rust the stoves, the copper and zinc vessels, nothing but oiling and so shutting out the direct touch of the atmosphere hindering it, gold and platinum being the only objects of the sort uninjured by the dampness, which dulls lead and tarnishes silver—then we should know instinctively that it is better for the rain to gather and condense and fall, and thus dissipate and discharge and put an end to that form of injury, than to hang unformed, and in a condition almost as different from the blessed rain as the soil that makes the flower is different from the flower—the flower in which the constituents of the rain return to the sunlight. For not only does the rain, by dissolving the earthy and fertilizing substances around a plant's roots, afforded it nourishment, but it directly contributes to the plant's substance both carbonic acid and ammonia. Even in the form of snow it is invaluable; for the snow, being a very poor conductor of heat, causes the earth to keep what heat it already has, shutting it in as a coat of ermine would, while the carbonic acid which it carries penetrates the sod and vivifies and enriches it. That mighty poet who wrote the Book of Job knew well what he was talking about when he told of the treasures of the snow. And on the larger scale, pouring in tropical parallels into the rivulets and lakes at the sources of great rivers, such as the Nile and the Amazon, in what vast sheets of food-bearing, life-giving richness it overflows the plains, and affords superb fertility and plenteous harvests! And rain is, moreover, the great purifying agent of the earth, as wind is of the air, washing out stagnant places, cleansing ditches, leaving sweet what was foul, and carrying all filth away to brooks and rivers and seas, to mingle with an infinity of other drops, till all that is injurious is abstracted and precipitated and lost.—Harper's Bazar.

Sweet Apple Pudding.

Pare, core and slice enough juicy sweet apples to fill a pint bowl. Heat a quart of new milk to scalding point in a double boiler. Pour it hot over one cupful of good granulated cornmeal, and beat very thoroughly to remove all lumps. Return to the double boiler, and cook until the meal is set. The batter should then be about the consistency of corn mush. Remove from the fire, add a pint of cold milk and the sliced apples, one-third a cup of sugar or molasses, and a teaspoonful of flour braided with a very little milk. Turn all into a deep earthen crock or pudding dish, and bake slowly from three to four hours, stirring frequently during the first hour. It should be moderately browned on top when done.—Good Health.

If Pestered Day and Night

With nervousness, take Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which invigorates and so tranquilizes the nervous system. The basis of recovery is a reform in errors of digestion. The epigastric nerve and brain are united in the closest bond of sympathy, so that dyspeptic symptoms in the gastric region are always accompanied by hurtful reflex nervous action. Both are remedied by the Bitters, which also cures malaria, biliousness, rheumatism and kidney trouble.

BUFFALO GAZETTE
OFFICAL PAPER OF VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO, FRIDAY, DEC. 4, 1891.

GREAT NORTHERN R.Y.

Passenger trains leave Delano as follows:

No. 7, going west	9:41 a. m.
" 9, " "	8:15 p. m.
No. 10, going east	5:23 a. m.
" 3, " "	3:40 p. m.

GEO. W. BOLTON, Local Agent.

DELANO DIARY.

—The Delano Model Roller Mills shipped flour to the Mill city again this week.

—Swedeback & Stewart fixed up the Roosen opera house this week for storing grain again.

—The Great Northern has changed time for the west bound night train which comes a little earlier arriving at Delano now at 8:15 P. M.

—John Lohmiller has fitted up a room for his desk in the front part of his residence and has his headquarters there now.

—Several yokes of oxen passed through town on Wednesday presumably for work in the pineries during the winter.

—Mr. Woolford, of Rockford, who moved Al. Eppel's new house, the old Catholic parsonage, hauled his apparatus back home on Wednesday.

—Archie McNaughton is up to his old tricks and is turning an honest dime now and then by supplying the lovers of fresh fish with some fine pickerel.

—L. M. Maxfield, the church builder, has been under the weather for a few days, but is sufficiently recovered to rush his buildings during the fine weather.

—Postmaster Charles H. Vorse is again at his post. Miss Louis, in her father's absence through sickness, has proven herself a very competent and efficient Post Mistress.

—Rain fell a greater part of the day on Wednesday. Something rather uncommon in this latitude at this season of the year. The warm weather now serves to shorten up the winter.

—Frank Japs is calling on the citizens of Franklin township in the interests of the "Thrifty Farmer" and "The People's Illustrated Journal." He will also, receive subscriptions for the BUFFALO GAZETTE.

—Clark Sturman and James C. Murphy are pushing the well busines for all it is worth and have already placed the second outfit in the field. They are agents for the celebrated Decorah Steele Tower Windmill. See their ad.

—Tiff Hitsman had a letter from his son Abe Tuesday. He has gone to Seattle where his father-in-law, Webster lives. He has not been able to do anything yet since he got shot. His brother, Ben, is holding down his farm in his absence.

—John F. Collins, Maple Lakes genial ial city attorney was a GAZETTE caller on Saturday. John thinks the Alliance party has about croaked out and that the feeling against Republican methods is as strong as ever, which will aid the Democrats in the next campaign. He says that neighborhood is quite solid for Democratic principles.

—Albert Kurtz is again at work braking on a freight between Weyerhaeuser and Remington, Wis. His hand is standing work well now but gets cold easily. He thinks the National Benefit Co., of Chicago, in which company he was insured is quite a long time coming around with their pay. Al expects to become a conductor soon.

—The passenger train east on Tuesday morning with ten coaches stopped here at 9 A. M. and allowed the passengers to look over our village for a short time and procure a good warm breakfast before their arrival in the cities. Delano's hotels and restaurants could easily feed the people coming in from the west and it would be quite a bonanza for Delano and the passengers if arrangements could be made to have the train come along every day at about that hour.

—Now is the time for our farmers and others to subscribe for a newspaper. Every one that is ten years of age should be sufficiently far advanced in the art of reading to understandingly glean the items of news from their conuty paper and where the parents cannot read English the young folks should read aloud for them. Young people can learn to read as well or better, from a newspaper than from any other source, from the fact that they are acquainted with and more interested in what they read about. Germans, Poles, Scandanavians and others can learn English by reading newspapers and all of them should be able to read and write English in this country. Subscribe for the GAZETTE.

—Some trouble occasionally occurs in our public school which, in our opinion as well as in the opinion of many others could be obviated by the selection of a Superintendent of the district as the law provides may be done. As matters now stand the teachers are set to work to look out for themselves almost entirely, and, as is usual in such instances more or less complaint is bound to follow. A school of the pretentions of the Delano Independent District should have a Superintendent. At present there are four rooms with four teachers and each teacher claims th have enough to do to look after his or her own room, consequently there is virtually no head to the school. This is wrong and should be remedied. A Superintendent should be selected at onto.

—The worst blizzard of the season today.

—Teachers should attend the teachers meeting at Rockford to-morrow.

—The Catholic society at this place have purchased a new $125. organ for their church.

—Louis Kurtz has rented rooms in the Renswick building, near the depot and will keep house this winter.

—The Kickapoo Indians know how to get the folks out. Their shows are well attended. Monsier Gagnier is a fine juggler.

—C. E. Green received several severe cuts on the face and hands by a large pane of glass blowing out of the window onto him to-day.

—C. Enwiller creates considerable amusement in his equestrian feats on the streets. It is a wonder some of the bronchos don't kill the old gentleman.

—Hogs came in quite freely this week. Some live weight buyers from the cities were around. This does away, to a large extent, with butchering at home.

—Minneapolis saloon keepers are being arrested by wholesale for keeping open saloon on Sunday in violation of the law. Some Delanoites better look a leetle ouet.

—We tender our thanks to Mrs. E. J. Swedeback for a plate of her daughter's wedding cake. Irvin will surely be good natured if fed on such cake the balance of his life.

—A bad wreck on the Soo road is said to have occured at Rockford station last Saturday night. Several cars of wheat and wood being promiscuously scattered around.

—Len Dedrick has a patent right for an adjustable window fastener for which he expects to receive a fortune. He already has visions of a plug hat, gold headed cane, etc., etc.

—Quite a considerable wood is being shipped from this point to the prairies west of us. It helps to raise prices to the satisfaction of our farmers. Good maple is now worth $3.50 per cord.

—The Evening Tribune, of Minneapolis, has been added to our exchange list. The Tribune is improving in appearance and popularity. With men like Frank Stacy and Martin Williams on its editorial staff it is bound to come to the front.

—The Eagle has "chawed" over its usual colnmn, this week. Mr. Ziebarth appears to be the target aimed at. If you have been so clearly vindicated why don't you allow your feathers to smooth down a little, whats the use everlastingly picking away at a "fallen foe?"

—C. E. Ball, Miss Jalia Cunningham and Mrs. C. E. Green were appointed last Sunday at the M. E. Church to act as an executive committe, with the power to appoint sub-committees to get up a Christmas tree for the School on Christmas Eve. This is a hustling committee and a nice tree and entertainment is expected by the little fellows and their friends.

—That avericious bird that has its eyrie on Third street s-c-r-e-e-c-h-e-s out to "its limited number of readers" in a woeful manner that some of its prey has escaped its clutches. That it couldn't make a bargain with a company that advertises in about every town they strike that there is a chance and claim they would be doing an injustice to their customers to accept the offers. If the Eagle desires to advertise any of its respectable business in the GAZETTE we will furnish them the same space under the same conditions and for the same prices as the Kickapoo Indians contracted for, and that is above half price too. Come old bird, grow wise and advertise.

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN.—Every week this most valuable periodical presents whatever is new in the world of science, art, and manufactures. Full of practical information, it discloses to the thoughtful not only what has been ascertained, but also suggests the possibilities still to be revealed. For forty-five years Munn & Co. have conducted this paper in connection with the procuring of patents for new inventions. The Scientific American is authority on all scientific subjects, and should be in every household. Copies of the paper may be seen at this office and subscriptions recieved.

Out in Montana.

I left here some weeks ago over the Great Northern, went through the Devils Lake country and thence to Great Falls, Mont., a town that I am much pleased with. I tell you, great business is there. They are now erecting a bank building, to cost $125,000. What makes the town? Its water power and mining interests. A smelter is here which has already cost $500,000. and will cost $3,000,000. to complete. From Great Falls I went to Armington, in the Nehart and Barker mining country; thence by stage to Lewiston, the county seat; and thence to Maiden, a mining camp. Here I stayed two weeks and inspected the mining interests. I am much pleased with the prospects. The mines produce silver, goid, lead, etc. There is a great chance to make money in mining property and real estate in all those places.—S. O. Hinsdale in Fergus Falls (Minn.) Journal.

Personals.

Arthur Johnson Sundayed at home.

Mrs. M. A. Chance visited Minneapolis on Tuesday.

John Sturman Sundayed at home with his family.

Mrs. J. C. Hitz took a trip to the Flour city on Wednesday.

E. W. Ferrell, of Montrose was a GAZETTE caller on Tuesday.

Peter Bork, of Hutchinson was over on business during the week past.

David McLeod was among those spending Sunday in Delano this week.

Will Rausch, of Howard Lake was visiting Delano friends on Wednesday.

D. C. Fredricks, of Rockford, did business in the metropolis on Thursday.

Miss Cora McCarter, of Hamline, visited her sister, Mrs. A. A. Davis of this place this week.

Henry Felt, a former old settler in this neighborhood was seen on the streets Monday morning.

John Turngren, one of Montrose's prosperous farmers, made Delano a business visit on Thursday.

Miss Elizebeth Priess who has been stopping with her sister, Mrs. Hitz returned to St. Paul on Tuesday.

Sylvanus Brandon has returned home after about a years absence in the West. He is looking as slick as ever.

Professor James R. Hall, of Minneapolis, was a guest of his friends C. W. Ingerson and wife on Tuesday and Wednesday.

C. A. Ingerson, station agent at Lester Prairie with his wife and two sons is spending a two weeks vacation with his parents Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Ingerson at this place.

County Cullings.

Clerk of Court, O. J. Steward, who has so long filled that office in Wright county will this month, most likely serve in that capacity for the last time his successor in office, John O'Leary, of Waverly, who was elected last fall taking charge on January 1, 1892.

The December term of District Court will convene at Buffalo next Monday. John Mazou's trial for the murder of little Anna Brunder, at Montrose, will be one of the most interesting cases of the term, probably. This was one of the most attrocious crimes ever committed in Wright county, and when the guilty party is certainly found out his sentence is not apt to be more severe than he deserves.

The Journal lately attacked the Annandale Post for, among other things, containing and "old, stale, patent article on silver coinage" by REX. This week REX gets back at the Journal after a manner that the Journal will be bound to admit is not so very "old" and "stale" as it might be. Last weeks GAZETTE copied the article in dispute, from the Post. We, like REX, incline to the belief that the silver question is not altogether dead, but is for the present overshadowed by that of Tariff.

THE Great Northern Railway took first prizes at the Iowa, Michigan, Indiana, and Illinois State Fairs, for having the most artistic and complete display of farm products.

Contract Laborers Detained.

Colonel Weber detained fourteen contract laborers who arsived yesterday on the steamship Rhynland. They came here to work in the mines of Pennsylvania and Ohio. Over 200 in all have arrived within the past three months. One man told the Colonel that he had come here to take the place of a man who had been getting $1.75 a day. The detained fellow had made a contract to work three years at $1. a day.—New York Press.

ST. PETER, Minn., Nov. 1, 1891.
To the Indian Doctor:
I have used Indian Oil for headache and it gave reiief quicker than any thing else Iever used. I have also used Buffalo Salve and the Kickapoo Worm Killer, and I find them all that they were recommended to be.
Respectfully.
A. J. RONBECK

ST. PELER, Minn., Nov. 2, 1891.
Indian doctor:
I used one bottle of Kickapoo Indian Sagwa for Indigestion, loss of appetite and loss of sleep. I find that the remedy has done just as recommended to do. My bowels are regular. my appetite is very much improved, I sleep well anq have better health every way.
Yours Truly,
CHAS. D. PEHRSON.

ST. PETER, Nov. i, 1891.
To the Inventors and Proprietors of the deservedly famous "Sagwa."
Esteemed Gents:
After a trial of your medicine and its beneficial effect, I dont hesitate to pronounce it superior to any other tonic as medicine I ever used to restore impaired digestion, promote a healthy action of the digestive organs, and, in fact, throughly answers all the purposes you advertise it to do.
Sincerely Yours,
J. WOODMANSEE.

VINTON, Ia., Aug. 8th,
Indian Doctor:
Elsie, next to my youngest daughter, had scrofulous swellings under the chin aud on her neck, and sores all over her face before I commenced to give her Kickapoo Indian Sagwa and to apply the salve. Her face now is free from any pimples or sores, and there is no enlargement of the glands: All this is due to the virtue of Sagwa and the Kickapoo Indian Salve. The Kickapoo Indian Worm Killer removed quite a number of worms from my little daughter Emma. I am glad your company came to advetise so valuable medicines here as we have found all of the Kickapoo remedies to be as represented.
MRS. HETTIE HANNA.

VINTON, IA., AUG. 6, 1891.
To Indian doctor:—For twenty years I have never been well. One bottle of Indian Sagwa has done me more good than anything I ever took before in my life. Since taking the first three doses I have done more work than for the last four years prior to taking the medicine. I have used only one bottle of Sagwa. I intend to continue to take until I am entirely well. It is undoubtedly the most valuable of any remedy known and I can conscientiously recommend it to anybody. MRS. R. E. WILLFORD.

VINTON, IOWA, Aug. 6 '91.
To Indian Doctor: I have used three doses of Sagwa and applied Indian oil over a dreadful pain in the region of my heart and I am now free from it already, I have been suffering with this distress for over six months: was treated by two doctors in Cedar Rapids and got no relief. I am delighted with the good these valuable remedies have done me. My sister-in-law was relieved of neuralgia last night by the application of Indian oil, which was the result of an old tooth.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory.

"A Tariff on Coffee is a Tax, Unquestionably."—Senator C. K. Davis at Buffalo.

If tariff on coffee is a tax, tariff on sugar is a tax, tariff on tin is a tax, tariff on knives and pearl buttons and tariff on anything that has to be paid as tax. If you smuggle goods the tariff may be escaped, but that does not destroy the truth that TARIFF IS A TAX.

The Eagle and Journal each in its way seeks to destroy the effect our tariff quotation might have on the reading public and among other things to deny the authenticity of the quotation from Hon. C. K. Davis' speech. Each informs its readers what Mr. Davis did say from their standpoint. Below we give their versions. Compare them for yourselves.

"What Senator Davis did say, however, was this: That if a tariff was put on coffee it would certainly be a tax because coffee cannot be raised in the United States and has to be imported."—Delano Eagle, Nov. 19.

"A tariff on coffee WOULD unquestionably be a tax, was what the Senator did say and he went on to show why it would be—"—Buffalo Journal, Dec. 2.

CONGRESS is at work and an unprecedented number of bills is pouring in from every direction and for a variety of objects.

THE new speaker of the House, C. F. Crisp, of Georgia, is said by all parties to be a good parliamentarian and a fine presiding officer just what Congress needs. Democrats cannot run things smoothly any better than can Republicans without a good speaker.

ON Dec. 8th the National Democratic committee held a meeting at Washington when they decided to hold another meeting on Jan. 21, at noon to choose the time and place for holding the next National Democratic convention. St. Paul is after the convention in big shape.

MARTIN WILLIAMS one of the oldest, ablest and best known newspaper men in the state, and lately at work on the Minneapolis Tribune died last night. He was the owner of the St. Peter Tribune for years and left that for the army when the war began. He was a man beloved by all his large number of acquaintances.

THE President's message to Congress has been read. For lenght it is hard to find its equal, occupying about nine columns of fine type in the daily newspaper and dwelling on the troubles with Italy, Chili and the Chinese. Is willing to recommend Government appropriations to the Nicaragua Canal. The Russian Jews are noticed, a remonstrance having been sent by this government against their harsh treatment. Tariff, silver, elections, civil service and other things are commented on. As a writer the President is rather voluminous.

THE Speakership deadlock was of but short duration and on the thirtieth ballot in the Democratic caucus Charles F. Crisp, of Georgia, was chosen by 119 votes, 115 being a majority. Congressman Castle, of our district, contrary to the expectations of people generally in Minnesota voted for Crisp from start to finish. While Hall and Harles supported Mills, Castle will of course stand in with the new Speaker better on account of having stood by him. The new speaker announced in his acceptation speech that he would take no backward step on the tariff.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4, 1891.

The very spirited contest for the Speakership of the House of Representatives will close with the selection of one of the candidates by the Democratic caucus which will be held tomorrow, but it will be years before it is forgotten. There have been many things to cause it to be remembered, not the least of which is the large number of candidates that will remain in the field up to the last—this is of itself highly creditable to the Democratic party as an organization, as it shows that it is a party that does not tolerate bossism, but gives every man in its ranks an equal right to aspire to any honor within its gift. Another thing about it that will not be soon forgotten is the action of the Republicans in trying by misrepresenting innocent remarks made by Democrats, and in many instances by the outright manufacture of statements to create a feeling of antagonism between the friends of the several candidates—they succeeded but too well, in some instances.

Whoever is selected for Speaker, the attempt will be made in certain quarters to make it appear that the selection makes certain the nomination for President next year of some one of the gentlemen who have been prominently named for that honor. That is another Republican scheme. There is not the slightest thing to base such a conclusion upon, no matter which of the candidates for Speaker may win. There are, to your correspondent's certain knowledge, men in the ranks of the supporters of each of the candidates that favor Mr. Cleveland, Governor Hill, Governor Gray, Senator Gorman and Governor Boies, so you see what nonsense it is to say the success of any one of the candidates for Speaker will have any direct effect upon the nomination for President next year. Just as members of Congress have differed in their opinions of the best man for Speakers, so will they differ when it comes to selecting a candidate for President. The National Democratic convention, and not the House of Representatives, will name the Presidential nominee of the party, Rebublican busybodies to the contrary notwithstanding.

Representative Cooper, of Indiana, who originated the Raum investigaton in the last Congress, says that if Mr. Harrison persists in keeping Raum at the head of the Pension office he will move for another investigation. Mr. Cooper has secured a large addition to the stock of ammunition which the packed committee of the last Congress refused to allow him to use, and if Raum does not vacate the Pension office he will see to it that the next investigation does not end with a coat of whitewash.

It is stated here, but denied, that Secretary Foster's health is in a precarious condition. While denying that he is seriously sick, his friends admit that he is going South for several weeks' rest before he again takes up his work as Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. Harrison's friends in the Republican party have been anxiously expecting this week that often announced statement from Mr. Blaine that he would not be the candidate of his party, it having been stated here the other day by ex-Senator Saunders, of Nebraska, whose daughter is Russell Harrison's wife, that Mr. Blaine would shortly take the public into his confidence; but alas, for the Harrison crowd it seems to be only another false alarm, as Mr. Blaine says not a word, but continues to smile when visiting Republicans tell him that they propose nominating him next year.

Attorney General Miller is not an admirer of the newspapers, probably because they have refused to class him as high as his own conceit tells him he should go; therefore it caused no surprise when he tried to cast a slur upon the press, while the argument in the cases against the constitutionality of the McKinley tariff law was proceeding before the Supreme Court. It came about this way. Mr. Stephen G. Clark, of New York, while arguing that the omission of the tobacco rebate clause in the bill as signed by the President invalidated the whole bill, produced a book kept in the Clerk's office showing the record of bills passed by the House, to show that the clause was omitted. In reply to the Attorney General's question, Mr. Clark said he was not advised as to whether there was any law for the keeping of the book, "If there is no such law", said the Attorney General, with a sneer, "the book has no more wieght than a newspaper publication."

Commissioner Roosevelt is back. He declines to discuss the story that Mr. Wanamaker is after his scalp, further than to say that he stands by everything he has ever said, which is equivelent to repeating his charge against the truthfulness of Mr. W.

CORRESPONDENCE

ANNANDALE.

Olie Lundeen, while working with Henry Ericson's machine at sawing wood at John Johnson's in Southside last Friday, met with the mishap of having two fingers lacerated by the saw. He was brought in to Dr. Ridgway's office when the doctor amputated and dressed the fingers.

Noah Ritchie, of Southside, while coming home from the dedication of a church in Albion Sunday evening had the misfortune to get kicked in the face by his horse, knocking out two teeth, and badly lacerating his face. He was taken to the house of Thos Bullock and Dr. Ridgway was called and dressed the wounds. Mr. Ritchie came in on Wednesday and looked as though he had been having a "set to" with John L. Sullivan.

On Monday, Dr. Ridgway, assisted by Dr. O'Connor, operated upon the harelip of a young man, and it was said made a very nice job of it, being less than three minutes in performing the operation, after the patient was etherized.

W. D. McDonald is reported on the sick list.

We had a pleasant call from "Uncle Ben Johnson", of Cokato, last Monday. The old gentleman had not been in our village for a long time; said the reason was that in consequence of a bridge across Crow River being down it added several miles to the distance and he has been obliged to carry his wheat elsewhere.

Rev. Higgins had a full house as usual, last Sunday evening.

ROCKFORD.

Plenty snow on the prairies. Trains were late on Thursday and Friday last week on account of the blizzard.

The postmaster here has made the signers of a petition which was circulated a short time ago for his removal a little uneasy by threatening to prosecute them for libel.

A number of Delanoites have been courting in Buffalo the past week among them Wm. Lewis, M. A. O'Hair and W. M. Mowatt.

One thing noticable is the scarcity of loafers in the postoffice.

The Methodists are holding revival meetings every evening of this week. Rev. C. H. Davis, the pastor, is an earnest worker in the cause.

Geo. Irving has bought a horse and is "taking in" all parts of the country.

George Guptil and family have moved back to Rockford. They have purchased the residence formerly occupied by Wm. Haggarty.

Rev. J. R. Davies, of Delano assisted Rev. C. H. Davis at the revival Tuesday evening.

L. VanValkenburg has placed his threshing engine in the woolen mill and the mill is now run by steam.

An enjoyable dance was given in the G. A. R. hall last Saturday. A fair crowd in attendance considering the notice.

H. E. Pitt had a break down near N. Ewings a few days ago. As he was hauling a load of freight up the hill the hind axle broke, tipping the load over. Luckily nothing else broken.

P. Becker, of Loretto, stopped off at this place Wednesday.

Among those visiting the cities the past week were Mrs. M. J. Allen, Miss J Farnham, Messrs C. Johnson, D. R. Thompson, F. Gent, and Geo. Irving.

WATERTOWN WAYS.

Next Monday will be our next monthly fair day which will be a good one if the weather is good.

Mr. Thomas Campbell who has been working in Minneapolis all summer came home last Friday for the winter.

Mr. August Johnson, of Waconia, was doing business in our village last Wednesday.

Mr. W. C. Odell, Chaska's noted attorney, was in our village two or three days this week.

Mr. G. U. Miller has just received about $600. worth of new goods to replenish his stock which has been decreasing on account of rapid sales lately.

Messrs Swan Lestie, J. F. Campbell and Pat Gavan formed a company last Wednesday and purchased a handsome "Clyde" stallion which is one of the finest beasts which has ever been brought to this town. Call and see him on fair day.

There will be a pound sociable at the M. E. parsonage, next Friday evening, Dec. 18. All are cordially invited and requested to attend, as a very enjoyable evening is exspected.

The Christmas goods at H. A. Halgren's drug store are going very rapidly. Those wishing to purchase nic presents should take notice and call early.

The brick work of the new pump house is being laid as fast as possible and will probably be completed by the last of this week. Backman Bros. are doing the work.

INDEPENDENCE.

Bad roads and no remedy for them.

Congress has gone into session again to legislate for the nation.

The protracted meetings at Armstrong closed last week with very satisfactory results.

The business meeting of the Independence and Rockford A. C. church held at the Independence chapel last Saturday afternoon was conducted with decorum, brevity and good order and to those who held the ground was invigorating.

The Delano Eagle and Buffalo Gazette did not get along last week. Suppose they have been delayed while looking up a place to hold the National Democratic convention.

Quite a number of farmers have been loading wood at Armstrong during the past week.

Eld. M. Wellcom, of Monticello, returned home Thursday of last week.

E. Brandon has finished the well at schoolhouse in Dist. 102. Much water.

James Yancy, of Independence, will locate in Minneapolis, soon.

All the schools in Independence are running on full time without smallpox, itch or any kind of pestilence.

We would think it a good plan if someone would ask Congress to increase our navy to protect the McKinley bill and home production.

Some have begun talking up Christmas tree. Hadn't they better wait until Thanksgiving dinner gets settled.

J. N. Potter, of Rockford, preached at Armstroug last Sunday evening.

Would suggest the present Congress amend the McKinley bill by adding a high protective tariff on the winds of Heaven as so many people are using it for motive power to pump their drinks with. No doubt this was an oversight in Major McKinley as he got it on everything else the poor use.

From what we can learn there will be much turkey eating the coming Christmas. I like to hear of the good things being passed around.

Nothing preventing there will be a small gathering at E. K. Smith's tomorrow to get him some wood.

The Grand jury of Hennepin county is now in session with 15 or 20 cases on the calender and more to hear from and they expect to investigate some of the vile dens of the city such as gambling houses, etc.

Only a short time ago your correspondent visited an old time friend, of Long Lake, Hon. B. F. Cristlieb, who represented us in the state Legislature last winter, found him straight orthodox strong in Jackson Democracy. Mr. Christleib is in the mercantile business at Long Lake and reports trade very good. Also found a few more kindred spirits in the form of I. A. Christleib and Judge Bailey, of Long Lake; all of these are old time friends and wheel horses of Jackson Democracy.

The Christmas turkey is now roosting high, in politics he is a Republican for he favors high protection but Nimrod has him in mind and he is doomed to preside at the next annual Christmas dinner.

At this writing the weather is very fine and no indications of a storm. What has become of all our weather prognosticators.

For God and Home and Humanity

EDITED BY MRS. E. A. STACY.

From Our National President.

TO THE PUBLIC:—In reply to many questioners, let me say: FIRST, as has been already said by me innumerable times in years past, I am a friend to Dr. Keely and an advocate of the "Keely Cure."

SECOND, as the result of inquiries instituted by me during the past week, I believe my remarks last Sunday concerning the press (a remark not in my speech but off hand, and made half in jest and half in earnest) was too sweeping in its character, and that it involved injustice to those newspapers that have advocated the Keely cure.

THIRD, if Dr. Keely will make known the secret of his method, the ten thousand W. C. T. U.'s from ocean to ocean—nay around the World will, I am confident, do their best to supply it free of charge to any who are unable to purchase for themselves.

Yours for total abstinence and total prohibition. FRANCES E. WILLARD, Pres. World's and National W. C. T. U.
CHICAGO, SEP'T, 26 1891

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO.

A POPULAR FAMILY.

JENNIE: "How is it, Kate, that you always seem to 'catch on' to the last new thing? Do what I may, you always seem to get ahead of me."

KATE: "I don't know: I certainly do not make any exertion in that direction."

JENNIE: "Well, during the last few months, for example, you have taken up painting, without any teacher; you came to the rescue when Miss Lafarge deserted her Delsarte class so suddenly, and certainly we are all improving in grace under your instruction; I heard you telling Tommy Eames last evening how his club made mistakes in playing baseball; you seem to be up on all the latest 'fads,' and know just what to do under all circumstances; you entertain beautifully; and in the last month you have improved so in health, owing, you tell me, to your physical culture exercises. Where do you get all of your information from in this little out-of-the way place?—for you never go to the city."

KATE: "Why, Jennie, you will make me vain. I have only one source of information, but it is surprising how it meets all wants. I very seldom hear of anything new but what the next few days bring me full information of the subject. Magic? No! Magazine! And a great treasure it is to us all, for it really furnishes the reading for the whole household: father has given up his magazine that he has taken for years, as he says this one gives more and better information on the subjects of the day; and mother says that it is that that makes her such a famous housekeeper. In fact, we all agree that it is the only really FAMILY magazine published, as we have sent for samples of all of them, and find that one is all for men, another all for women, and another for children only, while this one suits every one of us; so we only need to take one instead of several, and that is where the economy comes in, for it is only $2.00 a year. Perhaps you think I am too lavish in my praise; but I will let you see ours, or, better still, send 10 cents to the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th Street, New York, for a sample copy, and I shall always consider that I have done you a great favor; and may be you will be cutting us out, as you say we have the reputation of being the best informed family in town. If that be so, it is Demorest's Family Magazine that does it."

THE last of the four Saxe brothers of Vermont, of whom the poet, John G. Saxe, was the eldest, has died in San Francisco.

DURING the last fiscal year the post office department employed 10,130 letter-carriers, who handled 3,606,354,820 pieces of mail.

RIVER interests seem to be looking up in the southwest. Kansas has just completed arrangements for shipping nearly all its flour produced, to the amount of 10,000,000 barrels, to Europe via New Orleans.

THERE is a movement in Georgia to erect a monument to the memory of Eli Whitney, inventor of the cotton-gin. He was born in Massachusetts, and died and was buried in Connecticut, but no stone marks his grave.

MARS and Uranus will make a close conjunction on the morning of the 15th, about 4 or 5 o'clock. A good opera glass or small telescope will disclose them to view, coming up the eastern sky side by side like two night revelers going home locked-arms in the morning.

ONE odd experience in the life of Sir Edward Arnold seems not yet to have been brought out in the course of his visit to New York. To win a wager made with a lady he climbed 13,000 feet to the top of Fuji San, in Japan, and wrote on the edge of its crater a picturesque poem of ninety-two lines.

THOMAS G. HODGKINS, of Long Island, who recently gave $200,000 to the Smithsonian institution, has been so overwhelmed with begging letters that he has announced to the public that he is an invalid over eighty-eight years of age, and has to give all his time to the management of his farm. He therefore asks to be excused from answering his unknown correspondents.

CONSERVATIVE Hebrews doubt the feasibility of Baron Hirsch's scheme to settle Russian refugees in the Argentine republic. They point to the unsettled condition of Argentine affairs, and to the general perturbation existing in South America. Should the war troubles of Brazil involve Argentine, which is possible, what, they ask, would become of the unfortunate immigrants?

THE Austrians do not love the military. Twenty per cent. of the whole mortality of the army is due to suicide, the annual average of suicides being 122 to every 10,000 soldiers. The corresponding average in Germany is 63, in Italy 40, in France 29 (except in Algeria, where the figure is doubled), in England 23, in Russia 20 and Spain 14. Most of the suicides are young recruits, and the means employed usually is either shooting or drowning.

A PARTY of young women of Fulton, Mo., got up a coon-hunting party a few days ago. The boys were rigorously excluded. The party started out with four dogs, two guns, two axes and a big basket of lunch. Early the next morning the whole neighborhood started out to hunt the hunters, and found them deep in the woods, all sitting in a row on a log, crying dreadfully. They admitted that they got hopelessly lost in the woods within a couple of hours after the start.

THE evening stars during this month are Venus, Jupiter and Neptune. Saturn, Mars and Uranus are the morning stars. Mercury is evening star until the 28th, and is then morning star. Jupiter does not set until about midnight, and is a fine spectacle in the western sky. Venus goes down a little too near sun-time to make much of an evening display until after the middle of the month. Saturn does not appear until after midnight and can not be commended to the attention of people who keep good hours.

ONE day last spring President Choate, of the Old Colony railroad, was visiting the Massachusetts state house on business connected with his company, when a smooth-faced young man, seeing that he was not familiar with his surroundings, offered to direct him. After the young man had put himself to considerable trouble to help Mr. Choate, the railroad president thanked him heartily, and said: "By the way your face is familiar to me, but I don't know who you are." "My name is Russell," replied the young man, politely; "I am the governor."

THE German substitute of cast iron hollow bricks for the present clay article is thought by some practical judges to possess certain qualities of adaptation to building purposes which entitle it to more than a passing notice. As described, the shell is so thin that the brick weighs less than one made of clay, and a wall may be built of it without the use of mortar, nor is any skilled labor required in laying them, the upper and lower sides of the brick being provided with grooves and projecting ribs which fit into each other very easily and perfectly.

AMONG the many original things done by the emperor of Germany lately is to arrange for the publication of the sermons preached by him last summer during his cruise on the imperial yacht in the North sea. The title will be "The Voice of the Lord on the waters." The volume has been edited by Army Chaplain Richter, who supplies this preface: "It is the father of a household who speaks in these meditations, using his priestly rights in the absence of a clergyman, and thus exhorting each of us to follow his example in his own circle." It is thought the book will be popular.

THE steel cruiser New York, just finished, is the largest warship of the United States, and it is expected that she will be the most formidable armored vessel in the world. Her horse power is 16,000, and she can carry coal for a run of 13,000 miles. She could run to China without recoaling and force an engagement with any ship making less than twenty knots an hour. The New York will have four complete steel decks. On her trial it is believed she will make more than the guaranteed speed of twelve miles an hour, and her builder will receive a bonus. She cost $3,000,000.

CRISP FOR SPEAKER.

Democratic Congressman Nominate the Georgian to Preside Over the House.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—It is Speaker Crisp. After one of the hottest speakership battles in the last twenty years the Georgian has triumphed. Reed won his speakership fight on the third ballot and Carlisle won his on the second, but it took thirty ballots, covering two days, to raise Judge Crisp to the dignity of a position second only to that of the presidency. Mr. Springer (Ill.) commanded the situation at the climax. It was Springer's vote to Crisp which started the final break to the Georgian, and it was the further accession of four of Springer's forlorn remnant that carried Crisp beyond the winning point and made him speaker. The decisive ballot—the thirtieth—stood: Crisp, 119; Mills, 105; Springer, 4; Stevens, 1.

MR. CRISP.

On motion of Mr. J. D. Brown (Ind.) the nomination of Mr. Crisp was made unanimous. Immediately there were loud calls of "Crisp," "Crisp," and a committee was appointed to notify the successful candidate of his selection and escort him to the chair.

Applause and cheers greeted the appearance of the gentleman from Georgia, and after bowing his acknowledgments Mr. Crisp spoke, in part, as follows:

"Representatives: I am profoundly grateful for this mark of your confidence and esteem. I pledge myself here and now to devote whatever of industry and ability I possess to the advancement of the real interests of the democratic party. [Great applause.] I beg to say to you now as I speak to you my first words since I am your selection for speaker that my election means no step backward in tariff reform. [Prolonged applause and cheers.] I beg to say to you that there is in our party today no man who more earnestly believes in the democratic doctrine of tariff reform than I do."

The following nominations were made for the minor offices: Mr. Kerr, of Pennsylvania for clerk, unanimously; Mr. Yoder, of Ohio, for sergeant at arms, unanimously, after it was seen that he was far in the lead of Murphy, of Iowa; Turner, of New York, for doorkeeper by 178 votes to 27 for Fields, of Virginia and 8 for Coit, of Connecticut; Dalton, of Indiana, for postmaster by 122 to 29 for Wright, of North Carolina, 36 for Barney, of Wisconsin, and 36 for McClamany, of North Carolina.

[Charles Frederick Crisp was born in Sheffield, Eng., June 29, 1845, his parents being on a European tour at the time. They returned to America the year of his birth and went back to their old home in Georgia. He was educated in the common schools of Macon and Savannah, and in May, 1861, he entered the confederate army as lieutenant in Company K, Tenth Virginia infantry. He was taken prisoner of war May 12, 1864, and confined in Fort Delaware until June, 1865. Then he was released and went to live with his parents, who were residing at Ellaville, Schley county, Ga. Soon after he moved to Americus and studied law, being admitted to the bar there in 1866, and going back to Ellaville to practice. He continued in private practice then until 1872, when he was appointed solicitor general of the southwestern judicial circuit and was reappointed in 1873 for a term of four years. In the same year he moved to Americus again and since then that town has been his home. June, 1877, Mr. Crisp was appointed judge of the superior court of the southwestern circuit and in 1878 elected to the same office by the general assembly. He was reelected judge in 1880 for a term of four years, but resigned in 1882 to accept the democratic nomination for congress in the Third district. He was also president of the democratic state convention of 1883. He was elected to the Forty-eighth congress and has been returned to that body continuously ever since.]

JAPAN NEEDS AID.

Grievous Want Caused by the Recent Earthquake—500,000 Destitute—An Appeal.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 8.—The foreigners' relief committee of Yokohama has issued an appeal to the people of the United States on behalf of the sufferers by the earthquake which occurred in central Japan October 28. The appeal is signed by Admiral Belknap, commanding the Asiatic squadron, and by the United States consular officers at Tokio and Yokohama. Regarding the calamity Admiral Belknap says:

"As communication is obtained with places before unheard from it becomes certain that the misery and devastation are vastly worse than had been supposed. In one mountain village, for example, every individual was either killed or crippled, and not one was able to go for aid to neighboring towns. The actual number of persons left homeless will reach 500,000. Fields, roads, dikes, potteries, tools and shops have in many cases been destroyed, and every means of livelihood thus been taken away. The coming winter will greatly aggravate the distress of their condition.

"The people of our country, perhaps, do not realize that Japan is a comparatively poor country. Under the circumstances its resources for giving relief are not adequate. It cannot but look abroad for assistance. It is from the United States that the most may be expected. The plentiful resources of our own country, and especially the uniquely prosperous condition in which abundant harvests will place it, justify us in appealing to our countrymen to make a special effort to relieve Japan. All contributions may be forwarded to O. Kell, Esq., secretary of the Yokohama chamber of commerce, and due account will be returned. The appended signatures will be a guarantee of the need that exists and of the proper disposition of the money."

Will Leave the Stage.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Mrs. William J. Florence has arrived in this city from London. She is stopping at the Williams. Mrs. Florence is ill and will not stir from the house for several days. Her condition is due to nervous prostration and grief at the death of Mr. Florence. She announces her determination to act no more.

Disastrous Train Wreck.

WEST PLAINS, Mo., Dec. 8.—A terrible wreck, disastrous in its effects both upon life and property, occurred here on the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Memphis railway Monday afternoon. Four men were killed. A construction train with thirty-eight men in the caboose was backing into this place when it collided with a special freight train. The caboose was smashed into splinters and four of the workmen in it were killed outright. Of the other thirty-four men occupying the caboose twenty were seriously injured, it is feared some of them fatally.

Perished in the Blizzard.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 8.—Stephen Olson, a farmer, accompanied by his daughter, a young lady about 23 years of age, left Hallock, Minn., Friday to drive to their home, about 6 miles northeast of Drayton, N. D. Sunday their bodies were found, both having been frozen to death in the blizzard. The bodies were found about 80 rods from the cutter, which was overturned.

Frozen to Death.

BAY CITY, Mich., Dec. 8.—A party of hunters found the body of Peter De Marsh, of Picton, Ont., frozen to death near Alger, Mich.

TAKEN BY WIRE.

The Law Claims the Life of Wife-Murderer Loppy, Who Has Been Electrocuted at Sing Sing.

SING SING, N. Y., Dec. 8.—Martin D. Loppy was killed by electricity at 12:08 p. m. Prison Chaplain Silas G. Edgerton was the first man to emerge from the prison after the execution. He looked very pale and was much agitated. In answer to questions concerning the execution he declined any details, but said it was similar in every respect to the four witnessed by him in July. But there was no suffering and no scene. Loppy died easily and went to the chair bravely, giving everyone the impression that he did not care whether he lived or not. There were three contacts, the signals being manipulated by Dr. Laudy.

According to Warden Brown, the execution was carried out the same as at the time of the killing of the four men in the same chair in July last. The warden refused to give any information except to say that the law had been carried out and that the execution of Loppy was a success.

Loppy was attended in his last moments by Chaplain Low, of the Tombs prison, and Chaplain Edgerton, of Sing Sing prison. When Loppy arrived at Sing Sing three weeks ago he was sullen and indifferent, but he gradually changed under the teachings of the ministers. He listened with bowed head to the reading of the death warrant, and was then led to the death chamber, where he was promptly placed in the chair and strapped so that he could not move head or foot. While this was being done, the experts, physicians and other persons present were grouped about the room in a semi-circle.

The electrodes were then applied to the condemned man, one covering the forehead and temples and the other the calf of the right leg. The electrodes were moistened with a solution of salt water before the current was turned on and at intervals afterward. Capt. Hilbert, who was in charge of the death machinery, had the dynamo running and everything was ready for turning on the current. As the signal was given to the man at the switchboard to turn on the current, Drs. MacDonald, Landy and Rockwell stood near the chair with watches in their hands to time the respiration and the beating of the heart. None of the witnesses would reveal how Loppy died.

It is understood that 1,485 volts were used, the same as at the July execution, and that a current of that voltage was continued from fifty to sixty seconds. As soon as Loppy was pronounced dead the straps which bound his body were removed and the dead murderer was carried into the apartment directly off the execution room, where an autopsy was held.

[Loppy's crime was the murder of a woman who was known as Hattie Loppy and was supposed to have been his wife. The deed was committed on July 4, 1890, in a miserable little room at 220 Chrystie street, where the couple lived. The assassin stabbed his victim to the heart with a sharp-pointed pair of scissors. There were no witnesses to the killing. A drunken quarrel was the only known cause for the deed.]

THE GAVEL FALLS.

Both Branches of the Fifty-Second Congress Called to Order—The House Soon Adjourns—New Senators, Including Brice, of Ohio, Sworn In.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8. — The house was called to order promptly at noon Monday. The clerk immediately proceeded to call the roll.

The clerk having announced the presence of 326 members, the house immediately, on motion of Mr. Holman (Ind.), adjourned until noon Tuesday.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Despite the interest in the speakership fight, when the gavel of the presiding officer of the senate fell exactly at noon Monday there was a big crowd present.

After the chaplain had offered the usual invocation the resignations of Senators George F. Edmunds (Vt.) and Matthew Reagan (Tex.) were read, and the appointments of Horace Chilton (Tex.), Redfield Proctor (Vt.) and John M. Palmer (Ill.) were announced. Papers relative to the election of Wilkinson Call (Fla.), whose seat is contested by R. Davidson, were duly presented.

When the name of Calvin S. Brice, senator-elect from Ohio, was called, Senator Sherman (O.) said that as Mr. Brice had his credentials he was entitled to be sworn in, but that this was not to be considered as waiving any rights if the Ohio legislature should discover Mr. Brice was ineligible.

Senator Hoar (Mass.) suggested that the contention was that Mr. Brice was not an "inhabitant" of Ohio, and Senator Sherman accepted the correction, substituting the word "inhabitant" for "citizen." Mr. Brice was then escorted to the desk and sworn in.

All who presented themselves were sworn in except Messrs. Dubois, of Idaho, and Call, of Florida. Senator Hale (Me.) objected to Mr. Dubois taking the oath. Senator George (Miss.) contended for the formal admission of Mr. Call. Senator Hoar submitted a few remarks, the purport of which was that he regarded Call's credentials as all right. It is the general understanding that both Dubois and Call will be sworn in Tuesday and that the question of contest in their cases will be immediately referred to the committee on privileges and elections for decision. The senate then adjourned.

TORN BY AN EXPLOSION.

Two Men Killed and a Sawmill Demolished at Collinsville, Tenn.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 8.—The boiler of J. W. Houston's sawmill at Collinsville exploded Monday, killing two persons and destroying the entire plant. John Smith, the engineer, had his leg cut off below the hip and the rest of his body landed in the forks of a tree 150 feet away. Ed Downes was sitting on a log eating his breakfast. His clothing was torn into shreds and his naked body was found lying 50 yards away. An iron pipe 12 feet long was hurled against a tree with so much force that it pierced it.

MURDEROUS FIRE-DAMP.

It Explodes in a Russian-Poland Mine, Causing a Loss of 180 Lives.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 8.—A most terrible catastrophe has occurred in a colliery, located at Nifka, in Russian Poland. No details of the affair have as yet been received here, but it is conjectured that the accident was the result of an explosion of fire-damp. Further intelligence is anxiously awaited and hopes are expressed that the loss of life, which the first dispatch places at 180, is overestimated. In addition to these 180 men who are said to have lost their lives, forty horses were killed.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

WHEAT RECEIPTS.

The Minneapolis Record Broken for Each of the Three Months.

The wheat receipts at Minneapolis for the first three months of the crop year were the largest for three months ever received there, and were as follows: September, 6,907,160 bushels, against 4,866,640 in 1890; October, 9,640,430 bushels, against 8,559,780 in 1890; November, 8,462,129 bushels, against 7,663,750 in 1890. Total this year, 25,009,720; last year, 21,089,990. The receipts for the same three months in 1888 were 21,602,120 bushels. The shipments for the three months this year were 7,766,830 bushels, against 5,158,939 last year.

Shipments of Iron Ore from Duluth.

Shipments of iron ore from the Vermilion range have stopped. The season's record was: Minnesota mine, 517,187 tons; Chandler, 372,728; Pioneer, 3,080. Total, 892,995 tons; an increase of 12,855 tons over 1890. The total output for the year will be increased about 4,000 tons before January 1 by rail shipments to this city. The total output of all Lake Superior ranges for the season was about 6,650,000 tons, or a decrease of 4,350,000 tons from last year.

An Important Land Decision.

Assistant Secretary Chandler in the case of S. D. Patrick against Walenly, Misgalski and others, involving a tract of land in the Dubuque district, said to be valuable for its mineral, has affirmed the action of the commissioner of the general land office in overruling the motion to dismiss the appeal of the contestant. The commissioner is directed to cancel the entry on the ground that Leopold Moss, the transferee, was not a bona fide purchaser.

Firebugs Captured.

Four of the most desperate gangs of firebugs in the country—Marx and Moritz Michael, Julius Rosenthal and Ida Gees—were captured in the very act of setting fire to a building in West St. Paul. Moritz confessed that he had burned five houses in West St. Paul for a percentage of the insurance, and said that when he lived in Chicago under the name of John Myers he made lots of money out of setting fires.

Preferred Death to Education.

Annie Olson, a 16-year-old German girl, committed suicide in Minneapolis by taking poison. She was an orphan, her mother having died when the daughter was only 5 years old. Since then the girl has been cared for by Mr. and Mrs. Nels Emerson. They had recently insisted on her attending night school, a proposition which Annie for some reason did not meet with favor, and so she took the fatal dose.

Crushed to Death.

John Rowe, an engine cleaner at the Northwestern shops in Winona, was instantly killed the other morning. An engine had just backed over an ash-pit to have the fire dumped and Rowe, being in a hurry, got under too soon. The engine started ahead about a foot and the sand pipe caught him in the right side, crushing him on the rail.

Death of Mrs. Luce.

Mrs. Nellie Luck, wife of W. L. Luce, of Minneapolis, died at the state school for the blind in Faribault. Her death was supposed to have been caused by laudanum taken by accident or with a view to suicide. Some months ago Mrs. Lee was afflicted by diphtheria, and came near dying. On recovering she lost her sight and since that time her life had seemed unendurable to her.

Half a Million Lost.

Fire broke out in Tracy and swept Front, Third, Fourth and State streets clean. The buildings were nearly all wood. Fourteen stores, two small hotels and three dwellings were burned. The loss was estimated at nearly $500,000. The fire was of incendiary origin.

The News Briefly Chronicled.

Martin G. Cooney, a brakeman, had his head cut off by an engine in St. Paul.

A plant for the manufacture of a steam heating apparatus has been located at Winona.

Walter Drisson, 19 years old, a carpenter employed in the grand stand at the state fair grounds, fell from the roof to the ground, breaking his back. He died on the way to the hospital.

Iver Bern, who shot a saloonkeeper in East Grand Forks, has been lodged in jail at Crookston.

Charles Kotlitz, a 12-year-old boy, while hunting rabbits just outside St. Paul accidentally shot himself and died soon after.

An indoor baseball league has been organized at Winona, with C. M. Morse as president and A. J. Whipple as secretary and treasurer.

J. S. Drew, a farmer who lived near Winona, fell from a hayloft and was killed.

The grand jury of Nicollet indicted Mrs. Mary Miller for murder in the first degree. Mrs. Miller shot her divorced husband at Nicollet last August.

John Lindquist, a Norwegian farmer living in Home City, committed suicide by hanging. Lindquist lived alone and despondency was supposed to be the cause of the deed.

The Lake City hotel in Minneapolis was burned, causing a loss of $1,500. The building was a two-story frame structure and was owned by Charles Micklund. All the occupants escaped.

Two little children of J. A. Mackenzie, of Minneapolis, were killed in the recent railway wreck at Toledo, O., and Mrs. Mackenzie was not expected to live.

The First Congregational church in Minneapolis celebrated the beginning of its forty-first year by raising money enough to clear off the entire debt of $15,000.

H. Bishop, president of the Duluth & Iron Range road, has retired on account of ill health, and Vice President M. J. Carpenter has been made president. C. W. Hilliard, secretary of the company, has been made vice president.

The locomotive, tender, baggage car and first passenger coach were derailed near Walcott and a considerable amount of damage was done to railroad property, but no one was hurt.

The store of the Kuehn Mercantile Company at Wabasha was broken into and robbed of clothing, dress goods, shawls, etc., amounting in value to between $1,000 and $1,500.

November was a heavy month in the Minneapolis police department, 510 arrests having been made, about fifty more than the average. The municipal court received $4,174.40 from criminal business and $405.98 from civil business.

Results from the Late Paris Exposition.

The Whitman Agricultural Co., of St. Louis, are just in receipt of letter from their Paris agents as follows:

"The War Department have just finished a trial of baling presses, which was a complete success for you. All other competitors have been ordered to remove their presses from the grounds. The directing officer advises us that your press worked to their entire satisfaction and that orders would be placed for quite a large number."

"German Syrup"

Martinsville, N.J., Methodist Parsonage. "My acquaintance with your remedy, Boschee's German Syrup, was made about fourteen years ago, when I contracted a Cold which resulted in a Hoarseness and a Cough which disabled me from filling my pulpit for a number of Sabbaths. After trying a Physician, without obtaining relief—I cannot say now what remedy he prescribed—I saw the advertisement of your remedy and obtained a bottle. I received such quick and permanent help from it that whenever we have had Throat or Bronchial troubles since in our family, Boschee's German Syrup has been our favorite remedy and always with favorable results. I have never hesitated to report my experience of its use to others when I have found them troubled in like manner." REV. W. H. HAGGARTY, of the Newark, New Jersey, M.E. Conference April 25, '90.

GRANNY'S MESSAGE.

You're writing out to Jack to-day, because he's twenty-one,
And wants, you say, for me to send a message
straight from home;
Dear boy, if I could just sit down and take his hand in mine
Instead of putting all my love in one poor little line!
But write out clear and let it read: "To Jack,
away from home:
Granny says get ready
For the kingdom come."

You're smiling, daughter, as you write, but
Jack won't smile that way;
His mind will go a-titlin' back to thoughts of yesterday,
Before he'd got as big and tall, and oh, so very wise,
When he was granny's white-haired boy,
a-dreaming of the skies.
So write out clear and let it read: "To Jack,
away from home:
Granny says get ready
For the kingdom come."

Somehow the letters that we get don't seem to come from him,
And often when I've read them through my poor old eyes are dim;
He talks too much of wealth and power—my
Jack was never proud—
Of men of note, and fame, and might, and going with the crowd.
So write out clear and let it read: "To Jack,
away from home:
Granny says get ready
For the kingdom come."

You think his birthday calls for more than such a simple line;
Nay, there are those who love him less to make him wishes fine.
My words go from a faithful heart; they're tender, true and warm,
With loving wisdom in them, too, to win my boy from harm;
So write out clear and let it read: "To Jack,
away from home:
Granny says get ready
For the kingdom come."

I'd like to see him as he reads, his bright eyes brimming o'er,
And good thoughts rising, white and strong, to be forgot no more.
Heaven will be nearer to his heart than it has been for years,
For he will read in that one line my love, my hopes, my prayers.
And so, because he is so dear: "To Jack,
away from home:
Granny says get ready
For the kingdom come."

"LET US BE FOOLS."

The Wise Conclusion of Two Pessimistic Philosophers.

I.

In a suburban district of Chicago there is a building known as the "Nest of Disappointment." It is an old-looking structure, of grayish brick, and was once the pretentious home of a rich man; but several years ago it was cut up into offices. Real estate men, a number of young doctors and a lawyer took rooms there, and it was not long until the shrewd observers of the neighborhood discovered that all of them were failures in their several lines. After a time it was believed that none but a disappointed man would take up his business abode in the gray brick house, and out of that belief arose the name of "Nest of Disappointment."

It is with the lawyer that this story has to deal. He was a man of about forty-five years of age. He had a thick head of hair and a short beard that grew in gnarls. His eyes were of that peculiar reflective kind which seemed ever to be looking afar off. No one knew anything about him, and doubtless none of the neighbors would ever have paid the slightest attention to him, or at least have made him the subject of their conversation, had he not arisen in court and called a pompous old justice of the peace an infernal liar. A sign above this man's door imparted to those who might be in search of information that James Dismukes was an attorney at law. The furnishings of Mr. Dismukes' office were noticeably plain, and, as he himself once remarked, "strikingly scarce." There were a number of books on improvised shelves, but not many of them held decisions of judiciary tribunals or comments on the "rule of civil action," but were related to philosophy and those sharp, merciless probings into the breast of man.

One afternoon Mr. Dismukes sat at his desk meditating. The wind blew his door open, but he heeded it not. The day was beautiful with the mellowness of fall. The grass in the park hard by was turning gray with age and the German carp that had surprised and delighted the children all summer had been taken out of the fountain.

"If I could only put my thoughts on paper," the lawyer mused. "But why can't I? Other men do. The world is full of their written thoughts. Poor, miserable wretch am I. And why? Because I'm not fool enough to be happy. The creation of man was an experiment—his perpetuation is the carrying out of a scheme of vengeance. I may be wrong in saying this, but I am not wrong in refusing to be a fool. November! There is something in the air to-day that makes me think. Late autumn is the patron of thought. Spring is a childhood, with nursery rhymes and playful fancies; summer is manhood, warm with the arguments of life; winter is cold decay—but autumn is maturity, the reckoning of the mind, the sad humor of life, the melancholy sarcasm of existence. There is a laugh in a bud; there is a sermon in a fallen leaf. In the late autumn we stop and look back. What do we see? The impulsive steps of error and the false sentiments of enthusiasm. And yet we taste a strange sweetness standing in the autumn, looking back. There is a dreamy delight in the memory of a lost hope. A joy that dies in its youth is looked back upon with loving tenderness; a joy that lives its full time and then, palsied, sinks into the decay of old age, is recalled with a shudder. What is philosophy? Who is a philosopher? The pessimist who sees no light flashing through the darkness of a gloom-depressed world, or the optimist who smiles as he stands in the June day sun, listening to the sweet chant of blithe nature?"

He took up a pen and wrote his musings, and after a time appeared to be writing verse, for he began to count on the fingers of his left hand. He finished his task, and read aloud his prose meditations. Then he hesitated, as though afraid to give voice to his verse. He counted on his fingers again and then read the following:

"THE LATE AUTUMN.

"A chilling shudder floats upon the air,
An old perfume is borne across the lea,
The trees, discouraged, stand with branches bare;
The jaded year in death will soon be free.

"The hopes that came with early spring are dead,
The promises of summer unfulfilled;
The nights of soft enchantment all have fled—
Dried are the dews so sweetly they distilled.

"And thus, when tired life shall near its close,
How sadly shall we contemplate the past.
We struggled hard and fought to seize the rose,
And in a death-clutch catch the thorn at last."

Just as the lawyer finished reading he heard a slight noise, and, wheeling about with a start, saw a young woman standing in the door. Mr. Dismukes, blushing as well as his gnarled beard would permit, sprang to his feet and stammered an inquiry as to how long the young woman had been standing there.

"Ever since you began to read," she answered.

"Ah, but do you think it was quite proper, or I might say 'lady-like,' to steal in upon me and snatch my private correspondence?"

"I confess my guilt," she said, bowing gracefully and then advancing, "but the truth is, I came on business, and, hearing the first word of your meditations, I couldn't interrupt you. I felt as one who, hearing a note of strange and yet familiar music, wishes to hear the entire tune. I beg your pardon."

"Sit down," said the lawyer, tumbling a number of books out of a chair. She sat down, and Mr. Dismukes, resuming his chair, remarked:

"You don't mean to say that you agree with my pessimistic sentiment?"

"But I do mean to say it, and why shouldn't I? The world is a fraud and life is its accomplice. I haven't lived a great while, but I have lived long enough and studied profoundly enough to know that happiness, or rather that fluctuating and thoughtless condition known as happiness, is but the result of ignorance. But wretchedness we know to be real. It is not aided by side lights; it is not bolstered by argument—it stands alone as a great truth that needs no prop."

The lawyer looked at her in astonishment. She was not handsome, but her form was graceful and her face was pleasant. She was evidently a student—indeed, a certain something about her, an expression of meditative weariness, proclaimed it.

"I am glad that I have met you," said the lawyer. "As a general thing I pay no attention to women. They have a habit of smiling, the very stage carpentry of hypocrisy, and they pretend to be in exceeding good humor, when a moment's thought should convince them that they are mistaken. Where were you educated?"

"I am not educated yet," she answered. "I was graduated at an eastern school, but I came away knowing that the system of training was wrong. My mother and I," she added, after a short silence, "have just moved into this neighborhood; and, immediately upon our arrival, we were confronted by the necessity of engaging a lawyer. I didn't know where to go, and while passing along here happened to see your sign."

"I am very glad you called, not on account of the business you may bring me, but because I am really glad to meet you. Shall I go to your mother's house or can the business be transacted here?"

"I should like for you to go with me if it will not be too much trouble."

"No trouble at all, I assure you."

"Really, now," she asked, "or shall I believe that you are playing the gallant hypocrite?"

"Miss—is it miss or madam?"

"Miss."

"Well, miss, I should be just as miserable here as at your mother's house; therefore I should gain nothing by remaining here. Are you ready to go?"

The business, trifling in its nature, was soon transacted. The lawyer and the young woman, Miss Blakemore, sat in the library.

"The day is beautiful," she said.

"Yes," he replied. "It is a powerful search light thrown on the earth to reveal its misery. If there be a time when we should yield to the temptation to be happy, it should be when we knew that our minute of death has come. Men look with dread upon death; but why should they? Suppose a man is suffering from an acute pain, should he not welcome the physician who brings relief?"

"He should," the young lady assented, "and he will, if he be a sensible man. The experiment of life has been so thoroughly tried and the utter hollowness of human existence has been recorded by so many of the world's greatest thinkers that I don't see why there should remain any doubt."

"Were you ever happy?" he asked.

"During my short term of giddiness—the few years of early life were passed in a sort of happiness, but study and reflection soon convinced me of my error."

"Even my boyhood was miserable," the lawyer said. "I was born a skeptic and, therefore, soon began to think for myself. I don't violently denounce the faith of the Christian, yet I do think that he accepts a wonderful story on very little evidence. If I knew, as he professes to know, I should be the happiest human being in the world; but there are no means of investigation—no possible system of proof. It is a case that would be thrown out of any court."

"I have long since ceased to trouble my mind about it," she replied. "If there be a future life—and I cannot feel that there isn't—I know that it can't possibly be worse than this; therefore, being safe, I am unconcerned. Won't you sit longer?"

The lawyer had arisen to go.

"No, thank you, I must get back to the Nest of Disappointment." She looked at him inquiringly. "It's the name of the building where I go, through the pretense of doing business. The name was given it by some fellow who had the knack of applying an apt phrase to an easy discovery."

"I hope to see you again, sir."

"You shall. In truth, I can't permit one so closely allied to me to escape."

The lawyer went back to his miserable office and sat meditating wretchedly.

II.

Several days passed and one evening, when he was unusually miserable, he called on Miss Blakemore. She met him without a smile—surely an unconventional greeting—and conducted him to the library.

"How do you feel this evening?" she asked, when she had given him a chair.

"I have spent the day in thought and have therefore arisen into the very sublimity of wretchedness," he answered.

"How do you feel?"

"Miserable."

He nodded in approval and said: "You are a wonderful woman."

"No, I am simply a woman who has her eyes open."

"But," he quickly replied, "a woman who has her eyes open is the most wonderful of all women. Do you know that I could not stay away from you much longer? Let me explain: I find that I am more miserable when I am with you, and am therefore more natural. I don't think that a man could be fool enough to be happy while he is with you."

"I don't object to reasonable compliment, Mr. Dismukes, but I do hope that you will not attempt to flatter me."

"I will not do that, Miss Blakemore. What are you reading now?"

"'The Conventional Lies of Civilization,'" she answered.

"A charming book, because it is true," he said. "No wonder that governments have attempted to suppress it."

They talked until a late hour, and when he went away he felt that a possession of her—to have her all his own—was necessary to his complete misery of life. He brooded over her wretchedly as he sat in the "Nest of Disappointment," smoking his obnoxious pipe. "Suppose I should ask her to marry me and she should refuse," he mused. "Ah, but mightn't that make my misery completer than if she were to agree? I believe it might, and I am almost tempted to hope that she will refuse. How gloriously devoid of foolish sentiment she is. I could not have believed that such a woman existed. She is my other self. Ah, and if she is, why shouldn't I marry her to perfect the gloom of my life? I might fail to provide for her properly, and that would be an additional misery, and, consequently, an advancement in true thought. Oh, the mockery, the shallowness of this life!"

The next day he received a note from Miss Blakemore: "Mother and I are going to the country for a few days," she said, "and we should be greatly pleased to have you go with us."

He went. The old lady was a querulous creature, fussy with her headgear and of general disagreeableness, in that at times she attempted to be cheerful. "The old woman is in her dotage," the lawyer mused, when Mrs. Blakemore saw a prairie windmill, as she sat looking through the train window, and exclaimed that it was so romantic. "I am afraid that she will be in our way."

They stopped at a farm house and were, of course, miserable. The old woman cackled over the charm of nature and was, therefore, annoying; but one afternoon, when the mother was asleep, the lawyer and the daughter went down to a lake and stood under a great tree. Miss Blakemore gazed for a moment at the lake, and then at the graceful shore, winding in and out.

"Oh," she said, "looking at this lake a foolish woman might be tempted to exclaim that it is a beautiful dimple in the cheek of a charming landscape."

"Yes," he replied, "but you are not a foolish woman and, therefore, should not—not—I was going to say, should not even make a foolish suggestion."

A strange expression came over his face. She stood looking far across the lake.

"I don't quite understand myself today, Miss Blackmore."

"Why?"

"That is what I don't know, but I feet that I have lost some of my long-cherished wisdom."

He took her hand. She did not resist him.

"Your name is Grace, isn't it?"

"Yes. Does it make you more miserable to hold my hand?"

"I don't know—I—Grace, I am a fool. I love you."

"I have lost my sense, too," she said, with an emotional whimper.

"I love you, Grace, and want you to be my wife. Let wise men go. Let us be fools. Let us blend two miseries and make one happiness. Something within me teaches me that the man of simple faith is right, and if I were the judge, his case would not be thrown out of court. Kiss me, Grace."—Opie Read, in Arkansaw Traveler.

AN ALGERIAN HAREM.

The Arab Woman in Algiers Is Far Above Her Sex in Turkey.

The position of the Arab woman in Algiers is far superior to that of her sex in Turkey, and the French law, which is rigidly enforced, prevents her being sold into slavery. She is, however, "the victim of a brutalizing social code, founded on the bound-up religion whose theory is pure, but whose practices are barbarous."

When a child is born to a Moorish woman she considers it a blessing if it be a boy, a curse if a girl, and directly the girl comes into the world she is baptised in the name of Fathma, which is the name of the mother of the prophet. A week after another name is given her—the choice lies between nineteen names, the prettiest of which are Mimi, Zina, Zora and Halima.

The little girl matures early and is married at ten or twelve years of age. As for her father, it is all he knows of his daugher when some one takes her from him in marriage. If the child be the daughter of poor parents she grows up to be beaten, overworked and despised. If a rich girl she is neglected by her mother, and is given over to the care of an old negress until she is old enough to be married, and then her life is lived out in a harem.

The French have tried to suppress the harems, and in a measure they have succeeded, but among the rich there is no power on earth that can force them to change their ways of living. The government has guaranteed to the natives the possession of the civil law, which is the Koran, and the social code and civil law are one. They might as well decree that the women go unveiled or the men change their costumes as to interfere with the domestic arrangements of the Moorish customs.

The wives of the rich Arabs are kept more in seclusion than their poorer sisters, but on Fridays (Mohammedan Sunday) they are always allowed to visit the cemetery, though accompanied by female attendants, and this is their one great privilege. Strangers of the gentler sex only are allowed to visit the cemetery on this day, and when the poor veiled creatures look upon their European sisters is it to be wondered they realize in a measure their degradation?—Washington Star.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—Union Griddle Cakes: One quart of warm water, half a teaspoonful of salt, one egg, one-fourth cupful of yeast, one cupful of Indian meal, and wheat flour enough to thicken; set over night; in the morning before baking, add half a teaspoonful of soda.

—Gold lace may be cleaned with rock alum that has been burned, then powdered fine and sifted. Dip a clean, soft brush into the powder and rub the gold lace briskly. Afterward wipe with a clean, soft flannel. The same method may be used to brighten gold embroidery.

—To keep fish fresh, clean and remove the gills; then insert a piece of charcoal in their mouths and two or three pieces inside of them. If they are to be conveyed any distance wrap each fish separately in paper and place them in a box. Fish thus preserved will keep fresh several days.

—"Pan Dowdy:" Cover the bottom of a pudding-dish an inch thick with pared, sliced apples, over these sprinkle cracker-crumbs half an inch thick, and continue until the dish is full, sprinkling sugar over each layer. Bake one hour, the first half covered with a plate. Eat with cream.

—Bread and Milk: A nice way to serve bread and milk for supper where something hot is desired is as follows: Cut stale bread into slices and place in hot oven until well browned. Have on a stove a pan of milk; when scalding hot salt it well, add the browned bread (buttered, if desired), take from stove, cover a few minutes and it is ready to serve.

—Bondin de Salmon: Take a slice of salmon of the weight you require. Pound it well in a mortar, and pass it through a sieve; make it up into a ball. Pound up with it again an equal weight of butter. Mix with the pomade sufficient eggs to prevent it from breaking, season with salt and cayenne. Put it into a pudding mold, and steam it for an hour. Make a good sauce and serve around it.—Boston Herald.

—Apple Ginger: Roll ginger root tied in a thin muslin bag in clear water until the water is well flavored; make a sirup of this water and sugar, adding to it a little lemon-juice, and allowing three-quarters of a pound of sugar to a pound of apples. When the sirup is skimmed clear boil in it a few quarters of the apples at a time until they becomes clear—no longer. Replace the apple in the sirup when it becomes cold.

—A new idea in the way of fancy work is to have patterns stamped solidly in indelible colors. This is very pretty on white linen, and gives a great deal of effect for very little work, as the outlines only require to be embroidered. A running blue ribbon pattern in indelible blue dye, outlined with silk of the same shade, is a charming one. The fast dyes are a new invention, and will, without doubt, become popular for many things in the way of decoration.

—Here is a recipe for real Connecticut pumpkin pie: Cut the pumpkin into small slices and stew it over a moderate fire with just enough water to keep it from burning. When stewed soft, turn off the little water there may be left, and let the pumpkin stand over a slow fire or drawn back on the stove for fifteen or twenty minutes, taking great care that it does not scorch. Remove from the fire, and when cool strain through a colander. To a quart of the strain pumpkin put two quarts of milk, ten eggs, one teaspoonful of salt and sugar, and spice to taste. This formula is for rich pies; if plain ones are preferred use one quart of milk to one pumpkin, and three or four eggs.

FOR PARLOR AND BUODOIR.

Fresh Fancies in the Decoration of the Rooms.

Mezzotints are to replace etchings as the fashionable black and white.

Pretty little books of Scotch poems and stories, one in a book, are very effectively bound in clan-plaid cloths.

A screen of rope-work may be made to appear very rich, and it can but be a relief after a good many of the more elaborate effects. The rope panels were lined with shirred India silk.

The use of the candle increases continually in the parlor as well as the dining-room. The soft light is regarded as very becoming to the complexion, and as the candles are now made to match not only every color, but almost every shade of color as well, their decorative effect is unlimited.

The huge wooden towel rings which, as such, seemed to have no especial cause for existence, may find more suitable occupation in sustaining a bed canopy. One woman, in an emergency to which the village carpenter was not promptly equal, so utilized one of them, fastening it to a brass hook in the ceiling, and now thinks of getting out a patent for the idea.

A new idea for piano covers is to take the yard squares of stamped velours, otherwise scorched canton flannel, which are sold in every fancy store for forty-five and fifty cents, etch the designs in rope silk, line with silk and with fringe. The result is a very handsome cover, and it will prove a very serviceable one as well. One square and a half makes the cover, of course, for an upright piano.—Chicago Post.

Popular Velvet Capes.

For theater use are pretty velvet capes in Cavalier and Henri Duex shapes, made with a stylish high collar lined with ostrich feathers. The capes are lined with some pretty contrasting color, and the smart little bonnet en suite matches this lining in color. Thus, among the many treasures in dress brought from Paris recently by a returned tourist was a cape of black velvet finished with a jetted Medici collar of great richness and elaboration. The cape was lined with orange-colored armure. En suite was a princesse bonnet of orange velvet, this fabric forming a soft undulating front, under a crowning and drooping bandeau of cut jet. A large jet aigrette was the only trimming, and the strings were of black velvet, to be tied under the chin.—Chicago Post.

—He was a buyer in a large wholesale house, and he was in love. One night he snatched a kiss. "Ah!" he exclaimed, "I am so well pleased with this sample that I should like to negotiate for all you have." He was accepted on the spot.—Harper's Bazar.

—The Old Man Consenting.—Preacher—"Ethel Harding is going to elope with Jack Davis to-night." His Wife—"Dear me! How did you find out?" Preacher—"I met Ethel's father this afternoon, and he asked me to sit up and wait for them."—N. Y. Herald.

HALLOWE'EN GAMES.

They Must Be Old and Time-Honored to Be Good.

Hallowe'en games must be old, not new, if you would get the true flavor of the magic season. It is the time of all others sacred to necromancy, particularly fortune-telling. None of the spells will work, though, if you do not sit up till 12 o'clock to try them. One of the simplest is burning nuts, for which, though, an open fire is indispensable. Two nuts are named—one for a young woman and the other for a young man. Then the two are laid on the hot hearth, just in front of the glowing coals. The one who first smokes or smoulders is the one whose namesake will first feel the pangs of love. If they burn up side by side in a clear, unwavering flame it betokens happy marriage betwixt the pair. If they smoke and splutter there is trouble ahead. If, as is much the more probable case, one or the other dances off at a tangent, it is ominous of fickleness or a refusal from the party of that nut's part. Another charm is to eat an apple at your glass—combing your hair the while—as the clock chimes midnight. Your future husband or wife will come and look over your shoulder.

Still another spell is to throw out of an upper window a ball of woolen yarn, keeping the end in your hand and winding the thread rapidly. When at the end something seizes it and holds it fast, you must ask, "Who holds?" and will be rewarded by hearing the name of your life partner—that is, if you own the ear of faith. Another, possible only to those who own a garden, is to go out into it blindfolded and pull up each a plant from a thick set border. If it is straight and slightly so will be your future wife or husband. If the earth adheres to the root it means money. The three dishes is another charm. Fill one with flour, one with sand and leave one empty. Set them in a row, then blindfold the company one by one and lead them up to thrust in a hand. To touch the flour means a rich marriage; sand means a poor and luckless one. The empty dish, spinster or bachlorhood. Of course, after each trial, you change the arrangement of the dishes.

Lastly, here is a very famous Scotch charm. Steal out of the house betwixt eleven and twelve, taking with you a basket, from which you pretend to sow seed, saying as you do:

Hemp seed, I sow thee,
Hemp seed, now grow thee,
And soon let my true love
Come after and mow thee.

At the last word look over your left shoulder and see the wraith of your future wife or husband following you, and apparently cutting hemp. These are but a very few of the spells you may work, though doubtless many more than you will care to undertake. —N. Y. Recorder.

WOMEN'S WAISTS.

Correct Measurements For a Well-Developed Figure.

While a 19 or 20-inch waist is a deformity in an adult woman, it may justly be doubted whether the 26-inch waist of the Venus de Medici is not somewhat too large to be in proportion with the figure of the average American woman. It is characteristic of women of the highest types of the Indo-European races to have wide hips and narrow waists. In other races the hips are narrower and the waists larger. The American woman appears, in consequence of her large hip measurement, to have a smaller waist than she really has. To the unskilled masculine eye a girl with a waist of 20 or 22½ inches may seem to have a wasp-like figure, when in reality her measurement is very nearly what it should be to satisfy the critical eye of an artist or her family physician.

The Venus de Medici is 5 feet 5 inches in height, 26 inches about the waist, 34 about the bust, and 44 about the hips. The women employed as "cloak models" by most of the great dry goods establishments in New York city are of about the same height. The measurements required of a "model" 5 feet 5 inches in height in one establishment are the following:

Waist, 23½ to 24 inches; bust, 34 to 35; hips, 45 to 47; base of skull to waist, 16; biceps, 11½ to 12.

A prominent physician recently gave the following as the correct measurements for a well-formed, well-developed and healthy woman of 5 feet 5 inches:

Waist, 24 inches; bust, 33½ to 34½; biceps, 12 to 13; wrist, 5½ or 5¾; hips, 44 or 45; calf, 13 to 14; and ankle, 7 to 7½.

The doctor's "model woman" has smaller hips and a smaller bust and about the same waist as the "cloak model."—N. Y. Ledger.

Silver, Glass and Chinaware.

Nothing is more annoying than to find at the last moment that one has not enough of the articles necessary to set a table and serve a dinner properly. When a demand for an extra number of dishes is made, it is often found that many have been broken and the fact not reported. It is well to go through the closets and inspect and count the china and glassware, and, if there be a shortage anywhere, replenish the set. Examine the silver to see if it needs a cleaning. The number of dishes required will, of course, depend upon the number of courses you serve. You should have a set of plates for each course. The soup and dinner plates can be used only once, but those of smaller size can be washed and used the second and the third time, if necessary. If there be but one servant—or, indeed, none—to wait upon the table, there should be silver enough to set the table for all the courses. Tumblers are generally used for water; so extensively, indeed, that one rarely sees a table set with goblets. For mineral waters there come beautifully-shaped glasses, which are almost as much of a necessity as the common water glasses. —Ladies' Home Journal.

A Passenger's Opinion.

Lady (at railway station)—Is there any objection to dogs in this car, conductor?

Gentleman (on platform)—I am not the conductor, madam. I will say, however, that there is a crying baby in his car, and if your dog is big enough to swallow the baby, I think he will be welcome.—N. Y. Weekly.

Vile cod-liver oil has lost its vileness in Scott's Emulsion and gained a good deal in efficiency.

It is broken up into tiny drops which are covered with glycerine, just as quinine in pills is coated with sugar or gelatine. You do not get the taste at all.

The hypophosphites of lime and soda add their tonic effect to that of the half-digested cod-liver oil.

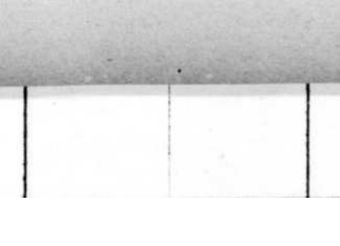
Which—Man or Shirt?



Has the man grown, or has the flannel shrunk? Usually, the shirt is to blame. No, not that, either—but the way it's washed.

Flannels ought to be washed with Pearline. If you're buying new ones, start right. Have them washed only with Pearline (direction on every package) and they won't shrink. As for the old ones, Pearline can't make them any larger, but begin with it at once and it will keep them from growing smaller. It will keep them from the wear and tear of the washboard, too.

Danger
As one wash is sufficient to ruin flannels, great care should be exercised as to the use of the many imitations which are being offered by unscrupulous grocers or peddlers. Pearline is never peddled. 314 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

OFFICAL PAPER OF VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO, FRIDAY, DEC. 11, 1891.

GREAT NORTHERN R'Y.

Passenger trains leave Delano as follows:

No. 7, going west	9:41 a. m.
" 9, " "	8:15 p. m.
No. 10, going east	5:23 a. m.
" 3, " "	3:40 p. m.

DELANO DIARY.

—Tomorrow will be Delano Fair day.

—Frank Japs is keeping house on the Henry Inwie farm near town.

—Great Northern trains in the morning continue to come late almost every day.

—The Zierman property was appraised yesterday by those appointed for that purpose.

—Quite a number of old persons are sick since the recent extreme changes in the weather.

—English sparrows enjoy these fine days twittering about our streets. In Chicago their scalps are said to be worth 2 cents each.

—Dr. Brigham, of Montrose passed through town on Monday evening on his way home from Buffalo, where he was a witness in the Mazue trial before the Grand Jury.

—Several of L. M. Maxfield's crew from Willmar, where they have been engaged on the depot building, for some time, returned home, having nearly completed the carpenter work.

—Fred Brandes made a trip to the cities one day this week. He says it was the first day that the morning train was on time, and as he had not calculated accordingly, took the afternoon train.

—On Monday, Henry Wandersee aged 12 years, son of F. W. Wandersee died from the effects of blood poisoning caused from a wound in the leg received during the summer. He was buried yesterday.

—Rev. Davies has closed his revival meetings at Montrose for the present. He claims several convertions and a good time generally. On Tuesday evening he visited Rev. Davis at Rockford and preached for him.

—The Eagle says there is to be talk of an artesian well in Delano. There has long been talk of one. We once heard the chief of that organ arguing that "pressure of the earth on the water caused artesian wells" several years ago.

—An interesting piece of news to most of our readers is the notice to taxpayers found in this weeks GAZETTE. Look it over and see for what and how much tax on the dollar you pay, as well as when Treasurer McKnight will smile on you as you pay up.

—The scholars in the Public schools are busily engaged in preparing speeches songs and other exercises for an entertainment to be given before the holidays. Let everybody turn out and encourage the young folks in this laudable effort. An interesting time is expected.

—Our crossing to the depot on Second Street is blockaded almost every day with one or more cars causing pedestrians to travel from one to ten more rods to get to the depot when a much shorter distance would do if a little pains were taken to keep cars off the crossing. Our village marshall might find a job in keeping the crossing clear.

—On Sunday morning about 3 A. M. a freight on the G. N. somewhere not far from Montrose broke in two and as the engine did not keep out of the way, the section of train following dashed on to the tender sending a load of oats well up on to the place where the coal ought to be and the coal into the cab where the engineer and fireman had a very narrow escape. Old 151 looked sadly demoralized on her arrival here on Sunday. The wrecking crew soon had the train in condition to move on to the city.

--W. D. Freeman favored us with a look at a sample of the late ballots used in instructing voters in Ohio, at the late election, in the mysteries of the Australian system. The ballot Mr. F. had he says is six inches smaller each way than the one used at the election. It contains five columns of names and offices and is nearly as large as a page of some of our county papers. A device at the head of each ticket aids the voter in recognizing the one of his political faith. An eagle heads the Republican party; a rooster for Democracy; a rose for Prohibition; a plow for the People's; and a soldier with fixed bayonet stands guard over the Veteran Republicans.

Persons visiting their old homes in the East this winter should take along printed matter descriptive of their new homes in the Northwest. Take copies of this paper with you and ask agents of the Great Northern Railway for a supply of publications. 8-5t,

M. A. O'Hair attended court at Buffalo this week.

Mr. Fish, of Buffalo visited Delanoites on Wednesday.

Al Rogers, teacher in the Rader district, was in town Wednesday.

William Hopkins, of Buffalo, did business in Delano on Wednesday.

William Rousch, of Howard Lake, visited Delano yesterday on business.

Miss Lizzie Rausch, of Howard Lake came down to visit old friends on Wednesday evening.

Alfred Johnson, of Traverse county, formerly of Watertown came down this morning to see the folks.

Mrs. I. H. Grafft and son Curtis left Wednesday afternoon for Indiana to spend the winter with friends.

County Cullings.

The Grand Democratic rally at Waverly, seems to be rather slow in materializing for some reason but when it does come of course it will make up for lost time.

Some of our politicians were considerably surprised at the action of Congressman J. N. Castle in supporting for speaker, Mr. Crisp, of Georgia, in preference to Mr. Mills, but J. N. comes out ahead, his man being elected.

Court is in session at the county seat this week, Judge Hooker presiding. The Grand Jury have found an indictment against the village marshall, at Monticello, for manslaughter in placing a prisoner menacled in the jail which was burned up, consuming the prisoner.

Mr. Japs has been experimenting in making sugar out of beets of his own raising, but was not successful on account of not having proper machinery. Lately he went to work manufacturing molasses and met with success. We sampled the same, it was excellent.—Carver Free Press.

The people at Rockford seem to be hard to reconcile concerning the change of Post Masters at that place. We are in receipt of a letter asking that the GAZETTE be sent "to St. Michaels instead of Rockford as I am not in accord with the change of P. M's at the latter place." We suspect some of the politicians in Rockford did not think that, indirectly, they might be working for this innovation along about last election times.

Two New Fields.

Two new fields in Uncle Sam's farm invite occupants. The Sisseton-Wahpeton reservation, in S. D., reaches from Browns Valley, Watertown and Hankinson on the Great Northern, and the Fort Berthold reservation in North Dakota, reaches from White Earth and other stations on the Great Northern. A government land office for this district was recently established at Minot, of which the well known Col. W. C. Plummer of North Dakota is receiver. The Colonel will take pleasure in giving inqurers information about the Mouse River country.

W. W. BRADEN, Land Commissioner, St. Paul Minn., will be pleased to furnish particulars concerning lands in the Park Region and Red River Valley of Minnesota, for sale at low price and on long time. Sectional maps, publications, ect., sent free.

EXCURSION tickets to the Pacific Coast, via the Great Northern Railway, on sale every day. Before you conclude on making the trip, apply or write to any agent of the Great Northern for particulars.

What Shall We Do With Our Boys?"

"WHOSE BOYS?" "Your boys; your neighbor's boys: everybody's boys." Boys will be boys, but not everyone knows how to manage them; but if you wish some practical, commonsense suggestion, read the article on the subject published in the January number of DEMOREST'S FAMILY MAGAZINE, that ideal publication which bears out to the full the promise of its name. The subject of the beautiful water-color "A Slippery Spot" appeals to every parent who has little ones, and the subtle sentiment of the exquisite full-page engraving, "Eloquent Silence" (after a painting by Alma-Tadema), will be appreciated by young men and maidens. The artistic attractions include, besides, over 200 other pictures illustrating "Burma and the Burmese," by a resident of Burma; "Evolution of Modern Costume," interesting alike to men and women; "Intelligence Offices in Paris," which will strike a responsive chord in every housekeeper's heart; "Home Art and Home Comfort," which, besides some novel ideas for fancy-work, includes a paper on "Amusements for a Sick Child"; "Correct Styles in Table Silver," an appropriate sequel to "A Course Dinner," given in a previous number; and several especially fine stories. The departments, "Our Girls," "Sanitarian," "Artistic Notes" "World's Progress," "Chat," "What Women are Doing," "Household," "Correspondence Club," and "Mirror of Fashions," each have special attractions this month; and this splendid menu, with variations, is furnished twelve times a year, for the subscription price of $2. More About Roads and Matters.

In perusing last week's Buzzard on my article in the GAZETTE of two weeks ago about Roads and Assessments in Franklin town, most people must come to the conclusion that the fellow is afflicted with softening of the brain; the cancerous body seems to be giving away!

He quotes a few lines of my article and right below twists it out of shape and gives it altogether another face. For instance he quoted from me, "that no one from the village to my knowledge has applied to the county board for an abatement of taxes," and then says, if he [meaning me] would but see he could find quite a number of applications for abatement "all around the village", where people were double assessed, etc.

Now see! "All around the village." This may mean the whole township. But this controversy was started by the Buzzard bemoaning the fact that the total taxable valuation in Delano was less than he would like to see it. (Speculators in lots and cut-throat mortgages always like to see a town boom.) Nothing was said about the township, the latter of course was certainly high enough. That intelligent county board knew how to fix the township, but they lacked the grit to fix the village. But who are those that made applications all around the village? Names are preferred to insinuations, don't be bashful, lets have names. I am aware of one case from the township, and the party who made that application would not try it again, the skulls of that intelligent board are too thick for them to see, notice, or know anything. But switching off, alone, won't satisfy my man, he introduced heavier guns, he says that real estate in Franklin had to be raised 85 per cent to make the average per acre equal with that in adjoining towns, say $9.50. Now in the first place, why had it to be? Were the adjoining towns assessed at $9.50? O no, that intelligent county board assumed the duties of the state board and raised the farmers higher than ever before the state board fixed our lands; but they reduced villages so that even the state board thought it too low and raised the villages again.

But I say in the second place that this statement the Buzzard makes is untrue; it is a barefaced lie and my man knows this too. The towns adjoining Franklin are, Woodland, Marysville and Rockford, and while Woodland has the best land in Wright County it was put in second class and Franklin with a great deal of poor land in first class; it was an outrage done for political purposes, and I know some of the parties are to-day heartily ashamed of it. Rockford and Marysville were either put in second or third class.

And now a few words about the Ziebarth selfish interests in road matters. In January 1890 the supervisors on being petitioned, laid a road along section line between Sects. 33 and 34, T. 119 where myself and the heirs of the late Theo. Ziebarth had a private road for 15 or 20 years. That private road cost us with right of way and work about $500.00. The Ziebarths donated all this to the town and about 4 acres of land besides to let the road run on to the river to the town line. In return the supervisors promised to build a bridge on said road over a creek or slough. That bridge was built this year at a cost of $205.00. but not until one of my 5 year old mares, for which I drowned on the crossing in that creek. It may sound strange to some people that such should be the case in these refused often, $175.00 was, in July, 1890, dry seasons, but at that time the water at the crossing was 8 feet deep and about 140 feet wide, and at no time of the year and low water mark the water is less than 3 feet deep and about 80 feet wide. And so the Ziebarths might for all that man cares, swim that slough for the next 20 years as they have done for the last 25 years; they may endanger their lives and the lives of their children, drown their stock, may spoil their wagons and buggies; at some seasons of the year not have a crossing crossing at all, but give that man (no I will say dog) a smooth road to Buffalo or St. Michaels, so that when he comes home "full, like a lord" he wont get under the wagon and wont need to call on Dr. Sherry for assistance.

But if the fellow meant the E. F. Ziebarth road to the brick yard, I will say that I have no interest there and never had. Ed. asked me once when I was on the board what I thought about a road through there and I gave him no encouragement. That road, and I think now that Ed. deserves it, if for no other reasons than for the courage he showed in pushing it through and the work he done voluntarily on it, I say that road was laid out by your man "Friday". I know that "Friday" dont own up to it in every particular, but I know better, ask E. F. Ziebarth about it, ask the supervisors of Franklin for the year 1890, all will tell you what a double part your man played, and besides no road has hardly ever been laid in the county where the local commissioner has opposed it, either your man "Friday" had no influence with the board or he silently favored the job, take whichever end of the horn you like.

"A Tariff on Coffee is a Tax, Unquestionably."--Senator C. K. Davis at Buffalo.

If tariff on coffee is a tax, tariff on sugar is a tax, tariff on tin is a tax, tariff on knives and pearl buttons and tariff on anything that has to be paid is tax. If you smuggle goods the tariff may be escaped, but that does not destroy the truth that TARIFF IS A TAX.

LIEUTENANT JOHN S. J. BEAN of the police force of Minneapolis one of the oldest and most reliable men in the service died last week.

J. P. FUNK has taken control of the LeSueur News, vice W. H. Hellen, gone. Mr. F. promises to run a clean readable paper. That's right. People are growing tired of reading the other kind.

THE President has sent to the Senate for their approval, the nomination of Stephen B. Elkins, of Virginia for Secretary of War. He probably knows him to be a good fighter.

FROM the Minneapolis Tribune we learn that at a special meeting of the board of City Hall and Court House commissioners held Tuesday, it was estimated that it would cost $360,000 to complete the county part of the building exclusive of towers. They will have to hurry up matters. It wont look well to the Republican Convention folks to see the thing at a standstill.

Tariff Pictures.

"Farmers, the free trade orator tells you that the wicked tariff robs you by encouraging the binding twine trust. Maybe he knows that the average price of four grades of binding twine has fallen from 12.75 cents a pound in 1890 to 8.06 cents in 1891, but he isn't going to dwell on the fact. You must study the facts for yourselves when free trade orators indulge in glittering generalities.—N. Y. Press.

Does not every farmer in Minnesota remember what a fight for the placing of binding twine on the free list our Senator, C. K. Davis made? What a strong speach he made in Congress for this purpose and how the G. O. P. finally made a reduction but would not yield up the protection theory by placing it on the free list. And now in the face of this reduction of the tariff they claim credit of saving it to the farmers on binding twine. How about the increase on woolens, on cutlery, on tin, on crockery and other articles? Do they desire to have the farmer believe that lowering the tariff on one article is a saving while raising it higher on another article cheapens it? They act as if they thought the farmer would believe anything they told him. We guess not.

Punishing Ourselves.

The McKinley act confers upon the President of the United States power over the revenue of the country, over its commercial relations, and over prices in every domestic market, such as no soverign in Europe, except the autocrat of all the Russias possesses. This power is contained in the following paragraph of the McKinley bill:

"On and after the 1st day of January, 1892, whenever and so often as the President shall be satisfied that the Government of any country producing and exporting sugars, molasses, coffee, tea, and hides, raw or uncured, or any ot such articles, imposes duties or other exactions upon the agricultural or other products of the United States, which, in view of the free introduction of such sugar, molasses, coffee, tea, and hides into the United States, he may deem to be reciprocally unequal and unreasonable, he shall have the power and it shall be his duty, to suspend, by proclamation to that effect, the free introduction of such sugar, molasses, coffee, tea and hides, the production of such country, for such time as he shall deem just, etc."

If by the first of January, a few weeks hence, we have not made a satisfactory arrangement with Brazil, the President is not only authorized, but he is instructed, to exclude from our markets, by a duty that under the circumstances is prohibitory, Brazilian sugars, molasses, coffees and hides.

The effect of this, of course, would be greatly to the advantage of these articles coming from other sections. If applied to Cuba, for instance, it would enable the Sandwich Islands and other countries from which we draw sugar to add to the natural price of their product this duty, which the consumers of sugar would have to pay.

The folly of this whole arrangement is seen when we understand that this duty is not paid by the countries we are trying to punish, but by the American consumers of sugar. Suppose, for instance, that we should fail to make an arrangement with Cuba entirely satisfactory to ourselves, and the President should by proclamation impose the old duties on sugar, this would increase the price of this article, and the increased price would be paid by the American consumer. If he should reimpose the duty on hides in this market, and the increased price would be paid by the American consumer.

There is nothing more delusive in international relations than the idea that we can punish another nation by taxing ourselves. The tariff is a tax, a tax paid by the consumers for the taxed article. It may be very foolish for Cuba or Brazil to refuse to admit our goods free, but it would be still more foolish for us to surrender free sugar and free hides as a means of punishing these countries.

The idea underlying this whole paragraph is the idea prevailing throughout the world during the dark ages, but it has long been abandoned by every intelligent legislator, and is only revived by demagogues and others who are trying to mislead the people.—Courier Journal.

SPRINGER'S IDEA.

The Illinoisan Outlines a Policy on the Tariff.

WATHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Mr. Springer, of Illinois, who is likely to be chairman of the ways and means committee, if Mr. Mills should be offered and decline the honor, said today that his policy with reference to the tariff was to provide for free wool, free salt, free lumber, free cotton ties, free coal and free binding twine. He said:

"I do not think we should attempt a general revision of the tariff at this time. We should offer the country relief by passing bills for putting articles named on the free list and sending them to the senate. A general tariff bill cannot be enacted into law and would keep congress here until October. I think there should be appointed a strong committee on manufactures, with able investigators on it. It should consist of fifteen members, ten Democrats and five Republicans. This would make five sub-committees of three each. They should divide the work, one investigating textile industries, another iron production, another glassware and pottery, and so on

"This committee would be a sort of adjunct to the ways and means committee, which could go on with its work and then subsequently get all the testimony without a long list of hearings. These subcommittees could go on during the session and also during the recess. Their inquiries should not be conducted with a spirit of hostility toward the manufactures, but with a view to ascertain the bottom facts and ascertain in each case what, if any degree of protection is needed, as I have a suspicion that frequently it is represented that they need a great deal more protection than is really the case.

"It should be ascertained what is the labor cost on things produced, the wages paid, whether the work be steady or not, the profits on actual capital and not on "watered" stock, the relative cost of production here and abroad, wether there are tacit or direct agreements to limit production, and much more information of a practical character. This information is not now to be had. The party could then fight the McKinley bill, and if we win in the elections this information would enable us to form a tariff bill adapted to the country's needs and one that could become a law, and we will pass it in the Fifty-third congress. If we fail in the elections, then the information has been obtained and we can keep on until the country is educated against the McKinley bill."—St. Paul Globe.

CASTLE AND HIS BILL.

He'll Reach to the Bottom of the Pork Barrel.

Special Dispatch to the Times.

WASHINGTON, D, C., Dec. 14—Congressman Castle has prepared "three little bills" which he will introduce in the house on the first opportunity. He will modestly ask congress for $850,000 for Minnesota public buildings—$700,000 for St. Paul. $100,000 for Stillwater, and $50,000 for Anoka. It is whispered that the northwest will be well represented on both the house and senate public building committees, and Castle hopes to get something out of the pork barrel.

A Vermont man went hunting on Sunday. He came home with a bad wound. He had an accident policy but the company would not pay. The matter was taken to the courts. The courts have decided that the man is not entitled to recovery, as he was violating the laws when hurt.—Prospect Monitor, Ohio.

HELP THE STARVING RUSSIANS.

We are in receipt of one of Governor Merriam's letters, enclosing "An appeal to the people of Minnesota!" or help for the starving thousands of helpless men, women and children in Russia. He quotes from a recent writer in the Illustrated American.

"In one village of 150 families, forty-seven people died of hunger in a fortnight. Reports of terrible sufferings come also from the province of Tambow. Travelers say that all along the railroad, and especially around the stations, are crowds of thousands--gaunt, hungry, dying. They have abandoned their homes, where the last crumb has been eaten, and have flocked in despair to the railroad, recognizing in it the one link that unites them with the prosperous world outside. There they beg piteously of all passengers, and there they are dying and being buried by their dying comrades where they fall. In Samara only two per cent of the people have a winter's supply of food and more than one-third of the inhabitants are absolutely destitute."

The Governor has designated as a committee to recieve contributions of flour, wheat, rye and other bread stuffs, Messrs. W. C. Edgar and Charles MacC. Reeve, of Minneapolis, and George B. Evans, of St. Paul.

The Governor calls upon the people of the State to donate liberally, not forgetting that Russia befriended us in time of our dire distress, we are abundantly able, and the blessings of a divine Providence will be our reward.

CORRESPONDENCE

ANNANDALE.

Rev. Mr. Higgins met with a mishap Monday evening; he was riding his broncho and as the road was muddy veined out into the grass ground to avoid the mud and the animal made a misstep or slipped and fell upon the elder's right leg, severely injuring the ankle. He was picked up and carried to Dr. Ridgway's office, where the injury was attended to by the doctor. The doctor says he will not be able to use that foot for a week or two.

The bricklayers and plasterers at work upon Mr. Rennie's store have industriously improved the mild weather of the last few days.

Dr. Ridgway made a trip to Minneapolis last Tuesday on business.

Will D. McDonald who we reported as on the sick list last week, we are glad to see, is out again attending to business.

Noah Ritchie who was kicked in the face by a horse a week ago last Sunday is out again with a face somewhat disfigured but it is a good deal better than no face.

The young man whose harelip was operated upon by Dr. Ridgway several days ago shows up nearly every day to have it dressed, and if it heals up as good as it looks now and his moustache grows out again he will have lip enough for most any of the girls.

The safe thing to do is to pass every body civilly, regardless of what our private opinion of them may be.

Dalbow & Thayer have commenced the erection of a storehouse for agricultural and other implements, which they deal in, adjoining their hardware store. Nylen & Carlson are doing the work.

Desire Lenoir of the Annandale House is making quite an addition to his barn, making it, when done, quite commodious.

Mr. M. R. Williams, our popular young druggist, takes a turn to Minneapolis this week, presumably to replentish his stock of Xmas goods.

REMEMBER THE CHILDREN AT CHRISTMAS.

ROCKFORD.

A geographical lecture was delivered to a large and appreciative audience last Thursday evening by Prof. Niles, of St. Paul. This is one of a series of lectures the school has been having. Thus far they have been a success, proving not only instructive but entertaining.

It has been decided to have the union Christmas tree at the G. A. R. Hall on Christmas Eve. Everybody is invited to participate in the arrangements and exercises and a good time is sure.

Dame rumor has it that a quiet wedding is to take place in the village in the near future.

Mrs. S. Ames is suffering with the neuralgia.

A number of Rockford's young men were caught out in the rain storm Sunday night. Don't go so far next time boys.

There was a dance in the "Centennial Hall" last Saturday night. Only a few attended.

Sam Thompson started for Minneapolis with a load of pork, poultry, etc. Thursday a. m. but was obliged to return. Pretty rough, wasn't it Sam?

The skating is very good now and the young people are out nearly every evening enjoying it.

Wm. Gent is limping around some. A cow knocked him down and fell on him.

Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Waren left Wednesday morning for Illinois to visit relatives for a few weeks.

W. B. Spray, proprietor of the Centennial Hotel will give a grand ball and supper in his hall New Years night, Friday, Jan. 1. A large number of people from the neighboring towns are expected. Everybody is cordially invited we are sure you will enjoy the occasion if you come.

WATERTOWN.

On account of the rain Monday the fair was poorly attended.

Mr. Joe Warta, of St. Paul, spent Monday and Tuesday in Watertown on business.

Mr. Albert Matson is on the sick list.

A call for the independent voters of the village of Watertown has been posted. The meeting is to be held at Ray & Burks Hotel on Monday evening, Dec. 21 to place in nomination the village officers for the next year.

Rev. B. E. Sherwin organized an Epworth League at the M. E. church last Thursday evening with Mrs. B. E. Sherwin as its president and Miss Jadwin as secretary. There were 13 charter members.

The Lienau Concert company with Mr. O. L. Lienau, tenor, Emil Straka, violin virtuose, Louis Milch, cello virtuose, Mrs. Milch, piano virtuose, and Lottie May, the phenominal child soprano 12 years of age will give a concert at the City Hall in Watertown on the evening of Dec. 29.1891. Mr. Lienou's company needs no recommendation in this vicinity as everybody knows them to be a first class musical company and will give a first class musical concert. See posters.

INDEPENDENCE.

Nothing preventing there will be a Christmas tree in the Independence A. C. church Thursday evening, 24th of the present month. Come everybody and bring your correspondent a present.

We understand Maple Plain will have a tree Christmas too. Let us meet and have a social time with friends and neighbors.

Rev. O. R. Fassett, of Rockford, filled appointment at Independence A. C. church last Sunday forenoon, Elder Potter being on the sick list, and unable to fill his appointment. There were others over from Rockford also. Elder Fassett's preaching sounded natural.

Armstrong has taken a boom in way of church building. The Methodists and Advents are intending to build each of them a house for worship. That is a step in the right direction. Let the good work go on. It is not likely they will be built for show but for comfort. We hope that neither will give up the enterprise. Too many of our ministers and cargoes of whisky for ballast are going to heathen lands. Soon we will have to import some for home industry but then how could we afford to pay the protective duty. Admitting them free you know would injure the preaching business in this country.

Many of the husbandmen of Independence attended the monthly stock fair at Delano last Saturday. The fair was well represented from all parts of the adjacent country and so were the saloons. Looking at things from a human standpoint we are lost in wonder but from a bibical standpoint we are not surprised but why is all this prodigal waste? In politics have never been anything but a Simon pure Democrat but if ever I leave its ranks will go straight for the Prohibition. The New York Voice a leading Prohibition paper, is a welcome visitor to my house every week; find it full of good reading matter. I like to peruse its pages; hope to find something in it that will do me good. I believe in legislating for the greatest number to the greatest amount of good.

It seems like our winter weather has gone back on us. The rain of Sunday night and Monday will make bad roads for us again. Never remember seeing so much rain in the winter time in this country before.

Most every body has a spare rib now, not the kind Adam had but of the hog species.

C. R. Gould started for the pinery Monday morning.

Your correspondent has been taking lots of comfort of late with an ulcerated tooth. It is something no doctor can cure but it cuts my nerves like a knife.

Mrs. E. K. Smith has a brand new organ. It was a present from her mother, Mrs. Conkey.

Last Wednesday a few of the neighbors got E. K. Smith up quite a wood pile.

James Yancy has sold his farm in Sec. 16 to Albert Stoteron. Have not learned the consideration or purchase price. Mr. Yancy will locate in Minneapolis among green pustures and waving flowers.

JOHN H. MCGARY.

The Chilian Affair.

VALPARAISO, Dec. 15.—Judge of Crimes, Foster is said to be preparing his finding on the case of the Baltimore sailors. No public statement has been made about it, but it is reported that it will exculpate the Chilian police, charge the Americans with having provoked the encounter through drunkeness, and impose nominal penalties on a few insignificant Chilians arrested in connection with the affray. Chilians here assume in advance that the result will be atisfactory to the United States.—Minneapolis Tribune.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11, 1891.

Mr. Harrison's annual message to Congress is a strong bid for renomination at the hands of his party, and all that now remains to make his nomination certain is that Mr. Blaine shall write that letter which the public has for a year or more been periodically informed that he was just on the eve of writing, declaring that he will under no circumstances accept the nomination. He may or may not write such a letter; just now it is again positively stated that he will do so in a few days

The only part of the message deserving of the slightest commendation is that dealing with the several foreign complications which have occurred during the past year. The rest of it with one or two exceptions is worthy only of the condemnation of those who believe in Democratic ideas of the administration of the Government. He strongly endorses the Government guarantee of the $100,000,000. of bonds which ex-Senator Warner Miller estimates as necessary to build the Nicaragua canal; he wants to interfere with the soverign rights of a state as lately exercised by the Michigan legislature, by the adoption of a constitutional amendment providing a method for the election of members of Congress and the electoral college—Constitutional amendments have always been a Republican fad; he proves that Senator Gorman and the other Democratic leaders have been right in asserting that the notorious Force bill was not dead, bur only temporarily shelved by lamenting the failure to pass that bill and proposing that an "8 to 7" commission be appointed by the Supreme Court for the purpose of considering the "evils connected with our election system." This is a wily attempt on the part of Mr. Harrison to get a partisan commission appointed that would report in favor of the enactment of a law similar in all respects to the Force bill, but the Democratic party has been tricked by one "8 to 7" commission and is not likely to be caught in the same trap a second time The principal "evil" in our election system, in Mr. Harrison's mind is that Democrats are elected where he wishes Republicans to be elected: if that could be reversed he would consider the system perfect.

Mr. Harrison naively informs an overtaxed country that the commissioner of pensions, after a careful examination of the subject, is of the opinion that the estimate of $144,956,000. which is included in the annual report of the Secretary of the Interior, will be sufficient to pay the pensions for the year ending June 30, 1893.

In order to give Speaker Crisp an opportunity to devote some time to the very important work of making the committee assignments the House adjourned from Wednesday to Saturday with the understanding that it would then adjourn to the following Wednesday. Even if he devotes his time entirely to the subject it is hardly probable that Speaker Crisp will be able to announce the committees before the Christmas recess.

The first bill introduced in the Senate was that prepared by Superintendent Porter, providing for a permanent census bureau. Mr. Harrison does not mention this subject in his message.

There has been a good deal of nonsense written about the election of Speaker shutting out a prominent candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination. The National convention only, has authority to settle that question.

If Jerry Simpson does not catch the Speaker's eye as often as he wishes, it will not be because of his location, as he has secured a seat in the very front row. Jerry has not recovered yet from his disappointment at the small vote his candinate for Speaker received. He thinks that instead of 8 the Alliance candidate should have had about 40 votes.

The meeting of the executive committee of the National Democratic Committee here early this week was an important event for the party and a very pleasant event for those who attended it. January 21, 1895, was the date set for the assembling of the full committee in Washington, for the purpose of naming the time and place for holding the next National convention of the party. The time for holding the convention will probably be about the first week in July, but the place is as yet a matter of doubt.

Representative Mills characterises as absurd the rumor that he intended to resign. That he is disappointed he does not deny, but the idea of resigning has never occured to him. He is not that kind of a man, and unless the Governor of Texas shall call a special session of the legislature of that State, which shall elect Mr. Mills Senator, to fill the unexpired term of Senator Reagan, there is every probability that Mr. Mills will serve out his term in the House, although it will not be surprising if he should decline to again assume the responsibility and hard work of chairman of the Ways and Means committee.

CONGRESS will probably do nothing of consequence until after the Christmas holidays.

GEO. VANDERBILT expects to spend $1,000,000 a year upon his new chateau in North Carolina until it is completed, which will not be for ten years to come.

THE freight car famine, caused by the great plethora of grain, continues. Not only is there a tie-up at each of the great railroad centers, but every small distributing point has also its full share.

YOUNG Lord Russell, whose domestic difficulties are now the sensation of London, wooed and won his wife in the guise of a mechanic, while supervising some electrical work at her mother's house.

THERE are 250,483 Indians in the United States, exclusive of Alaska, this ennumeration including bucks, squaws and papooses. The available force for fighting is 50,000, only one-half of whom are warlike.

BRET HARTE is in London and will probably never return to this country. His hair is snowy white, but he still retains all his old fire. The author of "The Heathen Chinee" and "The Luck of Roaring Camp," is only fifty-three.

PAUL DU CHAILLU says that whenever in the forests of Africa he encountered a gorilla his life hung on a slender thread, for either he or the gorilla had to die. Inasmuch as the genial traveler is still alive it seems likely that he gave a quietus to more than one of the big apes.

THE orange crop of California has become so large that it can not be marketed at paying prices. Thousands of acres of the land of California are now bearing young lemon trees. The olive and fig crops of the state are now profitable. Experiments in the raising of Ceylon tea in Southern California will soon be tried.

A GERMAN resident on the Isthmus of Panama claims to have discovered large beds of pearl oysters in the Carribbean sea, on the coast above Colon. He is arranging for expert pearl divers to do some experimental fishing, and he expects to develop with the beds the fact that he has something more valuable than a gold mine.

GOV. JOHN. P. BUCHANAN, of Tennessee, who has had a little more than he could do for some time past in dealing with the convict miners of his state, is a tall, blonde man, ruddy of face, with blue eyes and light hair. He wears a long mustache and goatee. He is a self-made man, once a farm boy, and is a fine type of the educated granger.

THE New York Tribune says that for 126 days since July 1 the receipts of wheat in that city have averaged more than a million bushels daily, and for three months past the receipts have exceeded 1,200,000 bushels daily. The Tribune also presents figures showing that at nine western wheat markets the receipts during the last five months have exceeded the entire receipts during the years 1888, 1889 or 1890.

STATISTICS show that out of 978,161 freight cars in the United States (in spite of which there is a freight car famine), 129,304 are equipped with automatic couplers, and 110,127 have train brakes. Notwithstanding, in the year 1890, no less than 2,451 brakemen were killed and 22,390 maimed, indicating that the demand for the improvement of all freight cars in use is a pressing one.

CYRUS W. FIELD is one of the few Americans who have a standing acquaintance with Queen Victoria. Mr. Field's part in the laying of the early Atlantic cables obtained for him a presentation to the queen that meant rather more than such things usually mean, and the acquaintance of many years ago has been kept up by occasional meetings and communications of one kind or another.

THE coal production of the United States last year was 140,000,000 tons, or over two tons for each inhabitant. Our coal area is more than three times that of the rest of the world combined. Our population has doubled since 1860, while the coal production of 1890 was nine times that of 1860. West Virginia alone has a greater area of coal fields than England, yet England last year mined 30,000,000 more tons of coal than the whole United States.

ANOTHER prospective queen of England is now in view, a wife having been selected for Prince Albert Victor, oldest son of the prince of Wales. The bride-elect is Victoria Mary, oldest child of the duke and duchess of Teck, born May 26, 1867. Prince Albert Victor was born January 8, 1864. The mother of the princess thus chosen to share the throne of England is Princess Mary Adelaide, of Cambridge, daughter of the duke of Cambridge, and Queen Victoria's favorite cousin.

A GERMAN authority states that four-fifths of the steam engines of the world have been constructed within the last quarter of a century. The total horse power of these engines is estimated at 49,000,000, of which the United States takes the lead with 7,500,000 horse power, Great Britain 7,000,000, Germany 4,500,000, France 3,000,000 and Austria 1,500,000. Considering that the horse power of an engine is equivalent on an average to the power of seven men, the world's steam engines represent the energy of 1,000,000,000 men, or double the number of workers in the world.

A MISSIONARY who has been in Bengal for some time has been doing the opium dens in the town of Rampore Banaeah. Most of the smokers he saw belonged to the laboring classes. With one accord the smokers told him that the drug dried up their bodies and that their craving for it was such that they could not give it up. Many of the dens have one hundred patrons a day. The missionary says opium smoking in India is bringing ruin and degradation upon innumerable families, and he accuses the British government of fostering this demoralizing habit in that country.

FIFTY-SECOND CONGRESS.

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 9.—The president's message was read in the senate. No business was transacted. In the house the message of the president was read. A resolution was offered requesting the speaker to appoint the committees of the house among the several states according to population and that each state receive at least one chairmanship. Adjourned to the 12th.

THURSDAY, Dec. 10.—Bills were introduced in the senate for the free coinage of gold and silver bullion; for the removal of the remains of Ulysses S. Grant to Arlington cemetery; for the election of senators by the people; to revive the grade of lieutenant general of the United States; to prevent the sale of arms to Indians; to suspend the coming of Chinese laborers to the United States; to reduce letter postage to one cent; to establish postal-savings banks; providing for an income tax to pay pensions; to make the presidential term end April 30 instead of March 4, and making the president ineligible for a second term. Adjourned to the 14th. The house was not in session.

SATURDAY, Dec. 12.—The session of the house was merely a formal one. The speaker announced the appointment of the following committees: On accounts, Messrs. Rusk (Md.), Cooper (Ind.), Dickerson (Ky.), Moore (S. C.), Seerley (Ia.), Pearson (O.), Quackenbush (N. Y.), Grisworld (Pa.) and Cutting (Cal.). On mileage, Messrs. Castle (Minn.), Crawford (N. C.), Kendall (Ky.), Caldwell (O.) and Flick (Ia.). Adjourned to the 16th.

FROM WASHINGTON.

THE value of our exports of merchandise during the twelve months ended September 30 was $923,091,136, against $860,177,115 for the previous twelve months, an increase of $62,914,027.

DURING the last fiscal year the coinage of the mints was the largest in the history of this country, aggregating 119,547,877 pieces, valued at $63,611,159.35.

LATER.

Mail Robbery.

CHICAGO, Dec. 15.—Jesse James' exploits were outdone to-night in Chicago. In one of the leading thoroughfares five daring highwaymen suddenly surrounded one of Uncle Sam's biggest mail wagons, and at revolver point forced the postal employe to throw out several sacks.

The bulky government veeicle was then sent flying on its journey, the occupants being threatened with instant death if they made outcry or stopped. So complete was the surprise effected by the bandits that the mail drivers failed to ut ilize the services of a large bulldog which was beside them on their seat. Near midnight the stolen mail sacks, slit open and rifled of their contents were found on Superior street, in the north division of the city, fully three miles from the scene of the robbery.

An inventory has been made of the contents of the wagon, and it is found that the two registered mail pouches from the Stock Yards station and that from the Southern station and the Blue Island Avenue station are missing. The value of the contents the officials were unable to determine, but it was known to be heavy.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Comprehensive Synopsis of This Important Document.

Reciprocity, Our Relations with Italy, Chili and Other Foreign Nations—The Michigan Electoral Method—Other Domestic Questions.

COMMUNICATED TO CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—President Harrison submitted his third annual message to congress at noon to-day.

The State Department.

Referring to the work of the state department during the last year he says that it has been characterized by an unusual number of important negotiations and by diplomatic results of a notable and highly beneficial character. Among these are the reciprocal trade arrangements which have been concluded with the republic of Brazil, with Spain for its West India possessions and with San Domingo. Like negotiations with other countries have been much advanced, and it is hoped that before the close of the year further definite trade arrangements of great value will be concluded.

The Behring Sea Fisheries.

Alluding to the long pending controversy between this country and Great Britain, over the Behring sea seal fisheries, the president announces that terms of arbitration satisfactory to this government have been agreed upon, and that an agreement as to the arbitrators is all that is necessary to the completion of the convention.

Open Ports for Pork Products.

The president congratulates the country on the effective working of the law of the last congress providing a system of inspection for our meat intended for export, and states that Germany, Denmark, Italy, Austria and France have opened their ports to imported American pork products.

Referring to the lynching at New Orleans in March last of eleven men of Italian nationality by a mob of citizens, the president deplores the unhappy affair, and states that the temporary absence of the minister plenipotentiary of Italy at this capital has retarded further correspondence between this government and the government of Italy, but he does not doubt that a friendly conclusion is attainable.

The Chilian Imbroglio.

The president reviews the late civil war in Chili at some length, touches briefly upon the seizure, escape and surrender of the Itata, and says: "The instructions to our naval officers and to our minister at Santiago, from the first to the last of the Chilian war, enjoined upon them the most impartial treatment and absolute non-interference. I am satisfied that these instructions were observed and that our representatives were always watchful to use their influence impartially in the interests of humanity, and on more than one occasion did so effectively. No official complaint of the conduct of our minister or of our naval officers during the struggle has been presented to this government." Continuing, the president details at length the attack on the sailors of the Baltimore in Valparaiso on October 16, resulting in the death of two seamen and the serious injury of seven or eight others, and says: "The attention of the Chilian government was at once called to this affair, and a statement of the facts obtained by the investigation we had conducted was submitted, accompanied by a request to be advised of any other or qualifying facts in the possession of the Chilian government that might tend to relieve this affair of the appearance of an insult to this government. The Chilian government was also advised that if such qualifying facts did not exist this government would confidently expect full and prompt reparation. It is to be regretted that the reply of the secretary for foreign affairs of the provisional government was couched in an offensive tone. To this no response has been made. This government is now awaiting the report of an investigation which has been conducted by the criminal court at Valparaiso. It is reported unofficially that the investigation is about completed, and it is expected that the result will soon be communicated to this government, together with some adequate and satisfactory response to the note by which the attention of Chili was called to this incident. If these just expectations should be disappointed or further heedless delay intervene, I will, by special messsage, bring this matter again to the attention of congress for such action as may be necessary."

The Nicaragua Canal.

Referring to the Nicaragua canal, the president says: "I deem it to be a matter of the highest concern to the United States, that this canal, connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans and giving to us a short water communication between our ports upon those two great seas, should be speedily constructed and at the smallest practicable limit of cost. The gain in freights to the people, and the direct saving to the government of the United States in the use of its naval vessels, would pay the entire cost of this work within a short series of years." The president suggests that the bonds of the canal company be guaranteed by the United States government, and says: "A guaranty of the bonds of the canal company to the amount necessary to the completion of the canal could, I think, be so given as not to involve any serious risk of ultimate loss."

International Copyright.

The president refers briefly to the securing of an international copyright treaty.

The Tariff.

Coming to the tariff the message continues: "The general interest in the operations of the treasury department has been much augmented during the last year by reason of the conflicting predictions which accompanied and followed the tariff and other legislation of the last congress affecting revenues as to the result of this legislation upon the treasury and upon the country. It is not my purpose to enter at any length into a discussion of the legislation to which I have referred, but a brief examination of the statistics of the treasury and a general glance at the state of business throughout the country will, I think, satisfy any impartial inquirer that its results have disappointed the evil prophesies of its opponents and in a large measure realized the hopeful predictions of its friends."

The president then goes on to show that in twelve months ended September 30, 1891, the total value of our foreign commerce (imports and exports combined) was $1,747,806,406, which was the largest in the history of the United States by over $100,000,000. The imports during the period named were $11,000,000 in excess of those for the twelve months preceding. "If we turn," says the president, "to exports of merchandise the statistics are full of gratification. The value of such exports of merchandise for the twelve months ending September 30, 1891, was $923,091,136, while for the corresponding previous twelve months it was $860,177,115, an increase of $62,914,021, which is nearly three times the average annual increase of exports of merchandise during any year in the history of the government. There is certainly nothing in the condition of trade—foreign or domestic—there is nothing in the condition of our people of any class, to suggest that the existing tariff and revenue legislation bears oppressively upon the people or retards the commercial development of the nation. I think there are conclusive evidences that the new tariff has created several great industries which will, within a few years, give employment to several hundred thousand American workmen and women. In view of the somewhat overcrowded condition of the labor market of the United States, every patriotic citizen should rejoice at such a result."

The Silver Question.

Referring to the silver question the president says: "I am still of the opinion that the free coinage of silver under existing conditions would disastrously affect our business interests at home and abroad. We could not hope to maintain an equality in the purchasing power of the gold and silver dollar in our own markets, and in foreign trade the stamp gives no added value to the bullion contained in coins. The producers of the country, its farmers and laborers, have the highest interest that every dollar, paper or coin, issued by the government shall be as good as any other. If there is one less valuable than another its sure and constant errand will be to pay them for their toil and for their crops. To place business upon a silver basis would mean a sudden and severe contraction of the currency, by the withdrawal of gold and gold notes, and such an unsettling of all values as would produce a commercial panic. I cannot believe that a people so strong and prosperous as ours will promote such a policy. I believe it is the earnest desire of a great majority of the people, as it is mine, that a full coin use shall be made of silver just as soon as the cooperation of other nations can be secured and a ratio fixed that will give circulation equally to gold and silver. The business of the world requires the use of both metals, but I do not see any prospect of gain, but much of loss by giving up the present system, in which a full use is made of gold and a large use of silver, for one in which silver alone will circulate. Such an event would be at once fatal to the further progress of the silver movement."

The Surplus.

Referring to the withdrawal of the large cash surplus in the treasury and the applying of it to the redemption of interest-bearing securities of the United States, instead of depositing it in selected national banks, it has been so gradual, the president declares, as not to unduly disturb business interests.

Shore Defenses.

The only passage of general interest in the president's reference to the war department is his statement urging the pressing necessity for shore defenses to cooperate with the navy in time of war.

Unlawful Entry of Chinese.

The unlawful entry of Chinese into the United States through Canada is made the subject of a long paragraph. The president reaches the conclusion that the great extent of our frontier renders it practically impossible to exclude the celestials as long as the Canadian government profits to the extent of $50 per head on each Chinamen who enters its territory. The inference is plain. Legislation to remedy this state of things is recommended.

The Agricultural Department.

If the establishment of the department of agriculture was regarded by anyone as a mere concession to the unenlightened demand of a worthy class of people, that impression has been most effectually removed by the great results already attained. Its home influence has been very great in disseminating agricultural and horticultural information; in stimulating and directing a further diversification of crops; in detecting and eradicating diseases of domestic animals; and more than all, in the close and informal contact which it has established and maintained with the farmers and stock raisers of the whole country. Every request for information has had prompt attention and every subject merited consideration. The scientific corps of the department is of a high order and is pushing its investigations with method and enthusiasm.

Our Great Grain Crop.

The grain crop of this year was the largest in our history, 50 per cent. greater than that of last year, and yet the new markets that have been opened and the large demand resulting from short crops in Europe have sustained prices to such an extent that the enormous surplus of meats and breadstuffs will be marketed at good prices, bringing relief and prosperity to an industry that was much depressed. The value of the grain crop of the United States is estimated by the secretary to be this year $500,000,000 more than last; of meats, $150,000,000 more, and of all products of the farm $750,000,000 more. It is not inappropriate, I think, here to suggest that our satisfaction in the contemplation of this marvelous addition to the national wealth is unclouded by any suspicion of the currency by which it is measured and in which the farmer is paid for the product of his fields.

The Postal Service.

In the report of the postmaster general some very gratifying results are exhibited and many betterments of the service suggested. A perusal of the report gives abundant evidence that the supervision and direction of the postal system have been characterized by an intelligent and conscientious desire to improve the service. The revenues of the department show an increase of over $5,000,000, while the estimate for the year 1893 shows a surplus of receipts over expenditures. Ocean mail post offices has been established upon the steamers of the North German Lloyd and Hamburg lines, saving, by the distribution on shipboard, from two to fourteen hours time in the delivery of mail at the port of entry and often much more than this in the delivery at interior places. So thoroughly has this system, initiated by Germany and the United States, evidenced its usefulness, that it cannot be long before it is installed upon all the great ocean mail-carrying steamships.

Eight thousand miles of new postal service have been established upon railroads, the car distribution to sub-stations in the great cities has been increased about 12 per cent., while the percentage of errors in distribution has, during the past year, been reduced over one-half.

Rural Free Delivery.

An appropriation was given by the last congress for the purpose of making some experiments in free delivery in the smaller cities and towns. The results of these experiments have been so satisfactory that the postmaster general recommends, and I concur in the recommendation, that the free delivery system be at once extended to towns of 5,000 population.

Ocean Mail Post Offices.

Reference is made to the gratifying success of the ocean mail post offices established upon the steamships of the North German Lloyd and Hamburg lines, by which letters are delivered, upon their arrival in port, from two to fourteen hours earlier than under the old system. Eight thousand miles of new postal service have been established upon railroads and the car distribution to sub-stations in great cities has been increased twelve per cent. The president hopes to see American vessels carrying the mails in the near future.

New Warships.

The report of the secretary of the navy shows a gratifying increase of new naval vessels in commission. The Newark, Concord, Bennington and Minneapolis have been added during the year, and an aggregate of something more than 11,000 tons. Twenty-four warships of all classes are now under construction in the navy yards and private shops, but while the work upon them is going forward satisfactorily the completion of the more important vessels will yet require about a year's time. Some of the vessels now under construction, it is believed, will be triumphs of naval engineering. When it is recollected that the work of building a modern navy was only initiated in the year 1883, that our naval constructors and shipbuilders were practically without experience in the construction of large iron or steel ships, that our engine shops were unfamiliar with great marine engines and that the manufacture of steel forgings for guns and plates was almost wholly a foreign industry, the progress that has been made is not only highly satisfactory, but furnishes the assurance that the United States will before long attain, in the construction of vessels, with their engines and armaments, the same preeminence which it attained when the best instrument of ocean commerce was the clipper ship and the most impressive exhibit of naval power the old wooden three-decker man of war.

I commend to your favorable consideration the recommendation of the secretary, who has, I am sure, given to them the most conscientious study. There should be no hesitation in promptly completing a navy of the best modern type, large enough to enable this country to display its flag in all seas for the protection of its citizens and its extending commerce.

The Indian Question.

Indian affairs are referred to at great length. The president declares that the provision of school facilities for Indian children and the settlement of Indian adults upon farms are the two factors which will settle the entire "Indian question." He believes that the Sioux had some cause for their outbreak last winter in the way of insufficient rations and the delay of the government in fulfilling its engagements with them. It was necessary to reduce them to submission, however, and Gen. Miles is given high praise for the manner in which he performed this duty. The president strongly disapproves of the continuance of the independent governments of the civilized tribes in the Indian territory, and believes that the allotment of lands in severalty should be commenced as soon as possible.

Pensions.

The administration of the pension bureau has been characterized during the year by great diligence. The total number of pensioners upon the roll on the 30th day of June, 1891, was 676,160. There were allowed during the fiscal year ending at that time, 250,565 cases. Of this number, 102,387 were allowed under the law of June 27, 1890. The issuing of certificates has been proceeding at the rate of about 30,000 per month, about 75 per cent. of these being cases under the new law. The commissioner expresses the opinion that he will be able to carefully adjudicate and allow 340,000 claims during the present fiscal year. The appropriation for the payment of pensions for the fiscal year 1890-91 was $127,685,793.89 and the amount expended $118,520,649.25, leaving an unexpended surplus of $9,155,144.64. The commissioner is quite confident that there will be no call this year for a deficiency appropriation, notwithstanding the rapidity with which the work is being pushed. The mistake which has been made by many in their exaggerated estimates of the cost of pensions is in not taking account of the diminished value of first payments under recent legislation. These payments under the general law have been for many years very large, as the pensions, when allowed, dated from the time of lifting the claim, and most of these claims had been pending for years. The first payments under the law of June 30, 1890, are relatively small, and, as the per cent. of these cases increases and that of the old cases diminishes, the annual aggregate of first payments is largely reduced. The commissioner, under date of November 13, furnished me with the statement that during the first four months 113,175 certificates were issued, 27,863 under the general law and 75,282 under the act of June 27, 1890. The average first payment during these four months was $131.85, while the average first payment upon cases allowed during the year ending June 30, 1891, was $232.35, being a reduction in the average first payments during these four months of $107.48. The estimate for pension expenditures for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1893, is $144,956,000; which, after a careful examination of the subject, the commissioner is of the opinion will be sufficient. While these disbursements to the disabled soldiers of the great civil war are large, they do not realize the exaggerated estimates of those who oppose this beneficent legislation. The secretary of the interior shows with great fulness the care that is taken to exclude fraudulent claims, and also the gratifying fact that the persons to whom these pensions are going are men who rendered, not slight, but substantial, war service.

Government for Alaska.

I recommend that provision be made for the organization of a simple form of town government in Alaska with power to regulate such matters as are usually in the states under municipal control.

Brief Notices.

The railroad commission, the census bureau and the Mormon question each come in for a brief notice, nothing particularly striking being advanced.

The report of the civil service commission is dismissed in a brief paragraph without recommendation other than one for an appropriation for working expenses.

Michigan Electoral Method.

In regard to the new method, adopted in Michigan, of choosing presidential electors, the president, after reviewing the practice that has obtained in all the states hitherto, says: "That this concurrence should now be broken is, I think, an unfortunate and even threatening episode, and one that may well suggest whether states that still give their approval to the old and prevailing method ought not to secure by a constitutional amendment a practice which has the approval of all." Gerrymandering the president characterizes as "political robbery."

Federal Elections Bill.

The president refers to the federal elections bill of the last congress and expresses the hope that such a measure, or one similar, may yet be considered. He suggests the appointment of a non-partisan commission to deal with the whole question of securing pure elections, the selection of the commission to be vested in the supreme court.

"To the consideration of these very grave questions," concludes the president, "I invite the attention, not only of congress, but of all patriotic citizens. We must not be faithless to the free and equal influences of the people in the choice of public officers and in the control of public affairs. BENJAMIN HARRISON."

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

STARVING RUSSIANS.

Governor Merriam Takes Steps Looking to Their Relief.

Gov. Merriam has issued a circular letter setting forth the terrible destitution which exists in Russia, and asking that Minnesota people who are blessed with homes, goods and money and can look forward to continued prosperity will do what lies in their power to mitigate the terrible sufferings of the starving Russians. The governor appoints a committee of well-known citizens to receive donations of flour, wheat, potatoes, rye and other breadstuffs. It is suggested that cash donations be sent to the metropolitan papers, and the country press is urged to give the subject wide attention.

A Happy Presentation.

At a meeting of the Prairie lodge of odd fellows in Winona a pleasant event occurred in the presentation to M. L. Mertes, a blind man well known in Winona, a purse of $856.10. When the grand lodge was in session in Winona last June a resolution was unanimously adopted empowering Prairie lodge to solicit aid for Mr. Mertes from the sister lodges in the state. To this call there were 102 responses, the awards ranging from $5 to $10. The response was entirely voluntary. This substantial token is greatly appreciated by Mr. Mertes.

Broke the Record.

October, with 377 arrivals and clearances and a tonnage of 381,279, was the best month that Duluth ever saw, but November knocked out October by ten vessels and a tonnage of 81,675. The November tonnage this year beats that of last year by 179,928. Practically all of this year's tonnage was engaged in the grain business, whereas one year ago a great deal of the tonnage that brought coal to Duluth went out light to take ore.

Duluth's Big Furnace.

The big blast furnace at West Duluth made its first run the other night. It was entirely successful. It will be followed by four runs every twenty-four hours. The furnace will devour daily nearly 200 tons of iron ore and as much limestone and coke. It will run out about 100 tons of bessemer pig daily at the start, probably increasing this output later to 140 or 150 tons daily.

Horror in St. Paul.

A force of men were engaged in clearing away the debris from the burned building in St. Paul formerly occupied by Farwell, Ozmun & Co. and Griggs, Cooper & Co., when one of the walls fell with a terrific crash, burying the workmen. Ten dead bodies were taken out of the ruins, and twenty injured persons were rescued from the debris.

Sent Back to the Asylum.

David L. Libbison, of Northfield, one of the most prominent merchants in Rice county and well known in business circles of the northwest, was committed to the insane asylum at Rochester. He was proprietor of one of the largest cigar factories in the state. He had been discharged from the asylum several months ago as cured.

The News Briefly Chronicled.

John Lindquist, of Moe, committed suicide by hanging.

The oldest son of Mr. Serivens, of Aitken, a lad of 12 years, was fatally kicked by a horse.

James McDowel, foreman for Pat Saunders, the Aitken lumberman, was fatally hurt by a tree falling on him.

An inventory of the stock of Jacob Steenbauer, the boot and shoe dealer at Winona who assigned recently, showed the assets to be $6,742.70 and the liabilities to be $6,293.56.

The fire loss for November in Minneapolis was the heaviest since July, 1888, being about $450,000. There were fifty-nine alarms, making a total of 639 so far this year.

Arthur B. Church, an employe of the Commercial bank in Minneapolis, lost $1,300 through a hole in his coat pocket while going to the Citizens' bank.

Blanche Wooley, daughter of William B. Wooley, living near Viola, was fatally burned while attempting to start a fire with kerosene.

The Percival business block in Argyle, including the post office, was destroyed by fire. The loss was $50,000; insurance light.

Business was suspended for a few ours the other day in the office of the Minneapolis telephone exchange, all on account of a little mouse. The fourteen girl operators were treed on top of chairs and desks.

THE STRANGE STORY OF PEPA.

A Maid Servant Who Exercised a Powerful Influence on the Destinies of Europe.

A few days ago there died in France a woman who, although illfavored and disagreeable, exercised a most powerful influence on the destinies of Europe. Extraordinary though it may appear, she was nothing but a servant girl, with so little education that she barely knew how to write her name, which was Pepa. She was a Spaniard by birth and was the maid and confidential factotum of the Empress Eugenie both before and after her marriage to Napoleon.

It is generally admitted that the Empress Eugenie was principally responsible for many of the most cruel of France's disasters. She was entirely under the control of her maid, who possessed all the vices and none of the virtues of the Spanish character. The emperor and many of Eugenie's friends and relatives repeatedly implored her to dismiss Pepa, but without avail, and it was current at the time that she owed her exceedingly strong position to some dangerous secret of her mistress, which the latter feared she would reveal.

Pepa commenced her career as a mere maid, with white apron and cap, in the service of the old Countess of Montijo, taking her meals in the kitchen. She afterward became the maid and confidante of Eugenie, being aware of all her flirtations and adventures prior to her marriage to Napoleon. On becoming empress Eugenie appointed her first femme de chambre, and subsequently gave her the place of treasurer of her household. Just before the latter promotion she married a corporal of the Imperial Guard, whose good looks pleased her, and at the emperor's request the corporal was advanced to the rank of lieutenant on the wedding day.

Every purchase made by the empress passed through Pepa's hands—not only those of clothes, but also of pictures, statutes, bric-a-brac, and jewels. In each case Pepa insisted upon obtaining a commission, and thus it was that when the empire came to an end, in 1870, she possessed a fortune of 5,000,000 francs in money and 800,000 francs in jewels deposited in the vaults of the Bank of France. The amount of her wealth became known just before the declaration of war, through the death of her husband, which rendered it necessary that an inventory should be taken of her property.

All the dresses, and, in fact, the whole garderobe of the empress, with the exception of certain valuable furs and laces, were included in Pepa's perquisites. The empress rarely wore a dress more than once—or at the most twice—and accordingly they accumulated fast. Every month or two Pepa used to organize a regular auction sale of all these dresses in her apartments in the Tuilleries, which were situated in the Pavilion de Flore. Great ladies and demi-mondaines alike attended these extraordinary sales, when it was possible to obtain a dress worth many thousand francs at a cost of only a few hundred francs.

Pepa was small, swarthy and angular, her lips were thin and cruel, and her small eyes vicious and cunning. At the palace she was hated, but feared. Indeed, the familiars of the court were wont to regard her in much the same manner as the courtiers of Richelieu looked upon the cardinal's confessor, l'Eminence Grise.—N. Y. Recorder.

—The Largest State.—You may always depend upon a boy knowing a great deal more than anybody else and saying it right out. A Detroit school teacher the other day tackled a ten-year-old pupil. "What is the largest state in the union?" she asked. "Matrimony," answered the boy promptly, and the teacher has been wondering ever since where he got the information.—Detroit Free Press.

'T WAS a Christmas morning,
And we, three maidens gay,
Had each a lover's token
To mark the holiday:
Maud's was a stately mansion
With towers and spires above;
May's was a diamond necklace,
And mine was—Roland's love.

Maud's suitor was a banker,
White-haired and stout and old;
And May's a proud patrician
With wealth of lands and gold.
But mine was just a toiler
Content with humble part;
He had but this to offer—
A true and loving heart.

Maud leads within her mansion,
An empty life of show,
And May's rich jewels cover
A heart that throbs with woe;
But in my heart forever
Love sings her joyous lays;
She lightens all my burdens
And brightens all my ways.

Rare gems and stately mansions
Are but the price of gold;
But love is aye God-given
And never bought or sold.
It is the soul's glad sunshine;
It is the heart's sweet rest;
And, rich or poor, in living
We are forever blest.

Then oh, be glad this morning
If such a gift is yours,
For gold-bought joys are changeful,
But honest love endures.
Though lowly may your lot be,
In royal state apart
God crowns you when He gives you
The love of one true heart.

—Adelaide D. Reynolds, in Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

EW men live among more dreary surroundings than the loggers who go every fall into the great northern pine forests. In one of Aleck Forman's camps, in northern Minnesota, accordingly, were located in the winter of 18—, some forty of the rough giants who make up these little communities. They had settled for the season in the usual fashion and were looking forward with the lack of interest natural under the circumstances, to a lonely Christmas, when the monotony of camp life was broken.

It is seldom broken except in one way, and this was in accordance with the rule. An accident happened. In some mysterious way John Davidson, the oldest and most experienced man in the "gang," managed to slip and fall partly under a falling trunk and was picked up senseless. The foreman, Charlie Andrews, was somewhat skilled in treating ordinary bruises and fractures, and he examined Davidson carefully, expecting to find several of his bones broken, but none of them were, and the men thought their comrade would soon recover.

One evening when Andrews had finished as careful an examination of the unfortunate man as he knew how to make, and had been able to get some few replies to his questions, he said to the others: "I'm afraid it's no use. I dunno what I kin do fur him. He's hurt inside somewheres en' he seems to be failin' rapid. I reckon he's goin' ter cash in."

There was silence in the little group for a few moments, and then Joe Pelton spoke up. Joe was one of the youngest men in camp, being only twenty-one, but he was almost a giant. Everybody in camp knew that Joe was very much in love with Davidson's pretty daughter, May, and also that he had a very slender chance of winning her, for he was a rather reckless youngster and the elder man was suspicious of him.

"Don't you reckon he'd ought to be taken to Minneapolis?" said Joe.

"Yes," said Andrews, "but I don't believe he can get there in time. There's three foot o' snow on the trail now, and there ain't a team in camp that wouldn't break down on the road."

"Well," said Joe, very slowly, "if you fellers 'il make me a light sled to-night, I'll pull him down. It's only a little over fifty miles, an' I reckon I kin make it in two days."

"I dunno," said Andrews, doubtfully. "I reckon it's likely you c'd git through if anybody could, but yer mighty likely ter break down, an' if yer do it's all day with yer."."

"I know it," replied Joe, coolly, "but I'll risk it. If I git him home he may have a chance, an' if I don't he won't be no worse off 'n he is now."

"Yes, but you will," said one of the other men.

"I'll take my chances," said Joe again, and they all saw he was in earnest.

One of the men, John Williams, offered to go, too, but Joe declined.

"If I kin git through at all," he said, "I kin do it alone, an' there's no use o' more than one takin' the risk. I'll turn in now an' git a good sleep an' take an early start."

Joe started at daybreak and John Williams insisted on going a part of the way with him to lighten the work in some degree. As they started every man in the camp gripped the hand of the stalwart youngster in what each one thought was a last farewell.

About noon Williams returned to camp alone and almost broken down with fatigue. "I dragged the sleigh nigh five miles," he said, "an' I knew I couldn't git back at all if I didn't turn then. So I turned. I tried to git Joe ter come back, too, fer I don't believe he'll ever git through alive, though he was fresh enough when I left him. But Joe's good grit. He on'y clinched his teeth 'n' said he was goin' ter make the best stagger he could towards gittin' thar. Ef anybody kin, he kin, but I reckon we've seen the last o' both of 'em."

Joe's Story.

"You know the old man was wanderin' a bit before we started," Joe used to say, "an' the greatest fear I had about the trip was that he'd go clean crazy out thar in th' woods, fur it seemed to me 's if I'd go crazy, too, ef he did. Ez 'twas, I sometimes think I kinder lost my wits fur a spell. 'Twas powerful hard work plowing along over the snow, 'specially where they was drifts, 'n' I reckon I must er lost mor 'n five or six mile goin' rouud the biggest on 'em. Luckily, though, there wasn't many on 'em an' the most o' the way 'twasn't so bad.

"A'ter Williams left me, I begun to feel, right away, one thing I'd dreaded mighty bad, 'n' that was the awful loneliness o' th' woods. The wind was a sighin' through the big trees like it always does when they is any wind at all, an' it sounded so kind o' mournful that it put all sorts o' foolish notions into my head. 'Peared like the very trees was sorry for me, an' that begin to make me feel sorry for myself, an' sometimes I'd almost break down an' cry.

"I was always kind o' handy about reckonin' distances in the woods, an' I found I was makin' just about two mile an hour. I could ha' pushed on some faster, but I knowed if I did I'd o'ny tire myself more, an' I didn't dast to do that. I had plenty o' time to figger on the journey, an' the nighest I could get to it was that if I could hold out I might git somewhere near town the second night. I knowed I couldn't git out o' the woods in one day's goin', an' they was no use tryin' to travel at night among the trees. So, the days bein' short, I reckoned on about twenty mile the first day; then sleep till daybreak, an then the best I could do towards the other thirty miles. I knowed I'd be in the open when the second night came on, an' if I had luck I might strike a trail, an' mebbe git help somewhar. It was close figgerin', though, an' I made up my mind the one sleep 'ud be all I'd git, an' the second day I'd have to go till I dropped, if it took me way inter the night. I could steer by the stars I knew, if I once got away from the trees.

"Long towards night I'm darned if the old man didn't git plumb crazy. He hollered an' yelled an' struggled so to get off'n the sled 't I was afraid he'd break the f ast'nin's, but Andrews had tied him pretty close, an he didn't have sense enough to try to untie the knots. I had to tie his arms, though, an' I tell ye 'twas somethin' awful. Thar I was, miles an' miles away f'm anybody but a crazy man, riskin' my life to save his, an' skeered to death for fear I'd be as crazy as he was in a few minutes, a tyin' him up to keep him f'm gettin' away. I got him fast, though, an' gave him a dose o' laudanum that Andrews had give me for him, an' after a little he calmed down an' went to sleep.

"I went along till 'twas too dark to see the way any further, an' I knowed I'd got to camp out. They was a good many wolves 'round, too, 'n' I heerd 'em gittin closter and closter. I warn't afeerd of 'em 's long's I was awake, fur I knowed how pesky cowardly the critters are, till they ketch a feller down, but I was skeerd for fear they'd jump on us a'ter we'd gone to sleep. So I built up a rousin' good fire. That took time, but I made it o' brush an' chopped up a young tree 't I found, for logs, an in about two hours I was ready to turn in. Then I stripped an' rubbed myself 'as well 's I could with whisky and dressed an' wrapped up well, 'n lay down.

"Well, I slept tolable sound till nigh daybreak, though I had to git up a couple o' times 'n' feed the fire. Them blame wolves was too close to be comf'table. I c'd see 'em in the dark, smellin' and yelpin' 'round, but they was more afeerd o' the fire 'n' I was o' them.

"Soon as 'twas light I got up 'n' het some coffee an' took a bite, 'n' started. I was goin' by the compass, o' course, but I couldn't go in the dark, for not seein' the way.

Ye may think I talk too much 'bout the way I felt, an' mebbe another man wouldn't ha' been skeerd like I was, but I was almost frightened to death for those two days. I knowed, though, 't the on'y thing to do was to push ahead, 'n' I did. The ole man had woke up, an' it seemed to me like he was a little more sensible 'n' he was the day before, but he lay quiet, 'n' I didn't dare to say nothin' to him fer fear 't he'd start in yellin' again. He didn't though, 'n' then I got skeerd again fur fear he was dead.

The fust thing 't give me any courage whatsomever, was about dark when I struck a trail 't I knew must lead to Minneapolis. I reckoned I had nigh twelve miles more to go, but the goin' was a heap easier, na' I had some hope o' meetin' somebody or comin' to a house where I could git a horse.

"As it turned out I was plumb wrong all round. I was on the right trail, to be sure, but I was more'n sixteen mile away f'm town. I reckon I'd traveled over forty mile, but I'd lost morn'n I thought then, by not goin' dead straight. Then, 'stead o' havin' less to fear, I'd a heap more. I traveled along pretty well for an hour or two a'ter dark, 'n' then I got so dog tired I took a big snifter o' whisky. I hadn't took any afore, fur I was afeerd o' the stuff, never bein' used to it, an' knowin' t'would help me awhile an' then leave me worse off. But I reckoned I was so near gone, an' so close to where I'd git help, 'twas time to take it. Thar I was wrong again. The dumed liquor spurred me up for mebbe an hour, an' then I kind o' lost track o' the time an' didn't seem to know much about anything, an' bimeby I keched myself thinkin' it didn't make much difference anyhow. I'd got ter die some time, an' I might as well lie down and be quick about it, an' as fur the ole man, thar wasn't much show fur him anyhow.

"I dunno how it was 't I ketched myself up again; but I knowed enough to know 'twas cold an' me bein' so tired that done it, 'n' I says to myself: 'Joe, you've got to git thar fust, 'n' then's time enough to die. I studied on it fur a minute or two, and come to the conclusion 't I'd got to hurt myself somehow, so's the pain would keep me awake, 'n' I caught my little finger nail in my teeth 'n' bit it off. Well, I had plenty o' pain then, and I jumped ahead like a tired ox when you gad him deep.

"That lasted me for mebbe half an hour, but I couldn't tell nothin' about the time. I'd lost track o' that entirely. Then the cold began to numb me again. 'Twas a frightful cold night, an' I dunno how 'twas the ole man kep' f'm freezing to death.

"Finally, I staggered 'n' fell, 'n' just as I did, 'n' thought to myself 't I wouldn't bother to git up fur 'twan't wuth while, the ole man spoke up. I don't think he'd said anything afore, all day long. 'Joe,' he says, speakin' sharp an' loud, but not hollerin', 'Joe, hear the Christmas chimes!'

"First I thought he was ravin' again, but it started me up an' I listened, an' sure enough the church bells was a-ringin'. Boys, I never knowed afore what church bells mean. Talk about 'good tidings of great joy,' thar never was tidings of joy came to me like them bell brought. It was Christmas eve, an' I hadn't never thought of it all day. Thar I was, within hearin' o' the bells, an' givin' out, an' I made up my mind I'd make another stagger, 'n' I struggled up again.

A FELLER CAME DRIVING ALONG.

"Twan't no use, though. I'd got plumb to the end o' the run. I plowed along a bit, but as I knowed a'terwards I must ha' gone clean off my head, fur I left the trail an' wandered off somewhere, the Lord on'y knows where, but He must ha' been lookin' out fur us, fur I kinder wandered 'round, like, till I come back ter the trail agin, an' as luck would have it I come back ter the top of a bluff, an' stumblin' ahead, knowin' nothin', I went plumb over, draggin' the sled along with me.

"Wall, we tumbled square inter the roadway. Ef it hadn't been for the snow we'd both ha' been killed, likely, fur we fell nigh fifty feet. As 'twas I couldn't git up, fur I was dead beat, an' the ole man couldn't 'cause I hadn't untied him. I was skeerd to do it. But he wasn't hurt an' he lay on one side, expectin' to lay there an' die, when he heerd sleigh-bells. Blamed if a feller didn't come drivin' along with a fast-rate horse. Seems he lived out on the perara an' was goin' home f'm town, but he was a good-hearted feller, an' when he found out what the situation was he turned right away an' took us into town flyin'. The ole man had sense enough left to tell him about it an' to tell who we was.

"The feller drove right to the ole man's house, 'n' we found they was havin' a little Christmas party there, an' nat'ral enough they was talkin' about the ole man when we come to the door. I was that tired I never woke up till the next afternoon, an' there I was in bed in the ole man's house, with the doctor lookin' at me.

"He laughed when I looked 'roun an' asked where I was, an' he says: 'I thought you'd be all right, soon as you'd had your sleep out.' An' I says: 'Yes, I'm all right; but how's the ole man?' Then he looked mighty grave, an' he says: 'I can't tell yet. He's been hurt mighty bad, but I reckon maybe with good nussin' he'll come 'round mebbe. He would ha' died, though, if he hadn't been brought home.' Then he shook hands with me an' said all sorts o' foolish things 'bout me bein' a hero, 'stead o' what I am, a big man with tolable strong legs an' arms. But Lord bless you! what he said was nothin' to the way the women took on, when I dressed an' went downstairs. They hugged me, an' kissed me till I was fairly 'shamed o' myself, an' the ole woman says: 'Joe Pelton, you brought me my husband for a Christmas gift, and I'll give you a wife fur yourn.' Then I knowed it were all settled, 'cause I knowed the ole man wouldn't never go back on what she said. An' he didn't, neither, when he got stronger, as he did a'ter a bit. He won't never be strong like he was, but he's tolable well now, an' likely to live a good many years.

"Well, them women made me talk all the afternoon 'bout the walk down f'm camp, an' when they wanted to know how I'd hurt my finger, an' I told 'em, I'm blamed if they didn't cry till I felt like a fool."—Texas Siftings.

MY CHRISTMAS PRESENT.

You're thinking, maybe, what you'll give
To me by way of sweet reminder
You've not forgotten that I live—
The season's kind and you are kinder.
Well, Christmas has no prettier trait
Than this of gift and love expressing;
We grumble as we pay the freight,
But hearts grow big by purse compressing.

But when you ponder in your mind
What shall it be? A book of verses?
A case of razors, satin-lined?
One of those dainty little purses,
All knit in silk by your dear hands?
A book-mark with the motto "Mizpah?"
Let these go forth to other lands—
But not to me—no, let me whisper:

You've promised some day to be mine,
To be my wife—my great home ruler;
I've waited months—how many? nine—
From balmy spring to days much cooler—
So now, my love, I ask in rhyme,
I pray name the day—the season's pleasant—
Thus may your present be the time,
And let the time, too, be the present.
—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

—"Well, Bobbie, said his father the day after Christmas, "aren't you sorry Christmas comes only once a year?" "Oh, I d'know. If Dr. Squills has got to come the day after Christmas every time, I'm rather glad of it."—Harper's Bazar.

—I heard the bells on Christmas day
Their old, familiar carols play,
And wild and sweet
The words repeat
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!
—Longfellow.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—Ex-Gov. Waller, of Connecticut, can dash off letters at fifty words to the minute and at the same time keep up a running conversation with anybody he wishes to talk to. His law practice is something enormous since he returned from London as consul.

—Tennyson has taken a violent fancy to Ada Rehan, while she speaks with enthusiasm of the charm of the poet laureate's personality, of his health and of the enjoyment of life which he displays, though eighty-two years of age, some months older than Gladstone.

—The highest building in the world has just been completed on the Signal peak of Monte Rosa. An Alpine club and Queen Margaret of Italy contributed the money for this hut, which boasts of an altitude of nearly fifteen thousand feet. It is supplied with a copper roof to protect it from lightning.

—Walter H. Evans, a young Indiana botanist, who spent the summer exploring the southwestern states in search of cacti for the agricultural department, says that he did not see a single rattlesnake or tarantula in that region, which is supposed to be their home. But he had a rather thorny time of it gathering the cacti.

—Sir William MacGregor, governor of British New Guinea, recently ascended Mount Yule on Kovio, as he prefers to call it. The Kovio range is volcanic and isolated from the main chain of which Mount Owen Stanley is the culmination. The Kovio range is under eleven thousand feet high and is wooded to the very summit.

—William K. Wilde, the English journalist, who has just been married to Mrs. Frank Leslie, is over six feet tall and well proportioned, and about thirty-nine years old. He has been a newspaper man for about twenty years, and has also studied law and medicine. Although a brother of Oscar Wilde, he is not a disciple of æsthetic nonsense.

—The northwest provinces of Canada have made bountiful provision for the education of the multitudes of people who are expected to some day occupy this now somewhat lonesome expanse of territory. Saskatchewan has set apart 3,648,000 acres of land for the maintenance of public schools, Assiniboia 3,040,000, and Alberta 3,200,000.

—Mr. Stiggins and Mr. Chadband are supposed to be two of Dickens' best-known characters. The other day a London vestryman got up at a meeting and complained that he had been called "a maw-worm, a Pangloss, and a Chadband," and that he had found "maw-worm" in his dictionary, but couldn't find a suggestion even of what a "Chadband" or a "Pangloss" was!

—A statistician in Paris had the patience to count the number of words employed by the most celebrated writers. The works of Corneille do not contain more than 7,000 different words, and those of Moliere 8,000. Shakespeare, the most fertile and varied of English authors, wrote all his tragedies with 15,000 words. Voltaire and Goethe employ 20,000. "Paradise Lost" only contains 8,000, and the Old Testament says all that it has to say with 5,642 words.

—Massachusetts has more free circulating and reference libraries than any other state. It leads the list with 170 free libraries and 11 reference libraries. Illinois has 34 free circulating libraries, New Hampshire 37 of both, New York 35, Rhode Island 32, and Michigan 31. Neither Delaware, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee, nor Kentucky has a free circulating library, although each has one or more free reference libraries.

—"Mary" said Mrs. Hicks to the new waitress, "what has become of those red wine glasses?" "Oh, mum," replied Mary with a frightened sob, "the cook's cousin was here Sunday, and he ate 'em all up. He's the glass-eater at the museum, mum."—Epoch.

—"I often wonder," he said, as they stood in the yellowness of a moonlit night, "what my last words will be." And not a vestige of sarcastic intent lurked in her mind as she answered: "So do I, George. I should so love to hear them."—Washington Star.

—The New Entry Clerk.—"James, I don't see you waiting at table any more." "No, sah; I's been promoted. I's entry clerk now." "You entry clerk. I didn't know you were a book keeper." "Oh, I ain't. I jest keep my eye on the umbrellas, hats, and things de boa'ders leave in the entry."—Kate Field's Washington.

—The boy's fishing pole was fastened under the roof of a tree on the river bank the other day, and he was sitting in the sun playing with a dog. "Fishing?" inquired a man passing along the road. "Yep," answered the boy, as briefly. "Nice dog you've got there. What's his name?" "Fish." "Fish? That's a queer name for a dog. What do you call him that for?" "'Cause he won't bite." Then the man proceeded on his way.

ABOUT FLAG POLES.

Where They Come From and How They Are Placed in Position.

Considering that no building of any importance is complete without a flag pole, it seems rather strange that the business of erecting them has always been in the hands of a few firms, for, while any sparmaker will make a pole, very few will put one up. Here in New York for nearly forty years the bulk of the business has been done by John F. Walsh.

Not only has he put the poles on all the principal buildings, but three-fourths of the staffs from which the gay bunting floats on festive occasions have come from his yard. Perhaps the most difficult job ever undertaken by Mr. Walsh was erecting of the pole on the Equitable building, on the corner of Broadway and Cedar street.

As the owners wished to have the largest single flag-pole in the world, the whole country was scoured in search of a suitable stick. The spruce is the best for the purpose, for while it will bend in the wind it will never break, but it was impossible to get one long enough. At last, in one of the logging camps in Maine, a perfect white pine was found, which, when trimmed, measured one hundred and six feet and weighed five thousand pounds.

It was brought to New York on flat cars. Although the stick in the rough was worth only one hundred and seventy-five dollars, owing to the great difficulty of putting it up, the pole cost two thousand five hundred dollars as it stands to-day.

Ordinarily a pole is hoisted to the top of a building by ropes and a kind of derrick known as a pair of shearlegs. These shearlegs consist of two rough poles placed in the shape of an inverted v, and fastened with ropes where they join near the top. Owning to the height of the Equitable building, and the great weight of the pole, a huge pair of shearlegs had to be employed.

How to get them upon the roof was a problem. First a small pair were taken up. These were then used in hoisting up a larger pair, which, in turn, were employed to lift the big pair that were to raise the pole. It took fifteen men nine days to get the pole into position, the stick being raised only one inch at a time.

To securely fasten it the pole was allowed to run down through the two upper floors. It fits into an iron socket, which is fastened by screw-bolts to the beams, and is steadied by braces two inches in diameter.

The subject of flag-poles is one about which not much is generally known. The sticks arrive in rafts and are kept in the water until used to prevent dry rot. The rough pole is first chopped square and then trimmed down until it tapers properly.

The cuff at the end in which the holes for the halyards are drilled is made of lignum vitæ, wood that has grown so scarce that it is sold by the pound. The gilt ball on the top is of hollow brass.

The men engaged in erecting flag-poles are old sailors who have abandoned the sea and who fill in odd moments at rigging. Their work is perilous and they receive five dollars a day.

To hoist a pole properly requires a practiced hand, for unless the rope sling has been placed to a nicety the pole will not swing into the socket when the shearlegs have raised it in a perpendicular position. In the hands of these riggers the heaviest pole is completely under control, and the frail-looking shearlegs stand every strain.

Just before being hoisted into place the pole is given a second coat of paint. White lead is put into the holes to prevent the bolts from corroding, and where the pole fits into the roof putty is used to keep out any moisture.

A pole generally lasts twenty years, and costs from seventy-five dollars upwards, the price depending entirely upon the difficulty experienced in erecting it. Besides being used on buildings for celebrating and advertising purposes, flagstaffs have been quite common on suburban lawns.—Mechanical News.

Relation of Hunger to Infection.

There is a popular notion to the effect that a person is more likely to take a contagious disease when the stomach is empty. Although this fact seems to be well established by experience, nevertheless it has never been established as a scientific fact until recently. Experiments which have lately been made upon pigeons by two Italian physicians, demonstrate beyond any reasonable doubt that hunger is favorable to the activity of the infectious element, whatever it may be. Pigeons that had been starved were found to be very susceptible to the contagion of anthrax, although when well fed they are not at all subject to this disease. It thus appears that hunger in some way lessens the ability of the body to defend itself from the attack of disease germs. Possibly this may be in part due to the fact that when a person is hungry there is no gastric juice in the stomach, so that the protective influence of this digestive influence is lost. Then, too, the lowering of the vital powers as the result of hunger, lessens the resistance of the cells of the body in general.—Western Rural.

The Only One Ever Printed—Can You Find the Word?

There is a 3 inch display advertisement in this paper, this week, which has no two words alike except one word. The same is true of each new one appearing each week, from The Dr. Harter Medicine Co. This house places a "Crescent" on everything they make and publish. Look for it, send them the name of the word and they will return you book, beautiful lithographs or samples free.

Floored.

Dyspepsia is easily floored by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, purest, pleasantest of stomachics, most effective of tonics. Heartburn, flatulence, the "sinking" sensation in the pit of the stomach experienced by dyspeptics, in brief, all symptoms—and they are many and perplexing—of indigestion are banished by the Bitters, which is particularly efficacious for biliousness, malaria, rheumatism and kidney complaints.

"How do I look?"

That depends, madam, upon how you feel. If you're suffering from functional disturbances, irregularities or weaknesses, you're sure to "look it." And Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the remedy. It builds up and invigorates the system, regulates and promotes the proper functions, and restores health and strength. It's a legitimate medicine, not a beverage; purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, and made especially for woman's needs. In the cure of all "female complaints," it's guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money is refunded. No other medicine for women is sold so. Think of that, when the dealer says something else (which pays him better) is "just as good."

"Times have changed." So have methods. The modern improvements in pills are Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They help Nature, instead of fighting with her. Sick and nervous headache, biliousness, costiveness, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels are prevented, relieved, and cured.

DELANO DIARY.

—Don't fail to see Prof. Crowell's world of wonders at the City Hall Dec. 21.

—Danforth Bros. have had a tubular well made at their hotel. Ennis Brandon did the work.

—If you wish to behold a bland smile ask J. D. Young how the roads were on Wednesday morning.

—Popular prices will prevail at the City Hall. Reserved seats on sale at Wittman's drug store.

—St Bonnifacius' lumber merchant Nick Frank, spent Sunday at home with his family, at this place.

—J. D. Bandon is moving with his family into the Renswick house on Franklin Avenue near the depot.

—Sam Pape was acting depot agent this week while George Bolton was at home battling manfully with the La-Grippe.

—Delano Fair Day last Saturday was a big day in town. Crowds of people with stock were present from every direction.

—John Cunningham is having a tubular well made on his farm. He is bound not to be behind his neighbors in the comforts of life.

—One grand opportunity to see Buenell's Vaudeville company at City Hall Dec. 21. Popular prices will prevail. Get seats at Wittman's.

—That handsome and commodious new residence opposite At Welker's old house is his new farm home into which he expects to move soon.

—LaGrippe has put in an appearance in our midst again. This time it is if anything more depressing to the spirits than on its former visits.

—Rev Davies will preach on Sunday evening especially to the young people on "Character building." Two things everybody has character and reputation."

—Truman Senear, Daniel Sinear and Charles Banker, of Rockford, recently returned from a deer hunt in the vicinity of Bridgman. They report deer as having been quite plenty, thirteen being their share of the hunt.

—The Public school entertainment to be given to-night, at the City-hall is expected to be a good one as much time and trouble has been gone to by teachers and scholars in order to make it interesting. Admission 15 cents.

—Wash Rader attended the Watertown fair on Monday. He says they have been working the streets and the rain was soaking everything until he thought "Mudtown" would have been an appropriate appellation for the place.

—Prof. R. M. Bohn has been on the sick list lately although he has been able to tend to his business most of the time. His family, wife, daughter and son, have also been sick, especially his son, who at present is down with lung fever.

—The school board don't appear to understand roof building to perfection or are negligent in the discharge of their duties as on Monday the rain found its way into the room through a hole where the plastering was off the ceiling. Scholars should not be compelled to sit in the rain or in a damp room.

—The telegraph and express companies are getting more particular about their offices than they have been heretofore. Strict orders have been issued to the agents all along the line. So now when people wish to talk with Messrs. Bolton, Pape, or Mattson they must do so through the appertures in the walls provided for that purpose.

—Sunday and Monday Minnesotians enjoyed a fine warm rain. Something unknown in the annals of the oldest inhabitant. On Monday Dec 14th. J. D. Young's folks had their display of house plants out on the sidewalk receiving the benefit of the rain. The river raised considerably breaking up skating, and roads became very muddy. On the whole quite a spring like appearance was presented by all nature.

Persons visiting their old homes in the East this winter should take along printed matter descriptive of their new homes in the Northwest. Take copies of this paper with you and ask agents of the Great Northern Railway for a supply of publications. 8-5t.

School of Agriculture.

ST. ANTHONY PARK, Dec. 9, 1891.

EDITOR GAZETTE: Being a student of the Agricultural Department of the University of Minnesota and knowing that there are a great many farmer's sons in Wright County badly in need of a higher education than that imparted by the common schools, I thought it not a bad plan to inform those desirous of acquiring a more thorough knowledge of some of the subjects of which we stand in need every day of our lives, especially such as the farmer needs: that such an opportunity is offered here at what is known as the "School of Agriculture."

The school is located on the State Experimental farm, half way between Minneapolis and St. Paul on a hill overlooking the beautiful suburb, St. Anthony Park.

The instructions given are such as may be applied to practical use on the farm, being for the sole purpose of educating for the farm and its varied requirements.

The course contains among other branches, Agricultural and Dairy Chemistry, Botany, Horticulture and Manual training each of which is taught in a thorough and systematic manner, by competent and efficient instructors.

A new dairy building has been erected this summer on the grounds supplied with all the approved modern machinery at a cost of $18,000.00 where thorough instruction in theoreical and practical butter and cheese making is given.

While writing this the State Dairy Convention is being held here, and representative dairymen from all over the State are in attendance.

The factorymen's course in dairying begins January 5, '92. This course is intended for those wishing to take only the dairying. It will continue for six weeks and is especially adapted to the wants of those engaged in creamery work. The expense is nominal, board being furnished to students of the school for simply what it would actually cost.

For particulars apply to W. W. Pendergest, St. Anthony Park, Minn.

Yours truly,
W. T. ZIEBARTH.

Back On Powedrly.

E. Bach, from Aberdeen, S. D. in Minneapolis Tribune, criticises Mr. Powderly's views of finance in severe terms; accusing him of ignorance of the subject of finance, as well as all those who entertain similar wiews and denounces the press that gives publicity to such heresies.

Doubtless Mr. Powderly is not in sympathy with that species of financiering that enables the few gambling financiers of Wall street to handle all the money of the country to their own advantage and to the disadvantage of labor; nor the ignorant dupes, who hold like beliefs, do they understand that species of financiering whereby a Congressman can accumulate one hundred and fifty thousand dollars in four years out of a salary of five thousand dollars a year. Nor does he or they comprehend the wisdom and justice of the governments putting vast millions of money into the hands of a few parties, without interest (so far as the public knows) that they may have it to loan out for interests, or to use to gamble in stocks and grains. The ignorant people may not see the wisdom of such doings but for all that they do know when they are cold and hungry; neither do they comprehend the wisdom of putting the United States treasury under the domination of a few gambling bankers in Wall street as is done, but they do know when their daily wages are reduced to a point where they are unable to provide even the the most ordinary comforts of life for their families.

We do not know who F. Bach, of Aberdeen, S. D. is but he is evidently a great one, and is away up in finance and may, some day, be heard of in the courts of insolvency if not in the criminal courts. It is where such valiant, impudent public instructors are apt to land.

There is a great deal of ignorance in the world and we do not know of any one person possessing all the knowledge and wisdom in the world unless it is "E. Bach, of Aberdeen, S. D."

Epidemic of Diphtheria.

REDWOOD FALLS, Minn., Dec., 15. [Special]—Word has just been received here from Belview, this county, of two deaths in the family of Stewart Noyes, one of the earliest settlers. His wife and little boy died Saturday. He and his little daughter are expected to die at any moment, thus taking the entire family. The ravages of this disease are not confined to the vicinity of Belview for at Wood Lake, Yellow Medicine county, three large families are quarantined from the world and one death has taken place.—Minneapolis Tribune.

A Splendid Trip.

A trip to Montana over the Great Northern is one of the most attractive in the West. From St. Paul the tourist takes the four-track route to Minneapolis. Crossing the Mississippi on a million dollar stone arch bridge, in full view of the Falls of St. Anthony and the largest flouring mills in the world, goes thence through the Park Region of Minnesota, with its myriad lakes, to the wheat valley of the Red River, to Devils Lake,—North Dakota's inland sea,—through the Mouse River country and the milk River Valley, passing Fort Assiniboine, the largest and finest military fort in the West, historic Benton, Great Falls City and the mighty cataracts of the Missouri river, then skirting the Rocky Mountains, with their sublime scenery, to Helena, the rich capital of Montana, thence over the continental backbone to Butte, the largest mining camp on earth.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory.

MERRY MERRY CHRISTMAS TO EVERYBODY.

We wish you all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year!

SENATOR PLUMB, of Kansas, died suddenly last Satusday, an account is given on the inside of this paper.

GROVER CLEVELAND made another of his characteristic speeches the other day, at the New England Society meeting in Brooklin. Cleveland is still in the field.

IT has been reported that Robert Lincoln is to resign his position of Minister to England and return home soon. Possibly since James G. Blaine, of Maine has announced his willingness to accept the nomination for President Robert is to be his running mate.

THE propositions to raise the World's Fair fund of $50,000. additional in Minnesota, is thought by some to be the right thing others are opposed to it. If it is proposed to build a seperate house, a kind of side show we think it would be as well not to raise it. but to have Minnesota's display in the main building if it can be done, where every body will see it.

THE question of uniting the parochial with the regular public schools throughout the country is, it seems to us, exciting considerable discussion for a question that could be easily settled. For years the Public school has been considered a bulwork of our Country. All that seems necessary to settle the question is to cease operating any other kind and encourage the attendance of all children of schoolable age upon the Public schools, ot which our State in particular has a number sufficient to meet the demands or in case there be localities where such has not already been provided they can easily and quickly be built. We notice, however, that such men as Rev. Chaffee, of the Methodist Herald, and Bishop Ireland begin to get to the point that any religion is better than none. It is apt to all come out right.

The Mazue Trial.

One of the longest and hardest fought murder trials Wright County ever had, and she has had several, terminated on Wednesday morning by the discharge of the prisoner,

Last June little Annie Brunder a Polander girl 12 years of age lived with her parents at Montrose and attended the parochial school at Waverly, using the railroad track as a road on which to walk to and from school, as did many neighboring children. On Thursday evening she did not come home and as she sometimes visited with friends not much was thought about it until the next evening when on his not arriving her family and friends became anxious and enquiries were made but no one seemed to know where she went to. On Saturday a searching party found the dead body bound and gagged with a handkerchief and her own apron. Lying in the woods a few rods south of the railroad. Suspicion fell on John Mazue a neighbor boy who had been to Waverly Lake fishing on the day of the disappearance of the little girl. An inquest was held and John was sent to jail to await the action of the Court, The Grand Jury at the December term of court found and indictment of murder in the first degree. After several days effort and the exhaustion of the regular pannel and two special venires a jury of twelve men was found to try the case. County Attorney Cutting and assistant Attorney General Childs conducted the prosecution while William E, Culkin was the defendants lawyer. Many witnesses were heard and the trial was unusually thorough and took up several days of the term. On Thursday evening the attorneys completed their pleas and the case was given to the Jury who after deliberating all night returned on Wednesday morning a verdict of acquittal.

The GAZZETE gave a full account of the evidence given at the coroners inquest at the time.

Tariff Pictures.

"The 'carpet tax' liar has been singing small lately. No wonder. Every time he shows his head a fact like this hits it. An Eighth avenue firm sells Axminster and Moquette carpets at a yard. That is less than the duty, which is 60 cents a square yard and 40 per cent. ad valorem. Carpet is generally a little more than a yard wide; but letting it go at that, the duty on these goods is at least a yard. And yet the Millses and other free trade cranks are getting ready to shout in the year 1892 the tariff is a tax.'"—New York Press.

79 cents

91 cents

GOOD ORDER IN SCHOOL.

The following paper was read by William Kennedy of Corcoran, at the county teachers' meeting held recently in this city:

The best way to maintain good order in a school is to give the pupils plenty to do and see that they do it. Most teachers recognize this an lessons sufficient to occupy all of the pupil's time and powers are usually assigned; but in nearly every school there are some who, apparently, will not apply themselves to the work in hand, and seem intent on wasting there own time and annoying the school by an invariable indulgence in some kind of mischievous conduct.

What to do with such pupils is a question that puzzles the minds of many teachers and one which every teacher must decide for himself. Some teacher will scold the pupils; some will shame him some will keep him in at recess some will keep him after school; some will send a note home to his parents and him into hot water at home; some will moralize with him to make him see the error of his way, which he has seen clearly from the begining: and some will resort to corporal punishment. But I have to say that never, during my somewhat extended experience as a teacher, have I seen to conscientiously administer any of the punishments here enumerated for the offence of intellectual delinquency save keeping the pupil in at recess; for how ever richly a pupil may deserve such treatment at the hands of the teacher, we must remember that his youthful and undeveloped mind is not capable of fully comprehending the justic of the teachers demadns, and not forgetting the inefficacy of such forms of punishment which were almost universally resorted to in the never-to-be-forgotten days when we ourselves were children, we must conclude that the old methods are not the best to try to deveise new ones. Tell a boy in the presence of the school that if he does not study diligently you will keep him in at recess, keep him in after school, chastise him or punish him in some other way and though he may say nothing about it, you may depend upon it, his feelings are almost irreparably hurt; he is offended. His feelings are akin to those which you or I would experience should some one exercising temporary authority over us accuse us of a crime in the hearing of an assemblage of our peers, and threten punishment. So, having taken such a course you have not only failedto conquer the boy's refractories, but you have made him more obstinate than befor and if you happen to be too short sighted to see the bad effect of what you have done, as many, of us unfortunately seem to be at such times, you are liable to resort again and again to these harsh methods of discipline, each time lessening your own moral influence over the pupils until finally your usefuleess in the school is entirely at an end.

At this juncture the reader may wish to know what device or devices the writer would employ in lieu of the many objectionable methods referred to above, and I will try to answer with the same willingness with which I have long wished other and more capable teachers to write on these and other questions which are of such vital importance to us all, and which call so loudly for our careful and prayerful consideraton, but with a depressing consciousness of my inabity to do justice to the question under consideration.

Believing that an idle brain is the devil's workshop, I give the children so much to do that they can find no time for mischief. Then, always remembering the time honered maxim—"As the teacher is, so is the school"—I employ every moment of my own time with some useful work. All or nearly all the pupils will follow my example and I have at once a "working school" If I can keep them at work, the problem is solved, the battle won. But lo, yonder is a boy who is already tired of his work, though 20 minutes have not elapsed since he took his seat. I look toward him in a casual way, not constantly enough to let him know I am watching him, but often enough to observe his actions and study his motives. He looks at me, but my eyes are upon my work. Believing his actions entirely unobserved by me, he glances about the room, but there is no one with whom he can at this moment engage in a sly and mischievous intercourse. Every eye is upon the work of the day. He smiles; he has thought of some mischief. He nudges his seatmate, who looking up, catches my eye, and immediately resumes his work; but with less interest than before, for he is wondering what that nudge was intended for, and means to inquire as soon as my back is turned. Some mischief is already done: and the author of it having failed to engage the attention of his seatmate,, reaches to touch the boy in front of him, but withdraws his hand ere its intended evil has been wrought, for he has observed my quiet approach. He is now looking at his lesson, apparently studdying diligently; but I observe his book is upside down. His mind is so full of mischievous thoughts that he does not notice that himself. This boy is evidently intent on pursuing a course of conduct which, if not checked, will lead to demoralization in the school. The time has come when I must act, and act quickly, for if I leave him, in five minutes he will have the attention of every pupil within his reach. If I speak a single word of reproof, some and probably all, of the pupils will turn around to see what is up, and I become a disturbing element in the school myself. What must I do? I call his class. I ask those who have studied their lessons the most diligently to read first, then call upon him. His reading sufferes in comparison—it is wretchedly poor. I hear him spell: he misses every word. I kindly tell him that I would like to know the reason why he does not read and spell more correctly. His is what children will nearly always say in reply to such a question at such a time, "I can't." I know he can, but I do not question his word. I tell him that if he can't, I am very sorry, indeed, but will have to help him at recess, as my other time is entirely occupied with regular school work. He thinks it very kind in me to offer to help him, but he knows what it means. It means that he is to lose one of those three things which every healthy child wants to have in large measure—food, sleep and play. The most disagreeable punishment now awaits him yet it is threatened in such a way that there is no possible ground for angry feelings or complaint on his part. He goes to his seat and thinks he would like to play in school, but he would rather play at recess. He is outgeneraled, and the battle is won: for he goes to work and does the only thing left for him to do—studies diligently. Thus a teacher needs to be wide-awake, to quickly see and promptly meet the countless little cases of discipline in school that call for an exercise of sound judgment; and, in conclusion, I will say that no dancing, card-playing, novel-reading person (I will not call him teacher) ever was or ever will be equal to the emergencies of the school room.—Minneapolis Evening Journal.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18, 1891.

Speaker Crisp thinks that he will be able to announce the committees of the House on the 23rd inst., if the Senate does not ask for an earlier adjournment for the holiday recess. Quite a number of the members think it would be better to defer announcing the committees until after the recess, as that would give the Speaker that much more time to consider the matter. It appears to be generally conceded that Springer will be chairman of the Ways and Means committee and that Holman will be chairman of the committee on Appropriations. In breaking precedent, which has usually made the chairman of these two committees members of the committee on Rules, and appointing Messrs McMillan and Catchings as the Democratic members of that committee. Speaker Crisp has pleased those members who believe that the first named chairmen have influence enough over legislation as heads of their committees, without being also on the committee on Rules.

Representative Oates, of Alabama, offered a resolution, which was referred to the new committee on Rules, providing for the appointment of a standing committee of fifteen, on order of business, of which the Speaker shall be ex-officio chairman, which shall have jurisdiction of the order in which business shall be considered, having due regard to fairness and equity among the several committees and to the transaction of public business.

It was this week announced that the treaty of commercial reciprocity which has been in course of negotiation some weeks between the United States, and the British West Indies, and British Guina, had been concluded, and that Presidential announcement of the details will be made Jan. 1.

The political status of Senator Kyle, of South Dakota, has been practically settled this week. The Republican caucus left him out of its committee assignments, although it provided for Senator Peffer, and some of the Senators said that Mr. Kyle had asked to be taken care of by the Republican caucus. This Mr. Kyle denies. At any rate it was the Democratic caucus that gave him his committee places. In answer to a direct question of how he would vote on political questions Senator Kyle said: "Shall I vote with the Democrats? Well, I do not anticipate many situations here which will call for a straight party vote. I have not forgotten however, that my election was brought about by Democrats, and I want to honor those to whom honor is due."

Senator Quay's reported retirement from the Senate has a string tied to it. I am not a canidate for re-election to the Senate, nor do I expect to be when my term expires, but if the position is tendered me by the legislature of Pennsylvania I will accept it. Mr. Quay appears to have taken a lesson from Mr. Blaine.

War with Chili is again being persistently talked up by naval officers. These would-be heroes are asserting with much positiveness that if the government of Chili has not given a satisfactory answer to the demands of his Government by the time Congress comes together after the Christmas recess, Mr. Harrison will send a special message to Congress reciting the facts and recomending that war be declared in order to enforce our demands. The source from which much of this sort of talk emanates, raises the suspicion that the administration is "feeling the pulse" of the public on this subject.

Senator Hill, of New York, was given just as good committee assignment by his colleagues as if he had been here since the opening of the session. As he made no requests nor expressed any preference, it was presumed that he had no choice as to what committees he was put upon.

Mr. Harrison did recognize the Democratic party in his nominations for six of the new Circuit Court Judgeships sent to the senate this week, by giving it two of the judges. Following are the nominations: First district, judge W. L. Putnam, of Maine, who was once Democratic canidate for governor of that state, and who was appointed a member of the Canadian joint fisheries commission by Mr. Cleveland; second district, George M. Dallas, of Pennsylvania, who is an able lawyer and a Democrat; fourth district, Nathan Goff, of West Virginia, who was for a while Secretary of the Navy under Hays; sixth district, W. H. Taft of Ohio, who is Solicitor General of the Department of Justice; seventh district Judg W. A. Woods. of Indiana, who as judge of the U. S. District Court for the district of Indiana, earned a somewhat notorious reputation on account of his decission in the "blocks of five" case.

Warren Truit, of Oregon, has been nominated U. S. district Judge for Alaska.

Representative Mills, who has been quite ill, is somewhat better, but is still confined to his room.

Woman's Column.

For God and Home and Humanity.

EDITED BY MRS. E. A. STACY.

The following prepared by the committee at the World's W. C. T. U. recently held in Boston was presented by the chairman Lady Somerset, as a declaration of the principles of the National and World's W. C, T. U It is one that every union; state, county, and local can respond and endorse:

DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES.

We believe in the coming of His kingdom whose service is the highest liberty because His laws written in our members as well as in nature and in grace, "are perfect, converting the soul."

We believe in the gospel of the golden rule, and that each man's habits of life should be an example safe and beneficent for every other man. We therefore formulate, and for ourselves, adopt the following pledge, asking our brothers in a common danger and a common hope, to make common cause with us in working out the reasonable and helpful precepts unto the practice of every-day life.

PLEDGE

To confirm and enforce the rationale of this pledge, we declare our purpose to educate the young, form a better public sentiment, reform, so far as possible, by religious, ethical, and scientific means, the drinking classes; seek the transforming power of divine grace for ourselves and all for whom we work, that they and we may willfully transcend no law of pure and wholesome living, and finally we pledge ourselves to labor and pray that all these principles founded upon the Gospel of Christ may be worked out into the customs of society and the laws of the land.

To this end we plead with all good women throughout Christendom to join with us heart and hand, in the holy endeavor to protect and sanctify the home as that temple of the Holy Ghost which next to the human body itself, is dearest of all to our Creator, that womanhood and manhood, in equal purity, personal liberty and peace, may climb to those blest heights where "there shall be no more curse."

We ask all women, like minded with us in this sacred cause, to wear the white ribbon as the badge of our allegiance, to lift up their hearts with us to God at the noontide hour of prayer, to take as their motto, "For God, and Home and Humanity," and to unite with us in allegiance to the foregoing declarations of principles, and to the following summary of our plans and purposes embodied in this preamble to our constitution adopted in Faneuil Hall, Boston, U. S. A., November 11, 1891.

PREAMBLE.

In the love of God and humanity, we, representing the Christian women of the world, band ourselves together with the solemn conviction that our united faith and works will, with God's blessing, prove healthful in creating a strong public sentiment in favor of personal purity of life, including total abstmence from the use of all narcotic poisons, the protection of the home by outlawing of the traffic in alcoholic liquors, opium, tobacco, and impurity, the suppression by law of gambling and Sunday desecration, the enfranchisement of the women of all nations, and the establishment of courts of national and international arbitration which shall banish war from the world. CARDINAL MANNING, in urging the formation of Juvenile Temperance Societies, says. "If the children of today are trained up in temperance, happy will be the homes and parents of the next generation. For these and other reasons, too many to give now, I earnestly call on fathers and mothers to bring up their children without the temption, or even the taste of any intoxicating drink. Prevention is better than cure. Keep them from the taste, and you will guard them from the temptation. Give to your children the leave and liberty to refuse all intoxicating drink."—Young Crusader.

CORRESPONDENCE

MAPLE LAKE.

At the meeting of the Literary society, Saturday evening, Dec. 19th the following program was carried out excellently well.

Music, by the Band.
Recitation, Miss D. Foley.
Reading, Miss N. Welton.
Recitation, Miss C. Hansch.
Essay, Joseph Kevany.
Debate, Resolved that Liquor is more destructive to life than war.

The affirmative was argued by H. Jude and Dr. O'Connor. The negative by J. F. Collins and A. A. Jewett.

Both sides debated earnestly and vigorously. The judges decided in favor of the negative. SPECTATOR.

A POPULAR FAMILY.

JENNIE: "How is it, Kate, that you always seem to 'catch on' to the last new thing? Do what I may, you always seem to get ahead of me."

KATE: "I don't know: I certainly do not make any exertion in that direction."

JENNIE: "Well, during the last few months, for example, you have taken up painting, without any teacher; you came to the rescue when Miss Lalarge deserted her Delsarte class so suddenly, and certainly we are all improving in grace under your instruction; I heard you telling Tommy Eames last evening how his club made mistakes in playing baseball; in seem to be up on all the latest 'fads,' and how just what to do under all circumstances; ou entertain beautifully; and in the last month you have improved so in health, owing, you tell me, to your physical culture exercises. Where do you get all of your information from in this little out-of-the way place?—for you never go to the city."

KATE: "Why, Jennie, you will make me vain. I have only one source of information, but it is surprising how it meets all wants. I very seldom hear of anything new but what the next few days brings me full information on the subject. Magic? No! Magazine! And a great treasure it is to us all, for it really furnishes the reading for the whole household: father has given up his magazine that he has taken for years, as he says this one gives more and better information on the subjects of the day; and mother says that it is that that makes her such a famous housekeeper. In fact, we all agree that it is the only really FAMILY magazine published, as we have sent for samples of all of them, and find that one is all for men, another all for women, and another for children only, while this one suits every one of us; so we only need to take one instead of several, and that is where the economy comes in, for it is only $2.00 a year. Perhaps you think I am too lavish in my praise; but I will let you see copy, or, better still, send 10 cents to the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th street, New York, for a sample copy, and I shall always consider that I have done you a great favor; and may be you will be cutting it out, as you say we have the reputation of being the best informed family in town. If that be so, it is Demorest's Family Magazine that does it."

MDLLE. ELSIE ST. OMER has begun a journey around the world in the interest of the Geographical society of Paris. The journey is to last three years, and the traveler is to devote special attention to the lives and customs of women in the various countries which she visits.

SOME of the Jewish rabbis of New York refuse to perform the marriage ceremony after the sun has set; but Rabbi Morais says that their refusal is not sustained by any law of the Hebrew religion, and that many other rabbis, both in Europe and in the United States, are in agreement with him upon this question.

A YOUNG woman in Connecticut was deprived of the position of teacher of gymnastics in the state normal school solely on the ground that she was not good looking. Nothing daunted, she went to Ohio and submitted her nose to a surgical operation, with the result that she is not only very pretty, but is soon to wed a wealthy manufacturer.

LIEUT. MAXWELL, of the United States, says that the Dakota climate adds to one's stature. When ordered to that country he was over twenty-one years old and had reached the age when growth is supposed to stop, but during a residence there of over a year he grew three and one-half inches. Dakotans say the climate often has that effect.

ONE of the most singular looking creatures that ever walked the earth or "swam the waters under the earth" is the world-famous man-faced crab of Japan. Its body is hardly an inch in length, yet the head is fitted with a face which is the perfect counterpart of that of a Chinese cooly; a veritable missing link, with eyes, nose and mouth all clearly defined.

CHARLES F. CRISP, speaker of the national house of representatives, is the thirty-second man to hold that enviable position in public life. There have been fifty-one congresses, but only thirty-one speakers. Henry Clay was elected speaker six times, and Blaine, Colfax, Randall, Carlisle and Nathaniel Macon, of North Carolina, filled the office three times each.

JANUARY 17 is the date of the one hundred and fourteenth anniversary of Vermont's independence from Great Britain, and the Sons of Vermont in Chicago propose to celebrate the occasion in magnificent manner. Ex-Minister Phelps and Senator Proctor have been invited to speak, but even sweeter than their honeyed words will be a reproduction in maple sugar of Bennington monument. At the banquet everything will be served on dishes of Vermont marble.

DANIEL WEBSTER was an acknowledged leader in congress when he was 30 years of age; Gladstone was lord of the treasury at 24 and in parliament at 22; Palmerston was lord of the admirality at 23; Henry Clay, in spite of the constitution, was a United States senator at 29; Washington was a colonel in the army at 22; Napoleon commanded the army of Italy at 25, and William Pitt was prime minister of England at 24, and at 35 the greatest individual authority in Europe.

HER majesty, the queen of England, is supposed to have the largest collection extant of photographic portraits of notabilities of her time, from the portraits of kings, queens, emperors and empresses downward. They begin in the early dawn of the art of making sun pictures—in the days of those daguerreotypes on metallic surfaces, which generally required you to hold them sideways before you could get a view of their rather pale and feeble traits. Hence they embrace the whole history of the art, and are thoroughly representative of the progress of photography.

TO SUM up the cost of running this great government it may be said that the legislative establishment, by which is meant congress and all appertaining thereto, costs $3,500,000 a year. The executive establishment proper, which means the white house, costs $145,000 a year. The state department costs $2,000,000, the treasury department $143,000,000, the war department $49,000,000, the navy department $28,000,000, the interior department $167,000,000, department of agriculture $3,500,000, the department of justice $6,000,000, and the post office department $2,000,000 in excess of its receipts.

OUR fighting vessels are rapidly sliding down into the water. A day or two ago the 1,000-ton twin screw gunboat Machias was launched upon the Kennebec river at Bath, Me. Its main battery will be eight four-inch rapid-fire steel rifles, and the secondary battery five rapid-fire guns, a Gatling gun and a Hotchkiss revolving cannon. It can steam fourteen knots an hour and its schooner rig will enable it to spread 6,500 square feet of canvas. Though a small vessel and only intended for harbor and river patrol service it is a staunch and strong craft and a wrothy addition to the coming new navy.

A VACANT CHAIR.

The United States Senate Loses One of Its Most Noted Members—Sudden Death of Senator Plumb, of Kansas—A Victim of Apoplexy—Gossip Regarding His Successor—His Career.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Senator Preston B. Plumb, of Kansas, is dead. He was stricken with apoplexy at an early hour Sunday morning, and after lingering some hours in an unconscious condition died a few minutes before noon. The senator returned to this city late Saturday afternoon from a visit to his son in Philadelphia, having gone there on Thursday. His apartments are in the house of Mr. Jennings on Fourteenth street.

About 2 o'clock Sunday morning Mr. Jennings was aroused by a call from the senator. When he reached the apartment of Mr. Plumb the latter was disrobed and lying on the bed. In response to the inquiry of Mr. Jennings he said: "I have an excruciating headache." He was holding his head in his hands and swaying it from side to side. Mr. Jennings immediately called Surgeon General Wales. The doctor gave the patient a hypodermic injection of morphia. The senator in a few moments became quieter, and, the pain decreasing, he fell into a deep sleep, which continued for some hours.

Dr. Wales left about 6:30 o'clock, and a few minutes later Senator Plumb jumped up. Mr. Jennings sprang to his assistance. The senator had a violent vomiting spell and was then assisted back to his bed. He seemed to be in great agony, tossed his head from side to side on the pillow and exclaimed: "My God, my God, my head!" These were the last words he uttered, for in a few moments he again fell asleep, breathing heavily and laboriously. This sleep lasted until 11:25 o'clock, when his respiration became heavier, and death ensued at 11:49 o'clock.

There were present at his bedside when death occurred Dr. Wales, who had been called some time before, Mr. Jennings and Mr Flanagan, the senator's private secretary. After the vomiting spell the senator never addressed anyone, and his last words were those of pain.

The news of his death spread rapidly through the city, and was a great shock to the public. Indeed, it was hardly credited by his associates, being regarded as a rumor. The matter of breaking the sad news to Mrs. Plumb, who is in feeble health, was a delicate one, and was done through a telegram to Maj. Hood, president of the Emporia national bank at Emporia, Kan., where Mrs. Plumb now is.

Undertaker Wright arrived soon after 12 o'clock, and under the direction of the physician and the senator's friends the work of embalming was begun. About 2 o'clock a message was received from Mrs. Plumb requesting that the body be sent home as soon as possible. The sergeant-at-arms of the senate had been notified in the meantime, and when he arrived took charge of the dead senator's papers and effects.

TOPEKA, Kan., Dec. 21.—Senator Plumb's death created a profound sensation here and has been the sole topic of conversation among the politicians. The hotel lobbies have been filled and every possible contingency discussed. Gov. Humphrey left the city Saturday night but will return to day. Those who know the governor best say he will be slow in making an appointment. Under no circumstances will he call an extra session of the legislature, as it is overwhelmingly alliance.

Nearly a score of possibilities have been mentioned about the hotel lobbies. Those most frequently mentioned are: Ex-Gov. George T. Anthony, ex-Congressman E. N. Morrill and Chief Justice Albert H. Horton. Ex-Senator Ingalls' name is but little spoken of. Other names mentioned are: J. R. Burton, a young attorney of Abilene, who was a bitter opponent of Ingalis; ex-Congressman S. R. Peters, of Newton; George R. Peck, general solicitor of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Company; J. K. Hudson, editor of the Topeka Capital; and ex-Gov. Thomas A. Osborne Hayes, minister to Brazil. The legislature which will elect a successor to Gov. Humphrey's appointee convenes in January, 1893, and will be elected next fall. There will be no holdovers either in the lower house or senate.

[Senator Plumb was born in Delaware county, O., October 12, 1837, so that he was in his 54th year at the time of his death. He was not a college graduate, but left the common schools for the printer's case, and in pursuance of his vocation as a journeyman printer in 1856, in the bloody days of the history of the newly organized territory of Kansas, he walked into that territory. He plunged at once into the thick of the political strife which then was waging over the slavery question. He at once went to the front and soon became a member of the Leavenworth Constitutional congress of 1859. He was admitted to the bar in 1861, when the place of his adoption became a State of the union; served in the legislature in 1862, was chairman of the judiciary committee, and subsequently reported the supreme court. When the war broke out he entered the army as second lieutenant in the Eleventh Kansas infantry and served successively as captain, major and lieutenant-colonel of the regiment, and was commissioned a colonel of the regiment in August, 1862. After the war Mr. Plumb, returning to Kansas, was elected a member of the Kansas house of representatives, and in 1876 was chosen United States senator to succeed James M. Harvey, republican. He took his seat in 1877 and has represented his state as a senator ever since that time. His term of office would have expired March 3, 1895.]

DEATH BY DYNAMITE.

The Head of One Man Blown Off and the Heart of Another Blown Out.

GRACEVILLE, Minn., Dec. 21.—Ira Bell and Henry Gordon met death in a horrible manner 8 miles southest of this place Saturday afternoon. While preparing to lower a charge of dynamite into a well which they were boring the giant explosive was accidentally set off. Bell's head was blown entirely off and to a distance of 15 feet. Gordon was struck in the left side, the heart being blown entirely out of his body. Gordon's relatives live at Grand Rapids, Mich.

JUDGE HIGGINS NOT GUILTY.

The Slayer of Thomas B. Price Adjudged Innocent of the Crime.

SEDALIA, Mo., Dec. 21.—Judge Higgins has been acquitted of the charge of murder, though there was no attempt to show that he did not fatally shoot his friend, Thomas B. Price, in a quarrel that occurred on a railway train last spring. The men differed on a political argument and the dead man slapped Higgins, who discharged his revolver through his coat pocket, inflicting the fatal wound. The jury was out but a short time, and but one ballot was taken.

RIOT AT CINCINNATI.

Indignant Taxpayers Mob the County Treasurer's Office.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 19.—The scenes about the courthouse Friday morning reminded one of the riot of 1884. In the present case the mob consisted of property owners clamoring for an opportunity to pay their taxes before the penalty went in force. Owing to changes in county boards and the delay in assessing the values and correcting mistakes the tax duplicate, which should have been in the treasurer's hands by December, 1, did not reach him until last Wednesday evening. It was necessary to have the duplicate in order to know the amount of taxes due from each property owner. The law provides that if taxes are not paid by December 20 a penalty of 5 per cent. attaches.

The treasurer began taking taxes Thursday, but only a few were aware of the fact, the announcement being brief. The news spread and Friday morning by 7 o'clock the big hall in front of the treasurer's office was packed with men, women and children, and the crowd extended far out in the street. There were fully 2,000 persons clamoring for admittance, and the throng was constantly increasing.

When the doors were opened at 8 o'clock a frightful crush ensued. Women were crushed in the jam and clothing torn, while the air was filled with screams and curses. The treasurer's office, which is a large hall with a continuous counter and glass partitions around three sides, was soon packed to suffocation with the struggling mass of humanity. The clerks started to take money at their windows, but had to quickly give up the idea.

In the meantime the crowd was constantly increasing, and the pressure became so great that men and women began to faint. The excitement grew intense. Several of the glass windows above the counter were smashed, and the crashing added to the excitement until a perfect panic prevailed. Fainting women were passed through the broken windows and doctors summoned.

At one time there were four insensible women in the treasurer's private office and as many more out in the big hall. Mrs. Bertha Wrampelies, Mrs. Elizabeth Patterson, Mrs. Mary Fox and Miss Mary Gerrard were among those who fainted and in the confusion were trampled upon and severely bruised.

The safes had been opened and the money laid out at the desks preparatory for business. A rumor started that a raid was contemplated on the treasury by thieves. The money was hastily thrown into the vaults, while guards with drawn revolvers were placed at the door.

A riot call had been sent to the Central station and a detachment of special police under Lieut. Gill had been hurried to the scene. The entire force of watchmen and other employes about the courthouse were called in for the protection of the county funds. Men, apparently to avoid being trampled to death, had climbed upon the partition, but good grounds existed for the belief that they were awaiting an opportunity to plunder. The police arrived in two patrol wagons and charged with their clubs through the crowd. After effecting an entrance they drove out a sufficient number to allow the closing of the big doors. Order was then restored among the remainder, but it was necessary to use some of them roughly.

While the panic was at its highest the county solicitors and commissioners met and resolved to extend the time from December 20 to January 10. Speeches were made to the crowd, and the announcement of the extension did much to restore order. It was 9 o'clock p. m. before the last of the crowd left the treasurer's office.

GEN. BOOTH'S WORK.

Its Progress and What It Has Cost During Twelve Months.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—Gen. Booth publishes an account of what he has done the first twelve months for the redemption of the masses. The total expenditure on capital account is given as £90,000, but a liability of £10,000 in addition has been incurred on the strength of sums promised but not yet paid in. The farm colony has cost £34,000 and the working expenses of the food depots and shelters have been £23,140. The receipts have been £26,570. There have been 2,500,000 meals and 347,209 nights' lodgings given to the homeless. Slum work has cost £2,807, less £570 donated by sympathetic "slummers." The workshops show a deficit of £1,140 in spite of the fact that some of the branches show a profit. For instance, the sale of matches has netted £475, knitting work £100, and book binding £400.

SLAIN IN A TUNNEL.

Two Lives Lost as the Result of a Mistake on a Railway in Pennsylvania.

CATAWISSA, Pa., Dec. 19.—A terrible collision between two fast freight trains occurred in a tunnel on the Philadelphia & Reading railway early Friday morning. The company is keeping the matter quiet, and details are unobtainable. Engineer Fisher and Fireman Smith are reported killed, and several others are said to have been fatally injured. About 3 o'clock a. m. a west-bound freight received orders to pass an east-bound train at the first switch, a mile from the Big Mountain tunnel. A mistake in the orders caused the two trains to meet in the tunnel, when both were running at a high rate of speed.

THREE BISHOPS APPOINTED.

Incumbents for the Vacant American Dioceses Named by the Pope.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—A cable dispatch from the Rome correspondent of the Catholic News announces the appointment of Very Rev. Ignatius F. Horstman, D. D., of the cathedral of Philadelphia, as bishop of Cleveland, O.; Rev. Sebastian Messiner, D. D., professor of Canon law in the Catholic university at Washington, as bishop of Green Bay, Wis., and Very Rev. James Schweback, vicar-general of La Crosse, Wis., promoted to that vacant see.

Three Men Killed by an Explosion in a Colorado Mine.

LEADVILLE, Col., Dec. 19.—A terrible accident occurred Friday morning at Busk tunnel, near Leadville. Three men were killed, two seriously injured and a number of others hurt. The accident was caused by the explosion of a missed hole which had been charged a few days ago and was thought to have exploded, as several other charges were fired at the same time. The failure of this one to explode was noticed at the time, but upon being struck with a drill it exploded with terrible force.

CONGRESS URGED TO ACT.

The Waterways Convention at Detroit Requests the Government to Construct a Deep Route from Chicago to the Atlantic.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 19.—When the deep-waterways convention reassembled Friday the committee on resolutions reported a lengthy memorial to the senate and house of representatives, setting forth the history of lake navigation and dilating upon the importance of the 20-foot channel from Buffalo to Duluth and Chicago. The memorial abounds in interesting statistics, all of which go to show the advantage to be derived from the proposed action, and earnestly appeals to congress for such legislation as will provide for the immediate beginning of work at each of the required localities, so as to insure the completion of a 20-foot channel along the whole line by the time the works now in progress on the St. Mary's river are completed.

The resolutions accompanying the memorials and which were adopted, urge congress to authorize immediate commencement and speedy completion of an unobstructed channel not less than 20 feet in depth and sufficient width through the lakes and connecting waters between Chicago, Duluth, Superior and Buffalo, and that the secretary of war be authorized to make contracts for the entire work, and a sufficient sum of money be appropriated therefor, as every consideration of prosperity in time of peace and protection in time of war demands the construction of a waterway of sufficient capacity to allow the free passage of vessels drawing 20 feet of water through our own territory from the great lakes to the Atlantic ocean. The convention strongly favors the improvement of the Hudson river to a navigable depth of 20 feet from Coxsackie to Troy. It respectfully urges upon congress the necessity for the most liberal appropriations for the establishment and maintenance of all needed lighthouses, fog signals, buoys and beacons throughout the entire chain of lakes, to the end that added security may be given to life and property.

A committee of legislation was appointed to place the matter before congress.

There is a general feeling that the best results have been accomplished that were feasible at this time and the Lake Ontario people are satisfied in the prospect of having the merit of the Niagara ship canal further looked into by experts. The convention will do good. The sentiment represented here has been broadened and actual progress has been made. A permanent organization has been effected and when the 21-foot channel has been provided for larger work will undoubtedly be cut out. While the matter has not developed as far as the sanguine could wish, good seed has been planted which will bear future fruit.

FRIGHTFUL TRAGEDY.

A Brooklyn Man, in a Fit of Insanity, Shoots Three Persons, and Then Kills Himself—One of His Victims Is Dead.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Michael Harvey, 34 years old, a boarder at No. 183 Van Dyke street, South Brooklyn, became suddenly insane Friday afternoon and shot John Connerton, Sam Dickerson and Mamie Dickerson. Catherine Duffy jumped from a second-story window to escape him and broke her ankle. Connerton and Sam Dickerson were dangerously injured and were taken to the hospital, but Connerton died in the ambulance shortly after leaving Van Dyke street. Mamie Dickerson was shot in the arm by the desperate maniac.

After shooting the others Harvey placed the muzzle of the revolver in his mouth and pulled the trigger. The top of his head was virtually blown off. Only two days ago Harvey was discharged from the Flatbush insane asylum as cured and immediately went to bord with Mrs. Duffy at No. 183 Van Dyke street.

Shortly after noon Friday while at dinner the crazy fit came suddenly on Harvey again. He jumped from the table, ran to the bureau, and snatched from an open drawer a 32-calibre British bull-dog revolver. With this the mad man began firing into the crowd at the table.

The first shot struck John Connerton in the head, and in less than five minutes he was dead. The second bullet laid Samuel Dickerson low. Young Dickerson and Mary Dickerson had come on a visit to Mrs. Duffy. Dickerson was shot through the right arm, but made for the window, and before the maniac could fire again jumped to the street. Miss Dickerson's turn came next. The crazy assassin's bullet tore a hole in her right hand, and she ran out in the hallway crying murder. Mrs. Duffy, who was in the next room, hearing the shouts and the cries and suspecting the truth, jumped out of the window at once, sustaining painful injuries.

While she lay groaning with pain, vainly trying to crawl out of the reach of the murderer, the fourth and last shot rang out. It rang the death-knell of the maniac. Being alone at the scene of carnage, he had put the pistol in his mouth and blown out his own brains.

Policemen McCabe and Murphy ran in, and the street began to fill with wildly excited and yelling men and women. Ambulances were summoned and came at a dead gallop. The three injured were at once removed to the hospital. The mad murderer and his first victim were dead.

SLAIN IN COLD BLOOD.

A Husband and Wife Murdered by a Cowardly Gang in Louisiana.

SHREVEPORT, La., Dec. 19.—An old man named Jack Smith quarreled with Wright Poland at Buckhorne, Blenville Parish, recently. To get revenge Smith with his three sons and four other men rode to Poland's house in the night, summoned Poland and his wife to the door and shot them dead. Mrs. Poland was about to become a mother. Smith, one of his sons, and three other men have been arrested.

Robbed of Valuable Gems.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 19.—William Wilson's jewelry store window was smashed with a coupling pin Friday night and a tray containing $3,000 worth of diamonds was stolen. The robbers fastened the door on the outside before making the attempt.

Eighteen Years in Prison.

HAVANA, Dec. 19.—The late secretary of the treasury, Otsiza, has been sentenced to eighteen years in prison, three months and one day in the chain gang and to pay a fine of $2,500 and to return the $100,000 stolen from the treasury.

LOCATING A CANAL.

The following was adopted by the Chamber of Commerce of the City of St. Paul the 2d of December, 1891:

WHEREAS, The matter of building a canal to connect Lake Superior with the Mississippi river at the Twin Cities has been agitated from time to time for several years. Competent engineers assert that the practicability of such a work depends solely upon whether the ground admits of sufficient storage of water at the point of highest elevation. No survey with respect to this has ever been made and no one can now say whether such a work would be practicable or not. Considering the immense benefit such a canal would confer upon the public in case it should prove feasible; considering, too, the enterprise which other countries exhibit as to canals—for example the great ship canal, twenty-six feet in depth being built to the city of Manchester, England, and the ship canal which Germany is building to unite the North and Baltic seas—it does not seem unreasonable that the United States should at least cause a survey to be made to ascertain whether or not the proposed canal would be practicable. Therefore

RESOLVED, That the United States Senators from Minnesota and the Representative in Congress from this district are hereby requested to use their efforts to obtain an appropriation of $40,000, or so much as may be necessary, for a thorough examination and survey to determine what, if any, practicable line exists for a canal (with capacity for barges and vessels that could navigate the lakes), to unite Lake Superior with the Mississippi river at the Twin Cities.

RESOLVED, That the Secretary communicate a copy of the foregoing to the different commercial organizations in this State and that such organizations are hereby requested to promote its object.

This simply calls for a survey to determine the feasibility of a canal. If found practicable, it would prove a national work, uniting as it would the two greatest navigable routes in our country. The probable route that will be surveyed would include Stillwater, Minn., Shell Lake and other towns in Wisconsin.

SAID one day a year ago,
I wonder if I truly kept
A list of days when life burnt low,

Of days I smiled, and days I wept—
If good or bad would highest mount,
When I made up the year's account.

I took a ledger, fair and fine,
And now, I said, when days are glad,
I'll write with bright red ink the line,
And write with black when they are bad,
So that they'll stand before my sight
As clear apart as day and night.

I will not heed the changing skies,
Nor if it shine, nor if it rain;
But if there comes some sweet surprise
Of friendship, love or honest gain,
Why, then, it shall be understood
That day is written down as good.

And if to anyone I love
A blessing meets them on the way,
That will a double pleasure prove,
So it shall be a happy day;
And if some day I've cause to dread
Pass harmless by, I'll write it red.

When hands and brain stand labor's test,
And I can do the thing I would,
Those days when I am at my best,
Shall all be traced as very good;
And in "red letter," too, I'll write
Those rare, strong hours, when right is might.

When first I meet in some grand book
A noble soul that touches mine;
And with his vision I can look
Through some "Gate Beautiful" of time,
That day such happiness will shed
That golden-lined will seem the red.

And when pure, holy thoughts have power
To touch my heart and dim my eyes,
And I, in some diviner hour,
Can hold sweet converse with the skies,
Ah! then my soul may safely write:
"This day hath been most good and bright."

What do I see on looking back?
A red-lined book before me lies,
With here and there a thread of black
That like a passing shadow flies,
A shadow, it must be confessed,
That often rose in my own breast.

And I have found 'tis good to note
The blessing that is mine each day;
For happiness is vainly sought
In some dim future far away.

Just try my ledger for a year,
Then look with grateful wonder back;
And you will find—there is no fear—
The red days far exceed the black.
—Amelia E. Barr, in Treasure-Trove.

"OH, WHAT a lonesome day it will be!" sighed Lilian, looking wistfully out across the snow-bright prairie.

"Not unless you make it so," respounded her mother, cheerily.

"Make it so," rejoined Lilian. "How can I make it anything else? It is always lonesome here, and to-day will be the worst of all. Only think of the fun the girls will be having in dear old Deerfield, while I am off out here in this—"

She stopped short, fearing she might say too much. What she had been about to say was: "This horrid, desolate Kansas ranch."

"Perhaps the boys can take you for a drive, dear; and you know we're invited to Uncle Abner's for the evening."

"A drive!" replied Lilian, scornfully. "I hate driving, all alone along these endless roads. Nothing but snow, snow, until I am nearly blind."

"You have your books, Lilian; and your father likes perfect lessons."

"Yes, I can have books any day. But think of the girls at home—what they are having. They are getting their tables ready this very minute. They will darken the parlors and have gas light, and pretty dresses and lots of callers."

Here Lilian broke down and sobbed. Her mother came to her side and stroked her hair.

"Be brave, daughter," she whispered. "I know it is a great change. But I have often told you we must bear in mind why we left the east, and why we are here. Father would not have been alive but for this change of climate and open-air life. You know he is getting well, and is so happy in that. We ought not to mind anything if he can be well again."

Lilian felt ashamed, and tried to dry her tears. Yet she was unwilling to quite give up her discontent.

"If only something would happen!" she said. Then, desperately: "I wish

"OH, ENTERTAIN YOUR CALLERS!"

there would be a cyclone or a blizzard, or a prairie fire! I wish the Indians would make a raid!"

"We don't have cyclones and prairie fires in winter," her mother said, calmly.

Just then Lilian heard a great stamping of feet and gay voices outside the kitchen threshold.

Her four brothers were coming in from doing their morning chores. As they entered they let in a great rush of cold air. Jack spied Lilian through the half-open sitting-room door.

"Hello, Lil!" he called.

She did not answer.

"Lil in the dumps again?" he asked his mother.

"She is a little homesick this morning."

"Why doesn't she get out as we do; and stir up her spirits?" said Harry. "It's nothing but moping makes her homesick."

"This is a thousand times better than poky old Deerfield," asserted Ben. "There was nothing to do there but slide down hill on a hand-sled, and here we have the ponies and the cattle, and—"

"But you are a boy, Ben," interposed Mrs. Wyman, "and can do a great variety of things. Lilian isn't strong enough for hard riding, and, besides she misses her friends."

"Let her make new ones," piped up Jamie. "There's lots of nice people all over these prairies."

"She will find them in time," said Mrs. Wyman. "But you must cheer her all you can meanwhile."

Lilian overheard herself discussed and began to sob afresh.

Jack went into the sitting-room and playfully pulled her ears, and tried to laugh her out of her gloom.

"Come, now, Lil. What is it you want—a gallop, a sleigh ride?"

Lilian could confess anything to Jack.

She told him all that had been in her thoughts—how the Deerfield girls were getting ready for callers, what pretty dresses they would have, and what gay, good times.

"Do you want callers? Is that what you want, Lilian?"

"Oh, you stupid fellow! I want anything except this awful experience. I told mother I even wished the Indians would drop down on us."

"Why, Lilian, if you saw even one Indian coming down the road, you'd run and hide under the bed."

"No, indeed, I wouldn't. I'd make my very best courtesy and wish him a happy New Year. I would spread the table with the best rosebud china, make coffee for him, and—"

"Y-e-s—but before you'd half done, he would whip out his tomahawk, grasp you by the hair—this way—and w-h-o-o-p! off would come your scalp. Then he'd tuck your braids into his belt, and away he'd go to the reservation to hang them up on the ridge-pole of his wigwam!"

"All the same, I wish he'd come."

Jack laughed.

"Say, Ben," he called, "Sis wants visitors so badly, she even wishes a Comanche would call."

"I do," persisted Lilian. "I wish a whole tribe would come!"

Harry stormed into the sitting-room, in search of his heavy leather gloves.

"Where are you going, Harry?" asked Lilian, eagerly.

"Out on business," he answered. "Are you ready, Jack?"

"Are you all going off?" cried Lilian, in alarm, lest she should lose even the doubtful pleasure of her brothers' company.

"We're going on the ponies, to look up some stray cattle for Uncle Abner."

"But mamma said you would take me for a drive."

"Can't this morning—too busy!"

"We're all to go this evening, you know," comforted Jamie.

"This evening! What am I to do alone all day?"

A flood of tears again threatened.

"Oh, entertain your callers!" said Harry, with scant sympathy.

Lilian watched the four boys on their ponies go down the poplar-lined lane to the highway, and then, too desperate for reading or study, or even helping her mother, she flung herself on a sofa and hid her face.

The day was a dazzling one. The rolling prairie on every side looked like a white ocean, with great, sweeping billows of snow as far as eye could see.

The widely separated farmhouses, with their windbreaks of Lombardy poplars and interspersing clusters of evergreens, looked like ships on this endless, shining, cold sea.

One needed a happy heart and busy hands not to be affected by the vastness and isolation.

Neither of these did Lilian have, and it took her nearly the entire forenoon to get through her bitter struggle with self.

When she finally roused herself she found her mother had put the rooms to rights, and besides her own work, had done all the little tasks Lilian had been used to assume.

This made her remorseful. She got her books and began to study. But somehow the brilliant sunshine kept drawing her to the window to look out.

The sky was of an intense blue that was almost purple. The blue-jays were flitting and calling. A few stray crows hovered over a distant corn-stubble—these were all the signs of life she saw.

She stood tapping a tune on the window panes. Presently she noticed, on the far crest of one of the snow billows, some moving black figures.

They were mere specks against the intense blue beyond, but they fixed her attention. Almost as soon as she saw them, however, they disappeared in an intervening valley.

"That is on the Hardin road," she said, trying to fix the direction. "It can't be the boys, for Uncle Abner's road is to the south."

Almost immediately her curiosity was stimulated again by the reappearance of the figures on the next rise. She could not distinguish numbers, but she felt certain it was horsemen.

Again they vanished from the crest into the lower lying space between the land billows. And so she watched them until they were near enough for her to see it was indeed horsemen.

"Mother," she called, "come here! There's somebody coming along the Hardin road."

Her mother came.

"Who can it be?"

"One, two, three, four, five, six, seven," counted Lillian. "There are seven of them! Perhaps they will turn at the Climbing Hill corners. They can't be coming here."

"Get the glass," said Mrs. Wyman. "See if we can make them out before they strike the valley."

Lilian ran after the glass. She adjusted it and raised it to her eyes. She had only one glimpse, however, before the descending riders were again hidden by an intervening ridge.

"They ride so wildly, mother!" she said, in a kind of breathless wonder.

"They must be skirting that hill along the creek," said Mrs. Wyman. "We'll see in a minute if they come up from the Corners."

It seemed a long time before they came again in sight. Lilian had just said: "They've turned on the Climbing Hill road," when they burst into full view on a not distant summit and halted.

Lilian could distinctly see them pointing, as if discussing the way to take. Then, of one accord, they put spurs to their ponies and came wildly dashing down the slope.

Lilian turned deadly pale.

"Mother!" she gasped, "they are Indians!"

Mrs. Wyman grew pale also. During her short life in the west she had seen only one or two isolated Indians, and those always at railway stations—dull, commonplace creatures enough, and with nothing suggestive of the warrior about them.

"Where is your father?" she asked, with something of a tremor in her voice.

"Probably over at the sheep sheds," faltered Lilian. "He's always there near noon. I wish—I wish the boys were here."

"They'll be coming directly. Look again, now, Lilian. They are approaching very fast."

Indeed, the Indians were coming on fast. They were now in plain sight on the long incline and were riding at a full gallop, gesticulating and pressing forward with what looked to Lilian like savage fierceness.

"They will go by, no doubt," said Mrs. Wyman, her native courage re-asserting itself. "They are probably out in search of lost ponies or—"

"Look, mother! See! They are not going by. They have halted and are pointing at the house. See! They are turning in at the lane. Oh, mother!"

"Never mind, dear. They want to inquire, perhaps"—

But while she was speaking the Indians had wheeled into the gateway and swept up with a headlong pace to the very door.

They swung themselves from their saddles, tethered their ponies to the hitching rails and came quickly up on the porch.

Mrs. Wyman had thrown off her momentary fears. She stepped to the door and opened it. Lilian trembled in every muscle.

The leader of the party was a huge fellow, much taller than his followers. He was more fantastic in his dress, too, and had streaks of paint on his cheeks. The rest had turkey feathers stuck into the bands of their slouch hats, and all had blankets over their shoulders.

The chief uttered a surly "How!" and made a motion of his hand to his mouth that he would like something to eat.

Mrs. Wyman smiled cordially and said: "Come in."

He obeyed directly, the rest stalking after him in perfect silence. They went at once through the sitting-room to the kitchen stove and held out their hands to warm.

This done, they squatted on the floor with various low guttural sounds to each other, as if exchanging views. They apparently approved of the comfort, for a stolid silence ensued.

Lilian was absolutely spellbound with terror and could not move. Mrs. Wyman went to the pantry to prepare them food.

The chief was restless. He kept his eyes roving over everything. Finally he began to move about. He went into the sitting room. He spied the china closet door and opened it.

THE CHIEF GAVE A WHOOP OF DELIGHT.

"Ugh," he said, as if in delight at the pretty dishes. He waved his hand at Lilian and pointed to the rosebud china, making an imperative gesture, as if to say: "We want to eat off these."

Lilian, anxious to seem to want to please these terrible visitors, nodded and smiled a ghastly smile. The very fact that she must do something seemed to relieve the spell of cold horror that had settled on her.

She took a fresh cloth from a drawer, and spread it deftly on the table. As she straightened the corners daintily, to see if they were quite even, the Indian grumbled his approval.

She took out the dishes and set seven places. She recalled, with a great thump of her heart, what Jack had said about scalping, but as yet there had been no warlike demonstrations.

She began to be more at ease. But what was that uneasy chief doing? He was prying into everything. Lilian distinctly saw him put her scissors into his pocket. But she dared not protest.

While thus distracted, she heard her mother in the kitchen burst into a merry laugh. She ran hastily out to see what had come over her.

Mrs. Wyman was in the pantry, holding a corner of her apron over her mouth, as if to smother her amusement.

There sat the six Indians on the floor, with hats drawn surlily over their faces, and with blankets shrugged about their shoulders.

"Mother, what is it?" was Lilian's whispered inquiry.

Mrs. Wyman pointed silently at the ludicrous row of savages, and covered her lips again with her apron.

Lilian could not help laughing, too.

"New Year's callers, after all," she said, to herself.

Mrs. Wyman had made the circle of waiting braves move somewhat away from the stove, so that she could cook ham and warm potatoes. Lilian returned to her table-setting. She placed a spoon-holder on the cloth, full of bright teaspoons.

The inquisitive chief gave a genuine whoop of delight at sight of them. He sprang to her side and openly began putting them in his pocket.

This was too much. Lilian flew at him and tried to snatch them away from him. He scowled fiercely, and jabbered at her in excited gutturals.

At once she heard a great scuffling of feet in the kitchen. The other Indians, attracted by the sound, were coming to his rescue.

In they filed in formidable line. "He shan't have them," cried Lilian, struggling to prevent the last installment going into his pocket. "He has my thimble and scissors already. Here," to the others, "your chief is stealing. But he can't have my spoons. You"—catching hold of the nearest one—"Jack, Ben, Harry" (for as soon as she got one good look at the faces of her callers she knew them) "Jack, Ben, Harry, hold him. He's just a common thief."

A roar of laughter followed.

"Good for you, Lilian," cried Jack, flinging off his hat and blanket, and leaping on the offender's shoulders to pinion his arms. "He shan't have your spoons, Lilian. But allow me to present to you our cousin, Harold Wyman, just arrived from Wyoming. We found him at Uncle Abner's, come to spend New Year's with us."

Lilian, who had captured part of the spoons, blushed and dropped them on the floor.

"It's real mean of you to scare me so," she stammered. "Mother, did you know it was the boys?"

"Not until Jamie winked at me from the floor, and then it was all so ridiculously clear I could not help laughing aloud. I saw you were well over your first fright, so I thought I'd let the boys carry out their fun."

"My, but I'm hot!" ejaculated Ben. "Sis has good grit, hasn't she, Harold?"

"Yes," cried Jack, "and she kept her promise about the rosebud china. Let's have dinner. All we lack now is the coffee, Lilian."

When the new cousin and Uncle Abner's boys and the four teasing brothers were seated about the table, Lilian asked:

"Where did you get your toggery, Jack?"

"Oh, Uncle Abner's garret is full of all sorts of Indian traps. This morning when you were crying for callers—especially Indians—the thought struck us it would be lots of fun to give you your wish. We found Cousin Harold at Uncle Abner's, and he helped us out. He's been on a ranch for years. We knew you wouldn't recognize him. The rest of us kept in the background."

"If you hadn't been so scared, Lilian, you would have known the ponies," said Jamie.

When they had nearly finished dinner, Lilian said:

"I'll write it all to the Deerfield girls. I don't believe they've had half as jolly a time as we have. Their calls will be just the poky polite ones. But mine are genuine wild west."—Mrs. Clara Doty Bates, in Golden Days.

THE OLD AND THE NEW YEARS.

Somewhat Poetical, and Yet Done Up in Prosy Form.

As priest benignant at the altar stands with girdled robe and marks the novice pass, the Old Year smiling spreads his kindly hands to bless the New Year, and lets fall his glass. Thus do the children of immortal time, like waves of ocean surging 'gainst the shore, come and recede, while sounds the mystic chime of hours melodious forever more. Let not the heart bemoan its seeming loss; the years we leave are but the gold we've gained; the bark that wears the sight-caressing moss enfolds the oak that centuries have stained. Right well it is the New Year have its cheer, for it is still Hope's herald, and the soul takes courage from it and bids disappear the doubts and fears that hide the wished-for goal.

No necromancy works a subtler spell, no promise of the sky gives sweeter bliss, than infant lips that, cooing, strive to tell that birth to man is Heaven's forgiving kiss. When flamed the star in Bethlehem of old the sad world saw a surety of peace; and when from tomb its stone the angels rolled the ancient creeds in new faith found surcease. But as the things that men have lived and thought still mingle with the things they think and do, the precious jewels that the old year brought the heart must hold as sacred as the new. The roses plucked when summer's breezes played have perished, but have left their fragrance sweet to soothe the weary who have sinful strayed and bear the dust of sorrow on their feet. Hushed are some lips that when the spring was young were swift with kindness and with whispered jest; dumb are some voices that the birds outsung, and feet that never tired with running rest.

The New Year comes triumphant in its pride, and rings defiance to the world of care; but let bold youth not wholly set aside the graybeard friend who served us passing fair. Though lightly still we speed the parting friend with heartier will to greet the coming guest, we sometimes learn before the evening's end they quit us earliest who loved us best. So, drink the glass of gladness in its round with dear remembrance of the joys that were; and let our laughter take melodious sound from sweet regrets that memory may stir.

The Old Year dies not, but within the halls where fancy holds her fetes finds constant place, and sits with kindred, where the sunlight falls to clothe with beauty his slow aging face. There when we will we may its kindly smile invoke to light the gloom of some lone hour, and at his knees in revery beguile our souls from grim despair's despotic power. Nay, bard who sang so sweetly of his death, the Old Year dies not, nor can ever die; and though we breathe, with joy the New Year's breath, full oft we'll seek the Old Year with a sigh; full oft we'll seek the Old Year with a sigh.—Inter Ocean.

OLD YEAR AND YOUNG YEAR.

I.

Said the year that was old:
"I am cold, I am cold,
And my breath hurries fast
On the wild winter blast
Of this thankless December;
Ah, who will remember
As I, shivering, go,
The warmth and the glow
That arose like a flame
When I came, when I came?
For I brought in my hands,
From Utopian lands,
Golden gifts, and the schemes
That were fairer than dreams.
Ah, never a king
Of a twelvemonth, will bring
Such splendor of treasure
Without stint or measure,
As I brought on that day,
Triumphant and gay.
But, alas, and alas,
Who will think as I pass,
I was once gay and bold?"
Said the year that was old.

II.

Said the year that was young—
And his light laughter rung—
"Come, bid me good cheer,
For I bring with me here
Such gifts as the earth
Never saw till my birth;
All the largess of life,
Right royally rife
With the plans and the schemes
Of the world's highest dreams.
Then—hope's chalice filled up
To the brim of the cup,
Let us drink to the past,
The poor pitiful past,"
Sang the year that was young,
While his light laughter rung.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—An Australian millionaire named Manat, who went from London to live at the antipodes some years ago, died recently at his mansion in Victoria. He was the man who once sent an order to England for a ton of books.

—Miss Braddon, the novelist, has one great hobby—the collection of old china. She has a series of magnificent cabinets of this at her house in Richmond, near London, and one room is known as the plate-room, because it is hung round with china plates.

—On the anniversary of Lord Nelson's death every October his flagship is elaborately decorated with evergreens, and the white ensign is freshly displayed as it was all the night long prior to the battle of Trafalgar, when he ordered it kept in view on every vessel of his fleet, to indicate that he would engage the enemy the instant he encountered him.

—Erastus Wiman has gone to the Muskoka territory, in Canada, about three hundred miles north of Toronto, where he has hunted nearly every season for twenty-five years. There the Dwight Wiman Sporting club owns two thousand acres, including many lakes. It has a log club house, raises its own potato crop and makes its own maple sirup, and the fame of its cuisine is widespread.

—The medal presented to Prof. Virchow at the recent jubilee is unique. It measures 118 millimeters in diameter, weighs five pounds, and is made from eighteen-carat gold. The front of the medal bears a bust representation of the professor in relief. The back is adorned with an heraldic design, the allegorical figures of medicine and pathology, microscopes, books, skulls and an Egyptian mummy.

—The total number of distinct words in the New Testament, excluding proper names and their derivatives, is 4,829. A few comparisons may be interesting: The vocabulary of the Old Testament is larger. Gesnius' 'Lexicon,' omitting proper names and obsolete roots, contains 5,810 words, of which 643 are marked 'Chald.' The 'Iliad' and the 'Odyssey' together contain 9,000 words. Shakespeare uses 15,000 and Milton 9,000.—Presbyterian and Reformed Review.

—A unique thing in books is promised to a chosen few. It is a book containing twenty-three poems by the late Francis S. Saltus, Jr., the erratic young genius who died a year or two ago. His father will have twenty-five copies published by a Parisian house at a cost of $15,000, and will distribute them among the personal friends of his son and himself. The poems could not be brought out in this country. Each poem is written in a different language. The young poet, whose brother is Edgar Saltus, the novelist, lies in Sleepy Hollow cemetery at Tarrytown, N. Y., where he is to have a $12,000 monument.

—Tsui Kno Yin, the present representative of the Chinese government at Washington, has scholarly tastes, and is especially interested in astronomy. In order to gain time for study he is accustomed to retire at seven and rise at three in the morning, to enjoy the perusal of his favorite authors while the streets are quiet and his attention not likely to be diverted by outside sounds. Mrs. Yin, a tiny creature with diminutive feet, does not speak English, and on state occasions is quite thrown in the shade by her brilliant husband. She spends the greater part of her time in retirement, and is an adept in the art of intricate Chinese embroidery.

"German Syrup"

A Farmer at Edom, Texas, Says:

"We are six in family. We live in a place where we are subject to violent Colds and Lung Troubles. I have used German Syrup for six years successfully for Sore Throat, Cough, Cold, Hoarseness, Pains in the Chest and Lungs, and spitting-up of Blood. I have tried many different kinds of cough Syrups in my time, but let me say to anyone wanting such a medicine—German Syrup is the best. That has been my experience. If you use it once, you will go back to it whenever you need it. It gives total relief and is a quick cure. My advice to everyone suffering with Lung Troubles is—Try it. You will soon be convinced. In all the families where your German Syrup is used we have no trouble with the Lungs at all. It is the medicine for this country." John Franklin Jones.

Many a life has been lost because of the taste of cod-liver oil.

If Scott's Emulsion did nothing more than take that taste away, it would save the lives of some at least of those that put off too long the means of recovery.

It does more. It is half-digested already. It slips through the stomach as if by stealth. It goes to make strength when cod-liver oil would be a burden.

—Frank Japs has obtained the agency for L. L. May & Co., of St. Paul. Persons wishing seeds, flowers or shrubbery for planting in the spring should give him a chance to place their orders.

--Louis Knappe's woodpile took fire and about two thirds of it was consumed, on Tuesday. The pile was out in the woods and the conflaration is supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

—"Our Jim," of the, Eagle Force, is said to have desecrated the Sabbath this week by taking soundings of the river below the mill. We understand the repost to be about up to the chin with his skates on.

—Buenell's Vaudeville company advertised to be at the City Hall last Monday night did not come as it rained quite hard. The Eagle advertised them as being no Indians. If they had been perhaps they would not haye feared the wetting.

—Albert Johnson exhibited to us recently a neat specimen of his handiwork, a box about 8x10x7 inches, nicely inlaid in 7 kinds of wood and requiring about a hundred pieces in its construction. In this kind of work Albert takes great pride, and bids fair to become a successful rival of the Orientals.

—Thomas Shaw, of Morris, put in an appearance on Monday morning about as suddenly and unexpectedly as would Chris Kinkle. He will visit friends until after Christmas, and expects to return to Delano to live in the spring as his brother-in-law Mr. Young, with whom he has lived for some time has sold his farm.

—Ephraim Ball found his fine two year old colt dead in the barn last Monday morning. He tied him aronnd the neck with a new rope the night before, as he was in the habit of breaking the halter. Eph dont know if he died from the rope or the colic but says he will not tie another colt with a rope around the neck.

--On Wednesday morning, at dawn of day Mrs. Nellie Anderson who has been at Mrs. Chance's house for several weeks at the expense of the village, died. She was given a decent burial. Quite a number of citizens attended the funeral services conducted by Rev. Davies. Although dying among strangers, in a strange land her death touched a tender chord in the heats of those who knew her.

—Charles Epple Sen. and Charles Epple Jr., with the aid of Alfred Johnson were busily engaged on Monday in making fence around the garden in front of the new brick residence. The ground is only frozen three or four inches and they had little trouble in making the holes for the posts, boring them most of the way as in summer. Few fences in this country have been constructed so near Christmas.

--The school exhibition on Friday evening last was a grand success, the programme which was quite lengthy being carried out nicely to the amusement and enjoyment of the school children, their parents and friends with whom the hall was crowded. The teachers are deserving much cedit for the time and trouble expended in this way. The Delano Cornet Band with the aid of Prof. Coolen discoursed some of their sweet music.

—One of our citizens and his wife took a trip last Friday over the roads in a two wheeled vehicle drawn by one horse, and led a second horse behind, to Dassel. The spouse suggested to his better half that as the roads were quite rough perhaps she had better take the train, but no she persisted in clinging to him and the "go cart." After arriving at their destination, however, she was perfectly willing that "he" should come home alone while she patronized Jim Hills corporation.

—"I seen a ghost!" was the exclamationion of a young gentleman on Wednesday evening as he came hurriedly into the presence of our "devil" who was busily at work in the office. Our "devil" advised him to investigate further and "see what it was." Finally the two sallied forth in the dusk of the evening and found the "ghost" to be a sheet spread over the post of the bed standing near an open window of a room in which a woman had recently died. After examining into the matter the boys became satisfied that most ghost stories could be explained if people would not get too frightened.

—Persons not receiving their GAZETTE will be supplied if they will call at the GAZETTE office at any time.

Persons visiting their old homes in the East this winter should take along printed matter descriptive of their new homes in the Northwest. Take copies of this paper with you and ask agents of the Great Northern Railway for a supply of publications. 8-5t,

County Cullings.

If the Republicans succeed in having the big Convention and naming a candidate for United States Senator C. K. Davis will probably be the choice.

Judge Hooker is reported to have pronounced Coroner Cassel's testimony, in the Mazue trial as the best medical expert testimony he ever heard.

Rumblings of the Rockford Post Office imbroglio are continually being heard in this neighborhood, and many of the patrons of that office are not satisfied with the change. "Rolf" seems to have had a warm place in the hearts of his constituency.

The Woodland Alliance club have selected John McDonald and William Guthrie as delegates to the State Alliance club Convention to be held in Minneapolis, on January 5th, 6th and 7th. Eminent speakers from abroad are expected to be in attendance at the meeting and a good time had.

"A Tariff on Coffee is a Tax, Unquestionably."--Senator C. K. Davis at Buffalo.

If tariff on coffee is a tax, tariff on sugar is a tax, tariff on tin is a tax, tariff on knives and pearl buttons and tariff on anything that has to be paid is tax. If you smuggle goods the tariff may be escaped, but that does not destroy the truth that TARIFF IS A TAX.

—Charley Cunningham, a former Franklin town boy has been heard from. He is working at gas-fitting, for an Omaha firm, at present on a job in Kansas City, where he thinks people a bit rough, as someone went through his valise and clothes, in his room, the next day after pay-day and obtained for their trouble 95 cents in cash which he happened to have left there. He learned the lesson just as well as if it had been that many dollars. He expects to go to Chicago soon to engage in fitting pipes for the World's Fair buildings, his boss having obtained a contract for some of that work.

Briefly Told.

Half of the fresh water on the earth is found within a radius of 1,000 miles of St. Paul and Minneapolis.

The Great Northern in a run of 1,074 miles from St. Paul to Great Falls, Mont., has no grade of over .06 per cent, or 31.6 feet per mile, giving it the longest stretch of low grade track in the world.

Montana leades all the States in the production of precious metals.

Great Falls, Mont., has the largest water power in this country. The Missouri river tumbles 512 feet over a series of falls in a course of eight miles.

The best hunting and fishing resorts in the North West are to be found along the lines of the Great Northern Railway.

The Great Northern is one of the very few railways in the United States owning and operating its own entire equipment.

The Great Northern, with four tracks, is the main thoroughfare between St. Paul and Minneapolis; has the only double track to Lake Minnetonka.

The new extension of the Great Northern to Park Rapids, Minn., 209 miles from St. Paul, comes within about 25 miles of Lake Itaska, the source of the Mississippi.

Minnesota has more water surface and the largest body of standing white pine timber of any State in the Uuion.

Apples for Export.

The merits of the American apple are doubtless exceedingly appreciated abroad, since the buisness of exporting apples from this country to Europe, though of comparatively receut growth, is yearly becoming more important. Up to November 7, steamers from American ports had carried to the United Kingdom about 555,000 barrels of apples since the season began. Glasgow took 148,099 barrels, and London 49,778; but the most went to Liverpool. The freight to Liverpool is about 75 cents a barrel, which, with the low prices prevailing here, makes the business a profitable one to exporters. The first week of November, New-York shipped 17,140 barrels, Boston 26,842 barrels, and Montreal 41,000 barrels, a total of 18,982 barrels, against 18,250 barrels for the same week last year. The varieties sent abroad are pippins, kings, greenings, and snows.—Demorests Magazine.

Killed by Dynamite.

GRACEVILLE, Minn., Dec. 21.—By the explosion of a dynamite bomb Ira Bell and G. Gordon were instantly killed, while engaged in digging a well in the town of Malta, 10 miles south of here. No one witnessed the accident and nothing was suspected until evening, when one of the farm hands went over to the place and found the mangled remains scattered over the ground. The former was married, his family living in Graceville, and the latter was a single man from Canada.—Minneapolis Journal.

A Splendid Trip.

A trip to Montana over the Great Northern is one of the most attractive in the West. From St. Paul the tourist takes the four-track route to Minneapolis. Crossing the Mississippi on a million dollar stone arch bridge, in full view of the Falls of St. Anthony and the largest flouring mills in the world, goes thence through the Park Region of Minnesota, with its myriad lakes, to the wheat valley of the Red River, to Devils Lake,—North Dakota's inland sea,—through the Mouse River country and the milk River Valley, passing Fort Assiniboine, the largest and finest military fort in the West, historic Benton, Great Falls City and the mighty cataracts of the Missouri river, then skirting the Rocky Mountains, with their sublime scenery, to Helena, the rich capital of Montana, thence over the continental backbone to Butte, the largest mining camp on earth.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory.
